Brazil May End Negotiations In Kidnappings

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Some Brazilian officials are pressing their government to declare that it will no longer negotiate with political terrorists who kidnap foreign diplomats.

The officials believe that such a declaration, especially if supported by other Latin American countries, might prevent further kidnappings and at least exonerate the government if any of those abducted were killed.

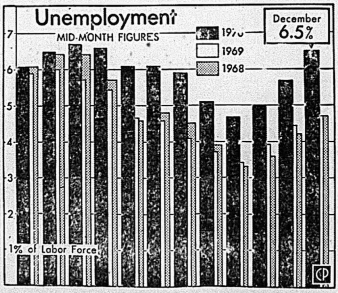
Russian Airliner Crashes

ZURICH (Reuter) — An Ilyushin-18 airliner crashed near the airport in this Swiss city today and first reports said there were only three survivors.

Zurich airport said the Ilyushin-18 turboprop of Bulgarian Airlines crashed near the runway while approaching in thick fog on a flight from Paris.

An airport official said the alarm was given when the plane was overdue and the wreckage was found near the runway.

The plane came down in the area of the village of Bachenbuelach just north of Zurich.



The number of unemployed people in Canada rose sharply in December, with 538,000 out of work. The November figure was 476,000. The federal manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said the December figure represented 6.5 per cent of the labor force. (CP Newsmap)

Toronto Observatory Plans Chile Telescope

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian place in the planned Las Campanas Observatory in Chile has been preserved by the David Dunlap Observatory with the announcement that it will locate a 24-inch reflecting telescope there.

The decision by the University of Toronto astronomers is expected to direct new attention by the federal government to a year-old recommendation of the Science Council of Canada that this country invest up to $10,000,000 - possibly more—in the Chilean astronomical venture. A 200-inch telescope is proposed.

Dr Donald MacRae, observatory director and chairman of the University of Toronto astronomy department, said in an interview the project will give the Canadians experience that will be useful if the federal cabinet approves the Science Council recommendation for wider Canadian participation in the Chilean observatory.

The telescope will be the Toronto group's first chance to make sky studies in the southern hemisphere.

Muffler Fell Off Car Ahead, Almost Resulting in Accident

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"While driving at 70 mph on the highway recently, the muffler on the car ahead of me fell off and I had no choice but to run over it. The steering went wild and the car almost rolled over before I finally managed to stop on the shoulder.

"The offending driver made no attempt to stop and disappeared down a side road. The car was towed to a garage where examination revealed a badly bent steering rod and a leaking radiator. The repair bill was $74 and the car was tied up for two days.

"The number of mufflers and other bits of the exhaust system we see strewn along the roadways make it obvious that many people drive their cars when they are ready to disintegrate.

The apathetic attitudes of people who neglect to maintain their vehicles is deplorable. My experience could have ended in tragedy." — Mr. B. D., Hamilton, Ont.

The number of car components we see on the side of the road attests to the need of compulsory inspection of all motor vehicles. While heading out on a fishing trip with my son last summer, we counted 47 parts in just 50 miles, most of which had rusted away and dropped from the exhaust system.

Apart from the close call experienced by this reader, a neglected exhaust system poses other dangers. Heading the list is carbon monoxide. When there is a defect in the exhaust system, this deadly gas enters the passenger section of a vehicle. Each year, the number of motorists asphyxiated by this deadly, invisible and odorless gas is alarming.

Many otherwise unaccountable fatalities, where the driver apparently fell asleep at the wheel, can be attributed to a faulty exhaust system. The danger increases in the fall and winter when windows are often closed.

On our modern, low - slung cars the exhaust system is only inches away from the pavement. As well as being exposed to snow, water and salt, it is attacked internally be condensation and the corrosive action of acids generated in the combustion chambers.

The exhaust system should be examined at least twice a year by a technician who will take the time to do it thoroughly. Points frequently overlooked are the exhaust manifold gaskets, cracked, warped or loose manifolds, broken bolts and defective head gaskets. Volumes of fumes can escape from a loose heat riser valve shaft and seep through to the passenger area.

The engine floats on rubber motor mounts, and to some degree the exhaust system is designed to move with the engine. However, excessive wear in the rubber mounts allows the exhaust system to strike the body, which results in anything from annoying rattles to destruction of the system.

Older vehicles should be checked for rust holes in the steel floor including the trunk through which fumes could enter. Missing or worn rubber seals in the firewall should be replaced.

Because the exhaust system develops extremely high temperatures, there must be air space between every part of the system and the underside of the vehicle to which it is attached. A group of supporting hangers are provided for this purpose. These hangers are quite flexible, and if damaged by a road obstruction, the exhaust system can be locked hard against the steel floor and the excessive heat generated can ignite the floor mats. To guard against this danger, keep away from mounds of snow or other obstructions when manoeuvering in close quarters.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Club Could Help Hypochondriacs

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I'm a hypochondriac. I admit it. When I get symptoms I'm scared of dying. My doctor tells me I'm all right, and that there is no sense coming back to the office. My family laughs at me. Isn't there anyone to turn to? — Mrs. O.

COMMENT: A few years ago I had the urge to write a book about hypochondriacs — and for them. I may still accept the challenge if many readers think it might be helpful. I recall that my working title was: How To Be A Happy Hypochondriac.

In observing many thousands of patients like yourself, Mrs. O., I've concluded that most hypochondriacs are unhappy. They are sick and tired of complaining daily to their family members, friends and business associates.

At last they become conscience-stricken and completely frustrated in constantly enumerating their complaints and discomforts (real or imagined). Although they may not have been struck down by chronic illness, they continue to suffer in their own distinctive ways.

Their fears are real: their anxiety unyielding. In many instances, their doctors become impatient as they listen to recurring complaints from apparently healthy people. They say they'd rather expend their limited time in treating really sick patients. They say they have "no time to fool with" people who have nothing wrong and still live scared.

But what are the hundreds of hypochondriacs to do? Shall they try to get through the day just by taking pills and potions? And bending the ears to find sympathetic understandig?

Here is an idea, Mrs. O. Perhaps getting other hypochondriacs to listen will help. "Ventilation" of problems, as psychiatrists say, is important. How about a few hypochondriacs getting together to form a local group.

Why not call it the AHHA! club (Always Happy Hypochondriacs Anoymous). It might soon burgeon ito a national organization. Nothing is so helpful to a worried hypochondriac as finding a willing ear. The AHHA! may be the answer.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have an 18-year-old daughter who is bow-legged and extremely self-conscious. She will wear only pants even though she would love to wear the cute little mini-skirts. I have been told this can be corrected by an operation. Is it painful? Expensive? Would exercises help? — Mrs. P.

COMMENT: I doubt that exercises will help. Expensive? I suppose so. Painful? Any operation is — temporarily. Why not do this: talk it over with your family doctor. If he's in doubt, have him call in an experienced orthopedist (bone specialist). They will decide whether or not operation should be considered in solving your daughter's problem. It is something you should not rush into impulsively because of desperation.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 18, have one child and would like to have two or three more. I have developed a very anoying problem of being unable to reach orgasm during intercourse. I've been told that this leads to sterility. Is this true? — Mrs. W.

COMMENT: As far as I know there are no scientific studies which indicate that lack of orgasm eventually produces sterility.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Children Train A Judge

I was having lunch with some lawyers, and they mentioned a man who was a rotten judge. "Naturally," I said. "He's never had any children. It's almost a miracle if a childless man turns out to be a good judge."

There is absolutely no finer training for the bench than arbitrating a passel of kids over the years. All the subliminal senses become developed — you can hear the tone of a lie, you can smell deception, you can almost feel the guilt of the prime offender.

Then, too, the snarls you have to untangle are worthy of a Solomon at his most sublime. For instance, two of the younger children are playing Stratego. One of them, in a fit of pique, suddenly quits. The other declares himself the victor. They argue furiously about this, and come to father for a decision.

Where does justice reside in this matter? What is the equity in the game? Consult Blackstone, if you will, or any other augush authority, and they are dumb. The parental judge is thrown back on his own intellectual and moral resources. There are no precedents in this court. No appeal, no reversal. And the adversaries have an infallible nose for "what is fair." You can't get away with legal equivocation.

Who hit whom first? Who provoked it? And what was done to provoke the provocation? How do you most equitably divide two guest bedrooms among four children and their friends? Who gets the better record-player? Why should a 15-year-old boy have to take his 10-year-old brother to a basketball game when he wants to go with his own friends?

These thorny questions arise every day, questions of sex, of age, of privilege, of responsibility, of family needs balanced against individual liberties. It is a whole microcosm of civil society on a minor scale, but intensified through knowledge that there is no Higher Court than father.

All this calls for the ultimate in tact and understanding, but at the same time, forcefulness and swift judgment. Any wavering, any indecision, is seized upon as weakness and used as an entering-wedge for further pleas. Children are natural - born lawyers, and they go for the moot like a jaguar for the throat. Once lose your reputation for "fairness" and you are a dead duck, paternally speaking.

A man who has never walked through this fire does not deserve to be, and should not be eligible to be, a judge. What ever he has learned at law is but frippery compared with the guile, the perjury, the subornation, the subtle logomachy of juvenile altercations. I will not say a jurist must be married; but surely he must be a father before a judge.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 19

Your birthday today: Adjustment, growing out of your increasing wisdom, may be inconvenient during this coming year of essentially normal progress. Relationships are to be cultivated, not just taken for granted. Bringing things into balance, aesthetic as well as practical, is your main mission for the next year and a half. Today's natives are industrious planners, often coming to positions of influence over vast numbers of other people.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): If somebody needs encouragement, give it: it counters some of the other influences you receive today. Make the best of things as they come. Home conditions change a bit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Say "no" where you must, but otherwise avoid critical comment. Successful arrangements, particularly between you and the opposite sex are now feasible and will continue easier in the future.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): The simpler the better, for everything personal or routine. Your impulse is to buy larger quantities than necessary. This evening read awhile, relax early.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your patience with others is much appreciated. Conferences with friends brings insight into your tensions. Fretting over delays or changes only tires you out.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): People take your time seeking advice they're not going to follow anyhow; others seek to advise you, at some length. Maintenance of tools, vehicles prevents major inconveniences later on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Doing things in the traditional sequence may actually be the hard way — think, be willing to experiment. Adhere to your budget; friends' ideas involve more money than you planned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Take stock of your relationships. Your persuasive powers are less active, and someone you expect fails to arrive. Have an alternate course ready.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Be skeptical of "inside information". Flaws in enterprises, hindrances in your career may not be anybody's conscious plan. Take it all as natural turbulence

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Detailed planning now, particularly of social matters, can get you off on a tangent Pursue routines; keep activity at a steady, moderate pace. Plan a quiet evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are sensitive in unexpected ways; seek understanding of the doings of others. Get a second estimate on jobs you wish done. Work is quite serious and may interfere with social life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Postpone official proceedings. Your theories lead you into intriguing, but expansive paths. Technical advice is confused by a misunderstanding as to what is wanted.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Carry your present responsibilities before taking on more. Most agreements call for further consideration. Patience with younger associates is a must for the moment.

Inquest Opens Today Into Airliner Crash

BRAMPTON (CP) — Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner, was to launch today an inquest into the July 5 crash of an Air Canada jetliner that killed all 109 persons aboard—without waiting for the report of a federal inquiry into the same disaster.

The inquest is expected to cover much the same ground as the inquiry, conducted by Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

Mr. Justice Gibson, who said last week he expected to complete his report by the end of the month, heard eight days of testimony from 17 expert witnesses six weeks ago.

Dr. Cotnam, who sat silently listening to evidence through much of the inquiry, has been critical of the federal government and its investigators for the length of time it took them to get their inquiry started.

Air Canada's California Galaxy Flight 621, bound for Los Angeles from Montreal with a short stop at Toronto International Airport, crashed three minutes after losing an engine during a landing attempt.

Mr Justice Gibson heard testimony from a number of witnesses that premature deployment of the elongated DC-8 jetliner's ground spoiler braking system caused the aircraft to plummet 60 feet to the surface of runway 32 as it came in.

The ground spoilers are 10 steel panels on the surfaces of both wings that rise automatically after the jet has touched down, breaking the flow of air over the wings and forcing the aircraft down to slow and steady it.

Heath May Sell Arms Only to Replace Old

Pact's Meaning Long at Issue

SINGAPORE (AP) — An accord involving four letters lies in back of the explosive controversy threatening to split Britain from most of her 30 partners in the Commonwealth.

The accord, known as the Simonstown Agreement, is comprised of an exchange of four letters between the defence ministers of Britain and South Africa in June, 1955.

Broadly, this correspondence dealt with:

—The need for a common strategic approach to African defence problems at a time when most Commonwealth countries north of the Zambesi still were governed by Britain.

—The safety of the Cape of Good Hope sealanes.

—The transfer of the Simonstown naval base from the British to the South Africans.

—The manner in which former British employees in the base area were to be treated.

For years the British and South Africans, and within Britain the Labor party and the Conservatives, have been arguing about the interpretation of the agreement.

South Africa accused the former Labor government of Harold Wilson of breaking the spirit of the accord—which Wilson denied.

Prime Minister Heath's Conservative government has argued its intended sale of arms is a legal obligation under the treaty—which Wilson also has disputed.

The only definite reference to the supply of war material in the four letters concerned the supply by Britain of 20 warships—which were delivered by 1963.

Britain has continued to provide spares for these vessels—and for other new eapons supplied until the Labor government imposed an arms ban in 1964.

One letter spelled out the conditions under which the Simonstown base was to be transferred from Britain to South Africa, on the understanding the British could always move back in if war or some other emergency required.

The final letter stipulated South Africa would practise no racial discrimination within the base area, meaning equal pay and social treatment for non-white as well as white employees. But this condition never has been fully observed by the South Africans.

Many Drugs Don't Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress was told Monday that tests sponsored by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration showed nearly 15 per cent of some 16,000 drugs checked were ineffective. Another 35 per cent were found only "possibly effective."

Dr. Charles C. Edwards said tests conducted by the National Academy of Science showed only 19.1 per cent of the drugs tested to be effective without qualification.

"The lack of substantial evidence submitted by drug-makers based on well-controlled investigations by experienced investigators was conspicuous," Edwards said.

May Postpone Any Decision

SINGAPORE (CP) — British Prime Minister Heath is reported to have undertaken to consider one proposal and to have made another today on the controversial arms-to-South Africa issue at the Commonwealth conference.

Reports said that at a seven-hour leaders-only private meeting Heath:

—Produced a compromise formula under which Britain would "replace and maintain" equipment for the South African navy. This would be a come-down from the original proposal to sell the navy new equipment to help guard the sea lanes against possible Soviet naval harassment.

—Agreed to consider demands for an indefinite delay in reaching a decision on the whole controversial issue pending more prolonged and relaxed Commonwealth consultations on it.

This is somewhat in line with what Prime Minister Trudeau has been suggesting publicly.

Trudeau, meanwhile, was asked when he emerged from the conference if there was a deadlock.

"No," he replied. "The talks are going well."

The private meeting, in which even top-flight officials of delegations to the 31-country conference are excluded, will continue Wednesday.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith of Canada was the only non-leader permitted in the executive session and some delegates even refused to tell their own officials what went on.

It is known, for instance, that Trudeau spoke and that he asked many questions. He did not tell his aides what he said.

It was considered doubtful that Heath's reported compromise plan would satisfy African and Asian critics, some of whom have threatened to leave the Commonwealth if the arms sales go through.

But at least one report said the general mood of the leaders was one of optimism, although there appeared little change on either side of fundamental positions.

"Perhaps what might be decided is a means of disagreeing and saving face," one well-placed source suggested.

Highly-placed informants in a position to know reported Heath undertook to ponder the suggestion of an indefinite delay and to convey his response to Wednesday's meeting.

The South African navy is using old frigates and seaward defence boats supplied by Britain before South Africa left the Commonwealth in 1961.

Britain also has delivered a number of Buccaneer naval planes which were ordered before the previous British Labor government imposed an arms ban in 1964, in response to a United Nations resolution.

The ships and planes were bought as part of the 1955 Simonstown naval agreements under which Britain uses the South African base. They now can be considered obsolescent.

Heath was understood to have told the meeting—the first formal debate on the arms dispute—that his Conservative government had a legal obligation under the 1955 agreement to provide naval equipment for joint defence of the sea lanes around the Cape of Good Hope to the Indian Ocean.

The British argument, based on the replace-and-maintain for-

Quebec Man Jailed In Contempt Cases

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Boisjoly a 21-year-old teacher, was sentenced Monday to 15 months in jail for contempt of court and had his jury trial on charges arising from Quebec's political kidnappings postponed until the spring assizes.

The native of St. Boniface, Man., interrupted proceedings in Court of Queen's Bench when he criticized the judicial system and said presiding Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet was an idiot, a "rabid federalist" and "a bully in robes."

"The people of Quebec are tired of guys of your kind," he said.

After warning him, Mr. Justice Ouimet cited Boisjoly five times for contempt and imposed consecutive sentences of three months on each count.

Boisjoly's first outburst came when the judge rejected his request to be represented by lawyer Robert Lemieux, whose own applications for bail and writs of habeas corpus have been rejected since his arrest Oct. 16 and later arraignment on various charges in connection with the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Boisjoly also reacted when he was not permitted to question prospective jurors about their political opinions.

After Boisjoly's request to be represented by lawyer Lemieux was refused, he told the judge:

"You're afraid of him. You and Croquette and Turner, you're all afraid of him."

Mr. Justice Ouimet asked:

"Can you give any reason why you should not be held in contempt?"

"I think you should be the one held in contempt," the accused retorted.

He was found in contempt a second time when he said he would have to endure "injustices" in the court.

"You do not have the right to tell a judge he is unjust," said Mr. Justice Ouimet.

At another point, after being refused permission to question jurors about their politics, Boisjoly retorted: "This is a political trial and I want to ask political questions. People can't talk about independence in Quebec any more. We're prevented by idiots."

The judge asked: "Are you referring to me as an idiot?"

"Yes, yes, you, I mean you."

Sarnia Firm Disputes U.S. Jurisdiction

WASHINGTON (CP) — Dow Chemical of Canada has told the U.S. Supreme Court that mercury pollution of Lake Erie cannot be resolved by the court but only through international diplomacy.

The Canadian firm at Sarnia, Ont., which is being sued by the state of Ohio, said Monday an injunction banning it from polluting the lake and its tributaries could not be enforced short of war.

The high court will rule on an unspecified date whether it will hear the case, which is being backed by the U.S. government.

Ohio asked the court to issue the injunction barring Dow of Canada from further polluting Lake Erie and also to award damages to the state.

Ian Outerbridge, one of two Toronto lawyers granted special permission to testify before the high court, told the nine justices there was no way an injunction against his client, Dow of Canada, could be enforced "short of war."

He argued that Canadian regulations are not being violated by the discharge, and if the Canadian government deemed the operation necessary to the economy, there was nothing the U.S. could do about it without war.

Justice Hugo L. Black asked: "What would happen if it were a situation in which people were being killed?"

Outerbridge said he was sure diplomatic action would be taken before that stage was reached.

Vincent McEwan, the second Canadian lawyer, backed Outerbridge's argument and said Ontario courts would be "the perfect vehicle" for such an action by the state.

PC Leadership Candidates to Answer Queries on 10 Issues

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Candidates contesting the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party will go before convention delegates to answer questions on specific policies.

The move, announced by the convention's policy committee, gives the party's rank-and-file supporters an opportunity to pin down leadership candidates on "main issues" in provincial government.

The announcement today was hailed as a "most promising development" by Dr. Richard Potter.

The Quinte MPP on his own initiative, recently toured Ontario calling on leadership candidates to talk plainly on issues and warning delegates not to commit their support until the contestants identified their policies.

"This reinforces my thinking that delegates — to vote intelligently and responsibly — should not make up their minds prematurely."

He said the move was one of the most important taken so far to raise convention standards to "a degree compatible with the importance of the decision that has to be made."

The discussions between candidates and delegates is set for the opening day of the Feb. 10-12 convention in Toronto.

They will take the form of policy sessions organized in several groups in the Royal York Hotel.

The committee has outlined 10 policy areas it believes "are most vital" in provincial affairs.

Candidates may choose two key issues for discussion. They will be allowed time for opening statements and then must answer questions from a selected panel and the floor.

Candidates have until Jan. 29 to announce their choice of issues, which, as listed by the committee, are: education costs; economic nationalism; rural needs; northern Ontario; pollution; social justice; consumer protection; recreation and leisure; regional government; urban transportation.

In a letter to presidents of constituency organizations committee chairman Prof. Ronald Atkey has asked that each riding select two delegates to represent local views at the sessions. The discussions will be open to the public, but only policy delegates will be permitted to question the candidates.

Meantime, Dr. Potter was in Western Ontario today — answering a request from local Conservatives made during his recent tour.

Last night he spoke to riding delegates in St. Thomas, and this morning spoke on an open-line radio show in that city.

This afternoon he was scheduled to speak on television in London.

Dr. Potter will be back in Belleville Wednesday night for a "birthday party" being organized for him at Centennial Secondary School. Thursday he will appear on the CBC's Weekday public affairs program.

'Self-inflicted Means' Caused Woman's Death

PICTON (Staff) — A coroner's jury last night ruled that Jean Marie Salisbury, 51, RR 7, Belleville, discovered dead in a field near her home on November 20, 1970, died from "self - inflicted means".

No recommendations were offered during the inquest, conducted by county coroner Dr. C. R. Richmond. Medical reports included in testimony given at the inquest stated that Mrs. Salisbury died from generalized body burns.

A gasoline can was found near her body which was discovered shortly after 8 a.m. November 20, by Richard Chatterson, a 13 - year - old student sent by a member of his family to investigate smoke in a field near the Chatterson home.

The youth testified that he ran back to his house where a carpenter, Hobart Adams was making outdoor repairs, and told him, "Somebody is on fire."

Mr. Adams told the jury that he put out the fire and was joined by a neighbor who remained with the body until police were notified.

The gas can found a short distance from Mrs. Salisbury's body was identified as one owned by her son James Salisbury, who resided next door to his parents. The can had been kept in a shed and was apparently taken by Mrs. Salisbury.

Norman Salisbury, husband of the dead woman, said that upon getting up he noticed a silence in the house and investigating found the kitchen door leading outside partially open. "I thought there was something strange because on Wednesday all she could talk about was suicide. She seemed to be in a depressed state for about five weeks. She said that she believed she had cancer and didn't believe her doctor."

He began a search for his wife immediately and spoke with a member of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police shortly after a woman's body was found burned near his home. The dead woman's husband testified that she had attempted suicide with pills on two occasions and had slashed her wrists while on a vacation trip in Arizona. The couple had returned from a holiday in Tehran, only two days before Mrs. Salisbury's death.

The five man jury included jury foreman Thomas Walker, Picton; Keith Ward, Rednersville; H. W. Adams, Rossmore; Harry Way, RR7, Belleville and Frank O'Brien, RR7, Belleville.

Smokers Poor Cancer Risk

TRENTON (Staff) — Dr. T. G. Watts, surgeon and medical advisor to the Trenton Cancer Society, told a Rotary Club audience here last night that a smoker has 30 times the chance of contracting cancer of a non-smoker.

He recalled one experiment during his post - graduate studies in which tars from cigarettes were smeared on the soft skin of suckling mice. "In six weeks they had skin cancer," he said.

The doctor explained that healthy cells in the human lung live 2.8 days and are then reproduced. He said "smoking shortens the life of these cells, increases their rate of turnover and increases the chances of mutations or defects.

"When one stops smoking, the process begins to reverse and cells start growing normally again," Dr. Watts added.

It is nicotine that is related to certain other disorders. "Nicotine causes the arteries to tighten up and may be related to hardening of the arteries and heart disease. It cuts off the circulation — that is why smokers notice the cold more," he said.

Smoking aggravates ulcer conditions, Dr. Watts asserted. "It causes the stomach to secrete more acid that intensifies an ulcer."

Dr. Watts participated in cancer research at Queen's University and McGill University and did post - graduate work at Royal Edward Hospital, Montreal, a major cancer treatment centre.

Canadian National Railways announced Monday that several changes would be made in schedules of trains between Toronto and Montreal.

These changes will affect the services of the Rapido, Turbo, and Bonaventure, all of which pass through Belleville.

Under the new schedules, the morning Turbo will leave both cities at 10:40 EST daily except Sunday, while afternoon service will leave at 5:05 daily except Saturday.

The Rapido's departure each day from Toronto and Montreal will remain at 9:20 a.m. while afternoon departures from each city will be 4 p.m.

The Lakeshore will depart Toronto and Montreal each morning at 9:30 a.m. and the afternoon Bonaventure at 5:10 daily.

The overnight Cavalier will leave the two cities daily at 11:45 p.m.

A spokesman from the Canadian National Railways suggested that the changes are marginal and that service would see no serious change. What it boils down to is that you might take the train 20 minutes later and still arrive at your destination only nine minutes late.

Changes were made so that the CN could see increased sales on the faster trains. Also it was thought that the faster trains needed a broader running time. At the moment three trains make the trip between Montreal and Toronto in a 20 minute time slot. The changing of schedule will relieve some of that pressure.

Ag Rep Starts on Job

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County's newly arrived agricultural representative, Larry Matheson yesterday observed that it is his job to work with county farmers assisting them in any way possible in the promotion of agriculture.

Formerly of Essex County, Mr. Matheson, 27, graduated from the Ontario Agriculture College, Guelph, in 1965. He contrasted Prince Edward with Essex County yesterday noting that there is "a lot more cash cropping" in Essex where the commercial farm population is about four times as large as in this county.

He explained that Prince Edward's commercial farm population, based on figures in the 1966 census is 765. To qualify as a commercial farmer, the individual must grow $2,500 worth of produce in one year.

Crops in Prince Edward are similar to those in Essex County with one marked difference. A large greenhouse industry permits annual growth of "good greenhouse tomatoes and cucumbers." The outdoor growing season for tomatoes in Essex averages three months each year. Roadside marketing is described by Mr. Matheson as "very popular" in Essex.

Since his arrival in Prince Edward the new agricultural representative admits to being "snowed under". Prince Edward County winters, in his opinion, seem to offer much more snow than those in Essex County.

Impressive Rites For OPP Constable

NAPANEE — A flotilla of more than 90 police cars proceeded the funeral procession to the graveside ceremony for OPP Constable Jan Lutgendorff Saturday afternoon.

Representing police departments from Belleville Napanee Trenton, Cobourg, Picton, Kingston, Sharbot Lake, Peterborough, Cornwall and Ottawa were more than 200 policemen.

Constable Lutgendorff was killed in a train-car accident last Tuesday.

A 7-year veteran of the force, he joined the OPP in May of 1963, transferring to the Napanee detachment from Sharbot Lake on June 15 of last year.

Born and educated in Holland, he moved to the Stirling area upon arrival in Canada.

He is survived by his wife, the former Luberta (Betty) DeJong, daughters Yolande Amy and Angela Betty. His father and a brother reside in the Netherlands.

Funeral service was conducted by Rev. Ronald Smeaton of Seeleys Bay United Church at Grace United Church on Bridge Street at 1.30 p.m. Saturday.

A portion of the sermon was read in Dutch.

An honorary guard including Assistant Commissioner A. Bird of Toronto, Inspector R. L. Bender and Supt. D. E. Wellesley from Belleville marched from the Napanee police station to Grace United Church.

Following the service, the procession of police cars accompanied the funeral cortege to the Stirling Cemetery for interment.

A memorial service for Constable Lutgendorff was held on Friday night by the Sharbot Lake Masonic Lodge.

Funeral arrangements were through the Tierney Funeral Home of Napanee.

Bearers were Cpl. Wallis Martin and Constables John Peoples, E. A. Sherwin and G A. Crugar of Napanee; G. W. Mix of Sharbot Lake, and Sidney Cain from the Glencoe detachment.

IN MEMORIAM

KILFEDDER — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather Joseph Kilfedder who passed away January 19th, 1970.

Gone from us but leaving memories,
Death can never take away,
Memories that will always linger,
While upon this earth we stay.

—Sadly missed by daughter Florence and son-in-law Gerald and grandsons Steven, Kevin and Joseph.

KELFEDDER — In loving memory of our dear brother Joseph Henry, who passed away January 19th, 1970.

Beautiful memories are treasured ever,
Of happy days when we were all together.

—Lovingly remembered by sisters and brothers.

ANDERSON — In loving memory of Earl Anderson who passed away January 19, 1969.

Two tired eyes are sleeping,
Two willing hands are still,
For one who suffered far too much,
Is resting in God's will,
You never said goodbye to us,
Perhaps it's just as well,
We never could have said goodbye,
To one we loved so well.
In our home you are remembered,
Sweet memories cling to your name,
Those who loved you in life dearly,
Still love you in death th same.

—Sadly missed but lovingly remembered by Ila, Bob, Linda Anne

HURST — In loving memory of my dear sister Agnes Hurst who passed away January 19, 1960.

You are not forgotten sister,
Nor ever will you be,
As long as life and memory last,
We will remember thee.

—Lovingly remembered by sister Theresa and brother-in-law Al.

POST — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Frank Post, who passed away January 19th, 1964.

Your presence is ever near us,
Your love remains with us yet,
You were the kind of father,
Your loved ones would never forget.

—Ever remembered by son Vernon, daughter-in-law Laura and grandchildren

POST — In loving memory of my dear husband Frank Post who passed away January 19th, 1964.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true.
There's not a day dear husband,
We do not think of you.

—Sadly missed by wife Evelyn.

Belleville Red Cross Branch Told of Importance of Work

The Red Cross probably is unrivalled as an organizer of massive international mercy operations.

Yet, such a major role, in the long run, owes much to the more routine — often anonymous — accomplishments of local, hometown groups Belleville Red Cross Society was reminded at its annual meeting last night.

It is from its network of such small organizations that the Red Cross draws its strength, said Albert Batten, executive director of the Red Cross Toronto Central Branch and a man with much field experience in international relief missions.

"It's most important that every branch of the Red Cross be as strong as possible for its strength is in the branches," said Mr. Batten. "The benefits are reaped by people in need regardless of race, color, religion or nationality."

Mr. Batten — whose most recent mission was relief organizing during civil strife in Amman, Jordan last October — said the work done by local Red Cross branches like Belleville may sometimes seem "insignificant" to its members.

"But they (local societies) play a major part in our operations throughout the world."

The society's annual report for 1970, circulated at last night's meeting, gave a precise outline of what services occupy local volunteer workers during a year.

Among them were:

Homemaker service — The biggest item of expense in the society's financial statement ($24,600), this provided Red Cross homemakers with 158 cases and cared for 302 children. Part-time homemakers worked 2,300 days.

Sick room equipment loans — This is a free service providing equipment to families in emergencies or convalescence. In 1970 it aided 180 people with articles ranging from an oxygen cylinder to wheelchairs, canes and crutches.

Blood donations — Some 1,750 donations were collected in 1970 — 33 of them for emergencies, the rest at five clinics. Workers in local industry, government departments and high school students made major contributions.

Disaster committee — Much in demand when families are left homeless by fire, this group in 1970 assisted 30 families involving 90 children. Clothing, bedding and other items of "bare necessity" were provided.

Individual emergency aid — The society is endeavoring to phase out material assistance to families and individuals, but "there are always a few not eligible (for help) from other sources." In 1970, 19 families were helped—four families with children given groceries.

Water Safety Services — Promoting water safety through various programs, including swimming, this resulted in more than 600 safety awards in the Belleville area during the year — the highest ever.

Senior citizens — Summer drives for senior citizens saw Red Cross workers organize 130 outings for elderly city residents.

Women's Work — Responsible for gathering articles (mostly clothing) for international relief. Knitters and sewers organized by the Belleville branch were third in Ontario for the number of work hours in 1970.

Volunteer nursing — Graduated 22 students from a 12-week course in home care, first aid and other practices.

Mrs. J. E. Marsh was returned for another term as president of the Belleville branch at last night's meeting in St. Thomas parish hall.

Other executive officers include Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson, vice - president; Newton Thompson, treasurer; Mrs. M. L. Egger, secretary.

Family Planning Unit Favored by Council

Establishment of a family planning unit by the Hastings County Health Unit will be recommended by Belleville city council.

Council member on the county health unit board, Alderman Enos David said a family planning unit had been discussed by the county board last year but a majority of members had looked on it with disfavor.

The alderman felt that a recommendation from city council could have a bearing on the health board's decision this year.

PICTON (Staff) — An essay contest sponsored by the United Empire Loyalists Association of Canada this winter, is offering a cash prize of $25 to the first place winner Runners-up will receive cash awards of $15 and $10. The competition is open to younger Loyalists and their friends age 17 to 23 inclusive.

Suggested topics for the two- or three-page essay include (1) Ten traditions in use which first developed among the English, or tangent to this, British - American useages and mores found within our community today; (2) Origin of the common - law. Development of Parliament, its procedure and effect; (3) Internationalism and Nationalism; or tangent to this, The Commonwealth since the Statute of Westminster 1931; (4) Do we lose political stability if we were to lose the constitutional Monarchy? (5) Adaptability of new different ethnic groups within established Canadian Society, or Comparison of custom and etiquette between traditional English - speaking peoples and another world of your choosing, say the Latin-Slavic world; (6) Trials and tribulations of a Loyalist soldier in America at the time of the battle of Yorktown, 1781, until his arrival at his new home.

Contestants may use all or part of a suggested topic depending on the depth of comments. Entries should be mailed to R. Philip Smart, Chairman Younger Loyalist Committee, The United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada, 48 Isabella Street, Apt. 206, Toronto 5, Ontario. The deadline for all entries is March 10. A decision is expected to be reached by the committee of judges by mid-April.

Files Are Open

Gary Thompson of BCI, current mayor-of-the-week, lost no time yesterday getting into city hall files with the help of Mrs. Carolyn Sexsmith. He is one of seven students from secondary schools who are learning about civic affairs from the inside — as they share Mayor J. Russell Scott's office with him for a week at a time.

Companies Claim Discrimination

Local industry is far from satisfied with the city's new garbage disposal program which will cost them added money when the new disposal site in Sidney township goes into use next April.

Yesterday, two local industries — Constellation Canada Company, and International Cooperage Company of Canada — complained to council about being taxed for garbage collection service which they don't receive, while under the new policy they will also have to pay to dump their own garbage at the new disposal site.

Under the present policy industries are allowed to dump their industrial wastes at the Zwick's Island site free of charge, but when the new site in Sidney goes into use they will be required to pay so much per load.

Constellation said this additional tax would increase its cost of refuse removal by several hundred dollars per year.

Mayor Scott noted that under city policy all industry had access to free curbside collection for garbage other than industrial wastes.

However, with the new disposal and site agreement now signed, he didn't feel there was anything the city could do.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, as chairman of the Industrial Commission, wondered if there was not some way in which disposable waste from industry could be handled in the regular way by the garbage collector.

"I would like to think that the contractor would be reasonable," he said.

Council turned down a motion that the matter be referred to the Industrial Commission and in the end directed the city manager to investigate and make a report.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell, however, didn't feel there was anything to discuss with industry.

"There is one point being overlooked," he said. "The city has never picked up industrial waste."

But garbage will again be a topic of discussion at city hall two weeks from now.

Alderman Mrs. Jean Smith tabled a notice of motion asking that a special committee be appointed to investigate the possibility of a "clean" method of garbage disposal.

The motion will be up for discussion at the first meeting in February.

Trenton Planes to Norway

TRENTON (Staff) — Yukon aircraft from 437 Squadron at Canadian Forces Base Trenton will participate in exercise "Pygmy Chief" beginning today. Other heavy transport work will be done by the Hercules from Edmonton's 435 Squadron and Ottawa's 436 Squadron.

The three squadrons will carry approximately 700 troops and their equipment nonstop from Ottawa to the Bardufoss area of Northern Norway, 200 miles inside the Arctic Circle.

Air Transport Command planes will fly 40 flights during the operation that finishes Feb. 15.Not only will they be moving forces to and from the Scandinavian site, the aircraft are also designated to supply the troops during the 27-day operation.

Employed in the air-ground exercise will be troops from the third battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment under the command of Lt. Col. G. R. Cheriton. They will be supported by elements of the second battalion, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery and 2 Service Battalion, all from CFB Petawawa.

Also giving support to the RCRs will be a number of CF-5 fighters. Six of the controversial aircraft have been in Europe for testing since October.

Ottawa placed a $215-million order for 115 CF-5s in 1967 to be built by Canadair of Montreal but only 45 of the planes were put into operation at Bagotville, Que. and Cold Lake, Alta.

Defence department officials are now in the process of deciding what to do with the surplus CF-5s. The aircraft had been kept out of operation because of the $1.8-million defence budget freeze.

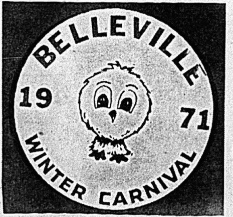
A first phase of European trials for the CF-5s is over and the "work out" in Norway in support of the troops will be the second and final European trial phase.

Canada is committed to the defence of NATO's northern flank in Norway, although commitment to the southern flank terminated in 1969. And the third battalion, RCR is Canada's standby battalion for Allied Command Europe's Mobile Force designated for defence of northern Norway.

The ACE Mobile Force formed in 1961 is a multi-national NATO force established to react to threats on the flanks of NATO with both troops and air support.

Bilateral arrangements were made with Norway for the third battalion, RCR to exercise in the Bardufoss area. However, the ACE Mobile Force is not exercising in the country this winter.

Both General F. R. Sharp, chief of defence staff and Hon. Donald Macdonald, minister of national defence, will visit the "Pygmy Chief" exercise site February 11. They are scheduled to hold defence talks with Norwegian government officials between February 8 and 12.



The Belleville Winter Carnival Committee is distributing these Ookpik buttons at 25 cents each. Other carnival promotional articles are blue and white stocking toques available from the Chamber of Commerce office or carnival participants at $2.50 each.

Federal Government Will Aid In Purchase of Museum Site

The federal department of Indian affairs and northern development will contribute toward renovation as well as purchase costs of the Faulkner House on East Bridge St., which is being purchased as a new quarters for the Hastings County Museum.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of a special committee appointed to deal with the purchase of the house, told council yesterday the historic sites division of the above division of the above department had now agreed to pay 50 per cent of purchase and renovation costs up to $64,000.

Purchase price of the house was $45,000 with an estimated $19,000 for renovation.

Alderman Joyce said the department grant was conditional on the city and the county of Hastings entering into a 25-year agreement as joint tenants for the maintenance of the building.

Council yesterday gave its okay to the 25-year agreement and county council is expected to give approval at its inaugural meeting this week.

Purchase cost of the Faulkner house as well as renovation expenses will be paid by funds from the Salaman estate.

The building will be administered by a five - member board — two from the city and two from the county with the fifth member to be appointed by the city and county members.

The Faulkner residence consructed about 90 years ago, will be used to house the Couldery collection of paintings and other effects willed to the city by a former Belleville woman — a member of the Docter family.

Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey told council it was important that both the Couldery collection and the Paul lamp collection be evaluated and catalogued before they were moved to the new location.

She recommended that council approve an expenditure of up to $1,000 to retain a Toronto firm to do the work.

"It must be done to determine what should go on display and also what insurance should be carried," she said.

Asked where the $1,000 would come from, Alderman Jeffrey said it would have to come from the city's general funds.

"It can't be taken from the Salaman legacy," she said.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott disagreed, claiming that cataloguing should be considered as part of the collection's maintenance costs.

No action was taken on retaining the Toronto firm to catalogue the two collections, it being decided to refer the matter to the new museum board.

Alderman Defends Ben Bleecker Hall

The Ben Bleecker Auditorium at the Belleville Fairgrounds is not the white elephant which frequent criticism makes it out to be.

Actually, according to Recreation and Arena Committee chairman Ald. Donald Soutter, the fairground building serves a very useful purpose and last year was operated at a cost to the city of only $168.48.

During the past year, more than 30 organizations had staged events at the building with a total attendance of close to 40,000.

Figures for the past year show that almost 5,000 persons attended bingos at the auditorium, 7,500 people went roller skating; 2,000 attended a kennel show and close to 3,000 attended a trailer show.

Ten dances were held with attendance between 4,000 and 5,000, private dances and banquets were attended by up to 350 people for each event.

Contrary to criticisms heard Ald. Soutter felt the city was reeciving good value from the Bleecker building.

He regretted that people spoke in a derogatory manner about the auditorium.

On five occasions last year the use of the building had been granted to different organizations at less than the usual rental.

Revenue for the building last year totalled $16,522 compared with operating expense of $16,690.

The net operating cost of the building to the city — $168 — does not include capital costs of the structure.

Gross cost of the building to the end of 1970 was given as $150,420, from which is deducted a provincial grant of $10,000, and a fair board contribution of $20,000, bringing the net cost down to $119,677

Appeals Heard

Assessment review courts for Belleville are being held in the city for three days this week at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium and at the city hall council chambers.

Regional Assessment Commissioner Leighton Thompson at Trenton said three different courts were being held in the city to handle a total of 338 appeals.

The courts for residential ownership and school support are being held at Bleecker Auditorium and the one for industrial and commercial properties at the city hall council chambers.

Mr. Thompson, former assessment commissioner for the city of Belleville, said the 338 assessment appeals were about normal for Belleville.

Front Street Traffic Council Topic Again

The city's new Dundas Street bridge has done much to alleviate east-west traffic congestion but southbound traffic on Front Street still leaves much to be desired.

This is the feeling of Alderman Jack Ireland who last night told council that on a recent Saturday afternoon it took him 25 minutes to drive three blocks in the downtown area.

And this, he said, was in January when business was supposed to be relatively quiet.

The alderman cited three possibilities as being mainly responsible for the tie-ups.

These were too much double parking, too many stop signs, and Campbell street funnelling traffic onto Front Street rather than taking it away.

He hoped that when the conceptual report for downtown urban renewal is received it would include suggestions for alleviation of traffic problems

Alderman Gerald Joyce suggested that the city traffic committee consider the advisability of reversing the flow of traffic on Campbell Street so as to funnel cars off Front Street.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds told council that the urban renewal conceptual report was expected at the end of the month.

A meeting will be set up for early February to consider the report.

Yearbook Needs Help

Students from Prince Edward Collegiate are experiencing tight money this year.

Three members of the school's yearbook staff, Janis Istead, Janet Wright, and Robert Smith, recently approached the Prince Edward County Board of Education for financial assistance in publishing the Beacon.

The three students explained that with an earlier printing, it would make it possible for the students to have their books before the close of the year. This would be a greater incentive for the students to buy the book.

Trustees agreed to consider the proposal and each showed support by purchasing a copy of the yearbook.

City Hall Employees Honored, Appointed

Two long term employees of the city works department received plaques from Mayor J. Russell Scott in appreciation of their many years service to the city.

They were William Dix, former city construction safety and trench inspector and Edwin Denard, city works department mechanic. Both men retired recently.

Also yesterday at city council members named Alex Beaudrie, former assistant building inspector to the safety and inspector's job. At the same time William Hoard was named to the assistant building inspector's role.

How Much Should You Trust Your Realtor?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

If you feel that you can't trust him completely both as to honesty and judgment, then you should look for one you can.

There is a second truism to bear in mind: Once you have found such a Realtor, give him YOUR honesty and loyalty and you will assure yourself of receiving his best efforts on your behalf.

A harmonious and sympathetic relationship between a buyer or seller and his Realtor is the most valuable influence a buyer or seller can have going for them.

A Realtor, like most humans, reacts to confidence by striving to keep it. The welfare of his clients comes first above all else in his business dealings and his clients are protected and benefitted accordingly.

If you can establish this "rapport" with a Realtor, then protect it with loyalty to that Realtor. Knowing that you are relying on him to find the right property or buyer for your needs, he will work diligently until he does.

Many businessmen who have become wealthy through their real estate investments, regard their Realtor as a vital "partner" in their financial affairs bringing judgment and experience to guide them.

A "home investor" should do no less.

Focus On Africa

Politics at their most tiresome are currently being witnessed in Singapore, as the Commonwealth countries indulge in their periodic meddling in each other's affairs.

By way of escape from this aspect of internationalism it is a change to consider other matters relating to say Africa, over which there is so much palaver (which, incidentally, we understand is an Afrikaans word meaning conference, and particularly among African tribes).

Africa is much else besides a focal point of world politics. We wonder will any thought be given at the conference to the serious plight of the wildlife in Kenya where auto and plane equipped trappers are steadily decimating animals like the cheetah and leopard, or to drought in South Africa, which allied to fires set by man to clear land for development is creating a desperate shortage of water for the animals? How many saw that poignant television documentary the other night, narrated by actor Dale Robertson, about the elephant herds in their search for water. Some, driven to exhaustion in their flight, fell dead and twice Robertson's helicopter drove off lions to save orphaned baby elephants.

Politics too are being cast aside by a party of Ontario farmers who will be heading for South Africa and Rhodesia in March. Sponsored by the farming journal, Farm and Country, the trip is a repeat of one made last year by another group.

In March, Farm and Country travel editor J. R. S. Gee notes, the South Africans are just getting their harvest in — corn, grapes, fruit, vegetables, and grain as well as tropical fruits. In Rhodesia 150 bushels of corn an acre are regularly surpassed and many farmers there grow two crops a year, thanks to year-round warmth and irrigation.

Thus, the natural order of life in Africa affords many lines of study — not only in the shifting sands of politics, but in the constant struggle for survival among the wildlife as well as amid the agricultural riches of fertile lands. These are subjects of interest to us all.

Varying Approach

Progress today is many things involving different initiatives from one country to another. Here at home for instance commercial television, sponsors and advertising, have long since been part of the way of life.

In New Zealand on the other hand the country's broadcasting authority was told at a public hearing recently that provision of a second television channel would not cater to the people who disliked television advertising. Asked whether advertising was regarded as one of the purposes of advertising or merely as a means of receiving revenue, a spokesman for the group seeking a second channel replied that he regarded advertising as an essential communication function. However, he believed the public should come before any sectional interest.

Thus New Zealand is still apparently haggling over a medium that long since is accepted practice in North America. The second channel, incidentally, is being sought (according to The Evening Post, Wellington) as a counterbalance to the service provided by the state-run broadcasting service (NZBC).

In another sphere, however, the New Zealanders may be moving with greater alacrity than in Canada — that is, in pollution control in pulp operations. The same Wellington newspaper reorts that the Tasman Pulp and Paper Company Ltd. is spending more than $1,500,000 to install interceptor sewers, clarifiers, a sludge-basin and aeration lagoons in a two-stage scheme designed to treat the waste from a plant at Kawerau.

Employing techniques developed overseas, the first stage is provision of a clarifier basin capable of handling 35,000,000 gallons of effluent daily. Solids thus removed will be pumped through a pipeline to a sludge disposal basin. Second stage will be the aeration basin in which residual liquid will be aerated for up to 20 days before being discharged into a river.

We have heard no more of the proposed kraft mill in Prince Edward County, but it will be seen from the above development that while the same problems are being faced in New Zealand they are being tackled effectively.

Drapeau Too Much for Them Too

Left-wing 'Front D'Action' Killed by Its Own Medicine

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — How is this for political irony?

Even the left can get too much of the left.

So much as to ruin it.

Wreck it so completely that its leader in baffled frustration publicly confesses that his own people — or at least those in his wild left field wilderness — did him in.

The leader?

Paul Cliche, leader of the shattered - beyond - all - repair Front d'Action Politique, the FRAP organization in Montreal, and distant cousin of Robert Cliche, former head of the New Democratic Party in Quebec.

FRAP, you will remember, was that alliance of all political opinion to the left of Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau's civic Party.

And so it had to cover every point on the political compass to the left of the Liberals, who, in the crucial Montreal election — held at the height of the FLQ terror — allied themselves with Mayor Drapeau.

The Mayor's Civic Party went to the polls with the Conservative vote sewn up along with the Liberal.

But everything else — from the relatively conservative New Democrats of Quebec, through the ranks of labor including the provincial Federation, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, the United Steelworkers, and the various brotherhoods, to the university students, the Parti Quebecois, the separatists and presumably even the FLQ — was for and with FRAP.

They campaigned not against Mayor Drapeau the civic worker of such miracles as Expo '67, the artistic and so - clean - it - is - almost - sterilized subway system, the fantastic spiderweb of cross - Metro expressways, the National League Expo ball club, those out - of - this - world Places Ville Marie, Bonaventure, Victoria, des Arts and Joliet, Man and His World, and finally, the Olympics.

No indeed. Who needs miracle men and good works?

FRAP socked it to the Mayor as Drapeau the tyrant, Drapeau the Police State Proconsul, Drapeau of the Iron Heel, Drapeau the persecutor of widows and orphans, the foe of the poor, Drapeau the French Canadian mid-Twentieth Century Jean-Ivan the Terrible.

And he won.

Better than 92 per cent of the vote.

Where had all the students gone? Where the labor unions? The New Democrats, the civil libertarians? Even the separatists?

Into the woodwork of the left.

But why?

To hide from the shadow cast over all of FRAP by the FLQ.

To seek sanctuary and dissociate themselves from what utterly downcast FRAP leader Paul Cliche, in recently resigning the post, publicly plastered in outraged disgust the young idiot radicals of the party's inner organization.

He put it all in writing, in his letter of resignation.

With it he pinned FRAP's staggering defeat on the lunatics of the far left — and, unbelievably, members of the party's executive — "who scared the hell out of organized labor and other pillars of our support by their arrogantly stupid refusal to take a stand publicly against terrorism and violence."

The young radicals even had a few kind words to say about the FLQ.

And a few of the FLQ suspects reciprocated the compliments.

Poor Paul Cliche.

He knew what was happening.

He called a press conference to denounce — if none of his executive would — the bombings, the robberies, the killings, the kidnappings and other FLQ terrorism.

And for his stand, his executive demanded — and got, with a sigh of both regret and relief from Paul Cliche — his resignation.

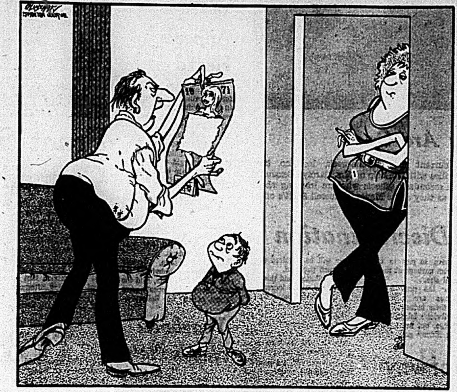
Long before then Quebec Federation of Labor and the 240,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, the Steelworkers, the New Democrats, the small "l" liberals and even all but the most militant of the civil libertarians had cut and run for cover from FRAP.

In going, Paul Cliche, a reformer, a civil libertarian, even something of a radical himself, said the left-wing FRAP had been killed by an overdose of far leftism.

The young political lunatics who ran the executive of FRAP, mourned the discarded and resigned leader Paul Clich, do not believe in democracy, have no idea of the parliamentary system, detest the working majority and respect only the dictatorship of the way out radical minoriy.

So, it seems, too much of a good thing can be bad even for the radical

So, too, the "squares" who are in charge of so many of our cities, provinces, and even here in the National Capital, of the nation itself, can be comforted that the quality of consefvaism is not so fatally old - fashioned and out of political style after all.



"I see your mother's been censoring my calendars again."

The self-governing colony of Newfoundland asked Britain to set up a royal commission to investigate its economic collapse 38 years ago today—in 1933—after the colonial government had to seek loans from the British government and Canadian banks. The commission recommended that self-government should be temporarily suspended and Newfoundland was ruled by an appointed committee from 1934 on. The population voted to join Canada on the second ballot of a referendum in 1948.

1954 — Britain adopted the Belgian FN NATO forces rifle.

1950 — The Avro CF-100 aircraft made its first test flight.

1947—392 persons died when the Greek ship Himera hit a mine off Athens.

1943—The third daughter was born to Crown Princess Juliana of The Netherlands in an Ottawa hospital.

1942 — The Canadian National cruise ship Lady Hawkins was torpedoed in the Atlantic by a German U-boat with the loss of 250 lives.

1840—Lieut. Charles Wilkes discovered the Antarctic continent.

South Africa—the Reality as Distinct from Fiction

The following are extracts from a series of articles in The Toronto Telegram by Lubor J. Zink who visited South Africa in 1968.

Three years ago I had an opportunity to tour South Africa and see for myself. What I found had little in common with the picture painted by our mass media and politicians.

It is true the Government in Pretoria does not represent the majority of the 18 million people of the Republic of South Africa. But it is also true,, as anyone who has seen the stage of development of the Black (Bantu) society cannot fail fail to notice, that our concept of representative government is totally foreign and meaningless to the vast majority of the Bantue tribesmen.

They have, as do our Indians, their own culture, customs and forms of administration under tribal chiefs. And like our Indians, as the Trudeau Government has discovered to its dismay, they do not share the white man's concepts of justice, equality and progress.

The analogy is imperfect only in the sense that, unlike the Indians of North America, many of the Bantu tribes in the rural parts of South Africa live in what can only be described as Stone - Age social pattern.

Next to this primitiveness, which has to be seen to be believed, the white minority, which accounts for about 20 per cent of the population of the republic, has created a thriving computerized economy with urban centres equal to any of our cities.

With the exception of the pockets of urbanized Bantu who detest enforced segregation, the two societies are so far apart in their stages of development that their integration can only be visualized as a long evolutionary process. Considering the failure to integrate some 200,000 Indians into the mainstream of our society, Canadians should be able to understand the enormity of this aspect of South Africa's problems.

The Government in Pretoria experiments with the system of "separate development" (apartheid) it inherited from the British colonial administration. It offers the Bantu tribes, which form several distinct national groups, self-government in what is envisaged as a federation of autonomous black states (Bantustans) within the framework of the republic.

One such Bantu state, called Transkei, is already functioning under its own elected all-black Parliament and Cabinet. Others (e.g., the recently established Zululand) are emerging in response to Bantu demands for national self-rule.

It is therefore not true that the Bantus are deprived of political self-expression. They are, in fact, encouraged and assisted to form their own governments and to use them for collective cultural, political and economic development at a pace of their own choosing.

This is a far cry from the "dictatorship" we hear so much about from the "majority rule" champions. In essence it is what the black radicals in the U.S. demand for themselves and what our "red power" Indians seem to want: Racial autonomy.

Few Canadians have first hand knowledge of southern Africa. Among those who do, communicators are a rarity. So, as in the case of other distant lands, the image people have of South Africa comes from what they read in the papers, hear from radio and see on television. If what they read, hear and see is systematically slanted, the resulting mental image cannot but be a distoriton of reality.

Having seen southern Africa, I am convinced that that is what the "popular" image of that part of the world amounts to. Why, you may ask, would anyone want to distort reality?

There are many reasons. The most potent of them is that it has become fashionable. And once distortion of facts becomes fashionable, it dictates compliance.

The "progressive" line decrees unqualified condemnation of South Africa, just as it decrees a sympathetic attitude to Red China, the other Communist dictatorships and the one-party regimes of the so-called Third-World.

The popular image of South Africa as the arch offender of all the canons of liberal philosophy has been created by concentration on things that, without explanation of the historical and social setting, offend our sense of justice, and exclusion of the bright features of a massive endeavor to gradually narrow the gap of millenia in human evolution.

South Africans, both white and black, object to this distortion which is about as complete as the distortion of Canada a South African would get through reading and hearing nothing else but descriptions of Indian reservations and of the lunatic fringe of Quebec separatism.

A systematically biased presentation of our Indian problem would alone condemn us if that was all the outside world heard about Canada. And one can well imagine the storm of protests if any country proposed to sell us arms, because these arms would allegedly be used for internal oppression.

My contention is that much of the condemnation of South Africal, stems from analogous ignorance and bias.

Most Canadians who condemn South Africa and urge our Government to lodge more protests in London against the arms sales proposition profess to do so on moral grounds. They argue that the white Government in Pretoria is guilty of intolerable racial and political oppression.

Do these people realize that our Indians use the same argument about the white Government in Ottawa? Do they realize that if they want to stand on moral principle, the fact that Indians are a small minority in Canada and Bantu a large majority in South Africa does not invalidate that principle?

The need for securing the sea routes around South Africa has arisen because of the rapid Soviet naval buildup in the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean. With the closing of the Suez Canal in 1967 and the tightening of the Soviet grip on the Middle East in recent months, the Cape route has assumed paramount importance to Britain and Western Europe. Denial of control of those sea lanes to the Kremlin has thus become a matter of survival.

Since South Africa lacks the ships and planes necessary for safeguarding the Cape route, and since only South Africa can patrol its own shoreline, supply of the essential weaponry is a strategic necessity.

Until the mid-1950s, Britain took care of the protection of the Cape route directly from the Simonstown naval base at the tip of South Africa. In 1955, the base was handed over to the South African Government. Under the terms of the Simonstown agreement, Pretoria assumed responsibility for policing the Cape route and London undertook to sell South Africa the ships and planes with which to perform the task.

When South Africa was forced to leave the Commonwealth nine years ago under Canadian and Afro-Asian pressure, Britain continued to supply the defence equipment that Pretoria needed for patrolling the Cape route. The deliveries were suspended when the Wilson Government took office in 1964 and decided, for purely political reasons, to accept the Security Council's 1963 recommendation (passed also under Canadian and Afro-Asian pressure) of an arms embargo on South Africa.

Canada's Defence Roles Once Again Under Full Review

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's roles in North American air defence and in anti-submarine warfare are once again under wide-open discussion as preparations go forward for the second full-dress defence white paper in seven years.

Defence Minister Donald Macdonald wants to produce a document that will outline a flexible defence policy for the 1970s and at the same time fit into the scheme of priorities laid down in 1969 by Prime Minster Trudeau.

With technological changes coming at a breathtaking pace in the defence field, the minister has his work cut out for him.

One result of the current review could be a hefty increase in Canada's defence budget, frozen at $1.8 billion annually until the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Mr. Macdonald said on taking office last fall that a budget rise would be inevitable, given a continuation or expansion of the forces' current commitments, when the budget freeze expires.

He made the prediction before the Quebec kidnap crisis, which possibly opened an era of heightened civil responsibility for the forces.

The defence minister won't say he'll be asking for more department funds but in a recent interview he hinted: "I am going to place some ideas before cabinet."

In broad policy terms the aim of the white paper is to present a comprehensive defence program based on the 1969 priorities.

The priorities are: protection of Canadian sovereignty, defence of North America, participation in NATO and international peacekeeping.

The list represents a thorough re-shuffling of the goals in the 1964 defence white paper, which listed collective defence first and surveillance and protection of Canadian territory—sovereignty—last.

The future of the anti-submarine role, which under collective security arrangements has consumed virtually the entire postwar Canadian effort in maritime defence, is closely related to the protection of sovereignty.

Mr. Trudeau, among others, has questioned continuing in the anti-sub role, while a parliamentary committee has suggested it be de-emphasized in favor of surveillance work.

Mr. Macdonald seems to suggest an eventual shift in emphasis when he says he can't foresee any dramatic change "in the next year or so."

"Over the longer period, one is inclined to be a little cautious because of the uncertainties about the technical aspect."

This appeared a reference to a reported change in U.S. strategy away from traditional submarine tracking methods to one of erecting defences against submarine-launched ballistic missiles.

Uncertainty about the direction of government policy apparently has been a factor in continuing delay on selection of a maritime anti-submarine patrol aircraft to replace the Argus.

Purchase of an Argus replacement could cost $300 million to $400 million. The choice apparently lies between Hawker-Siddeley's Nimrod and Lockheed's Orion

Mr. Macdonald says he wants a fresh look at NORAD, the North American air defence command which he contends is based on the military technology of the mid-1950s. The bomber threat against which it was built has "much diminished," giving way to a growing threat from intercontinental and submarine-launched missiles.

But he still considers it essential that Canada retain the capability to patrol its own air space—"to exercise an authority."

Mr. Macdonald hopes to have the white paper ready for Parliament in April.

Kitchener Mayor Battles Communes

KITCHENER (CP) — Mayor S. M. McLennan refused Monday night to debate his stand on communes with a city alderman and about 85 young people.

He was accused by Ald. Morley Rosenberg, a lawyer, of "smearing" all young people with "McCarthy tactics" and of violating commune dwellers' civil rights

Mayor McLennan said last week he would use an "occupancy maintenance" bylaw to clean up communes

At a council meeting Monday Mr. Rosenberg demanded: "Who are you to criticize how they are supposed to live?"

A leader of a commune, John Mayrhofer, accused the mayor of discrimination.

He said one member of the commune, a girl who applied for welfare, was kept waiting three hours then told by the welfare administrator she would first have to get in touch with the mayor.

Another Two Months of High Unemployment Forecast by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs and Liberal back-benchers kept up their attack in the Commons Monday on government economic policies.

The fusillade came in debate on Finance Minister E. J. Benson's Dec. 3 budget, scheduled to resume today.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield raked the government for the latest unemployment figures, which show 538,000 Canadians unemployed in mid-December, a seasonally-adjusted rate of 6.6 per cent of the labor force.

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey retorted later that the December figure was far lower than levels reached between 1958 and 1962 under Conservative governments, when annual rates reached seven per cent.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Mackasey said the country would have to expect another two months of high unemployment.

Mr. Stanfield called on the government to quell its "false pride" and take new steps to fight unemployment.

He urged the government to lower personal incomes taxes, remove the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building supplies, discontinue the three-per-cent surtax on personal and corporate income tax and widen eligibility for unemployment insurance benefits as a stop-gap.

He said the time is ripe to urge voluntary price and wage restraint on business and labor, when neither group is pressured by high inflation to hedge against increases.

David Lewis, New Democrat deputy leader, proposed similar moves to combat unemployment. He also suggested grants to municipalities to cover rising welfare costs, an immediate increase in unemployment insurance benefits to $100 a week, and increased grants to build schools, hospitals and anti-pollution facilities.

The unemployment benefit increases were recommended in the government's white paper on unemployment insurance.

Mr. Lewis said the government had succeeded in a deliberate attempt to create poverty.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the unemployment problem could be solved only by increasing purchasing power with a national dividend from the Bank of Canada.

That would put people back to work in the factories by increasing demand for their products.

One of the bitterest attacks on government policy came from one of its own back-benchers—Robert Kaplan (Toronto Don Valley)—who scored the cabinet for not having the courage to propose wage and price controls as weapons against inflation.

In its strategy of fighting inflation with unemployment the government had "succeeded too well." The resultant number of out-of-work Canadians was "simply unacceptable."

A better tactic would be to enact an economic war measures act —controls that could be quickly applied to economic sectors threatened by inflation.

The main inflationary danger, said Mr. Kaplan, is wages, which tend to increase without any push from other forces.

. B. Osler, (Winnipeg South Centre), another Liberal back-bencher, struck at the effects restraint policies have had on the Prairie economy.

While unemployment was comparatively low in his region, depressed buying power in the richer provinces, where unemployment was worse, had dampened markets for Prairie products.

"Much more must be done" to increase employment, Mr. Osler said.

Mr. Mackasey said the government's critics displayed uncalled-for pessimism.

If investors read the speeches of the day "they would be damn fools to spend a nickel in Canada."

"Fortunately they know that the record of Canada is good. They know that we are on the right track financially."

He said "we can console ourselves" that the unemployed now have training programs, mobility grants and other benefits not available 10 years ago.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) recalled that the Conservatives did not cu[illegible]ment in 1962 and 1962, and lost the 1963 election as a [illegible].

The same fate, he warned, would befall the Liberals.

Frank Moores (PC—Bonavista-Trinity-Conception) said unemployment was the worst in 10 years, while inflation was only temporarily licked.

He advocated tax cuts, along with special incentive grants to slow-growth areas such as Newfoundland.

Policemen Defy Their Union, Stay Off Work in New York

NEW YORK (CP) — Striking policemen defied their union and stayed off the job again today as city authorities pondered whether to call in New York National Guard troops to protect New Yorkers.

Surprisingly, the normally-high city crime rate has not increased

The New York Times says that from various semi-official and official statistics it can be assumed that the same number of crimes are being committed but fewer people are being arrested for committing them.

Police strikes in Boston in 1919 and Montreal in 1969 resulted in large increases in crime and other social disorders.

As many as 85 per cent of the uniformed patrolmen—some 20,000 men—refused to walk their beats despite another appeal by the head of the Patrolman's Benevolent Association to return to work and let the courts settle the dispute. The patrolmen were joined by a growing number of housing authority police and up to 25 per cent of the transit police.

Superior officers and detectives, who have been working 12-hour shifts to keep up a basic patrol, were growing weary, and city officials feared they would not be able to keep at it for more than a few days.

"The city must be protected," said Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy. "If we have to seek outside help, we'll do it."

Asked if that meant asking for the national guard, Murphy said, "Yes, that's it."

Elsewhere on the city's labor scene, 1,600 teamsters continued a day-old strike that halted delivery of produce to four major markets.

Inquest to Be Informed Names Mixed in Report At Plane Mishap Probe

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Evidence of "a huge error" made by medical experts investigating an air crash that killed all 109 persons aboard an Air Canada jetliner last July 5 was expected today at an inquest into the crash.

The man who was to testify about the error before Ontario's supervising coroner, Dr. H. B. Cotnam, is Dr. Ian Anderson, a specialist in aviation medicine.

Inquest sources Monday said a report prepared by medical examinder accidentally mixed up the names of the pilot and co-pilot in a report that yellow paint from a crucial cockpit control lever was found on the hand of First Officer Donald Rowland.

Last month a federal inquiry was told that the paint flecks were major evidence in concluding it was First Officer Rowland who prematurely deployed the spoiler control, sending the huge plane bouncing off a Toronto airport runway, to crash later in a farmer's field despite the efforts of Captain Peter Hamilton.

In related testimony Monday a pilots' representative said that the control was only one of three in the cockpit painted yellow.

Dr. Anderson said the mixup in the names was a small error that should be cleared up.

"It was a huge error," Dr. Cotnam said brusquely.

The plane's spoilers, flaps along each wing which help brake it after its wheels touch down, were deployed prematurely while it was coming into the nose-up position for landing.

The resulting loss in lift sent it crashing to the runway with almost twice the maximum permissible force. An negine was ripped off, rupturing a wing fuel tank and showering the leaking fuel with sparks from exposed wires.

Captain Hamilton, unaware of the extent of the damage, took off again for another approach and landing.

The Los Angeles-bound jet from Montreal, with a brief stop scheduled for Toronto, then lost its right wing in a series of explosions and crashed.

"You've only seen fit to extract what's consistent with your theory," Dr. Cotnam told the specialist.

"We didn't hear it all at the original inquiry and we didn't hear it the second time around here today yet."

Next-day Delivery Of Mail to Be Tested

TORONTO (CP) — A new "assured mail-delivery program" that will provide next-day delivery in most major Canadian cities will start in Toronto Feb. 1, Jean-Pierre Cote, minister without portfolio in charge of the post office, said Monday.

He told a news conference that in exchange for mailing early Torontonians will be guaranteed delivery the next day.

The minister said in a interview the new service will be achieved at no extra cost.

"We will be using the same people, but we will be asking our customers to mail earlier."

The system involves two types of mail boxes—the conventional red ones and new red ones with blue, white and purple horizontal stripes.

After Feb. 1, first-class mail dropped into any Toronto city box before 11 a.m. will be assured of next-day delivery to:

St. John's, Nfld., Halifax, Moncton, N.B., Quebec City, Montreal, Toronto and suburbs; Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Ont., North Bay, Peterborough, Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Windsor, Ont., Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria and other major centres in southern and eastern Ontario.

First-class mail deposited in a striped box after 11 a.m. but before 3 p.m. will be assured next day delivery to:

Kingston, Hamilton, Kitchener, London, Montreal, North Bay, Ottawa, Peterborough, Sudbury, Toronto and suburbs, Windsor and other southern and eastern Ontario major centres.

For outgoing mail, the system will be inaugurated in Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton April 1; Vancouver May 1; Ottawa June 1 and Montreal July 1.

Mr. Cote said that by 1972, the system will be introduced on an originating basis in all major and medium-size cities across Canada.

The mailing deadlines were devised to meet aircraft and other forms of transportation departures and also takes advantage of time zones.

Phosphate-fighter Dangerous

HAMILTON (CP) — A compound used by soap manufacturers to reduce phosphates could expose marine life and people to danger from heavy metals previously—trapped in lake sediment, a scientist said Monday.

James Bruce, director of the Canada Centre for Inland Waters, said tests conducted in Hamilton Harbor showed that NTA released 13 metals back into the water.

In addition, he said, phosphates which had been put in the water but were being held in bond by metals, were released by the nitrogen compound.

Mr. Bruce said the results of the study have been forwarded to Jack Davis, federal minister responsible for the environment.

Among the metals involved were mercury, zinc, cadmium, chromium, aluminum, nickel, iron, lead and copper.

The nitrogen compound has been increasingly used by soap makers to reduce phosphate content. Phosphates will be banned from Canadian detergents in 1972 because they were found to result in excessive algae growth that chokes lakes.

Books Are Way of Life for Woman Collector

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — For Hannelore Headley, books are more than just a hobby, a business or a job.

Books, especially rare books, are a way of life for Mrs. Headley.

She's a dealer and collector, and one of the few women in Canada in her profession.

"It's always been thought of pretty much as a man's profession," she said. "Much like in a library. There are women librarians, of course, but the chief librarian is always a man."

Born in Germany, Mrs. Headley's interest in books is well-grounded. Her father operates Montreal's Mansfield Book Mart, and made history when he took the first Canadian exhibit to the Frankfurt Book Fair in Germany in 1963.

Her brother is reputed to have one of the finest collections of military histories of Canada, and her mother is a book-binder and collector of cookbooks.

It takes more than a love of books to be a successful dealer in rare books.

It takes time and patience to do the hunting necessary to dig up books from obscure sources.

Mrs. Headley does all her own searching. Salvation Army shops, second-hand stores, antique shops and old estates are favorite sources of rare books.

She finds special books for her customers by advertising in trade journals, and advertises books she has for sale in the same publications.

But not all the books she finds are for sale. She is an avid collector, with large collections of Canadiana, biographies, and children's books.

Among the children's books is a copy of the first translation into German of Mother Hubbard. Many of her children's books date back to the Victorian era.

Rare books require special, loving care by their owners. Collectors regulate the humidity in the room where their books are stored to preserve them at their best.

Mrs. Headley grew up with her family in the Jewish ghetto of Shanghai, China, after her family fled Germany and the Hitler regime just before the Second World War.

A book-store owner in Germany, her father opened a similar store in China and her mother, a dentist in Germany, became a book-binder.

The family was forced to flee again, abandoning its art treasures and rare books, as the Communists rose to power. They went to Montreal in 1953.

When Mrs. Headley talks of books, her face glows. In a sense, they're even more than life to her.

"I couldn't think of a better place to die than in your own book store surrounded by books," she laughed. "One day when you were 90, you'd just fall down and be covered by books and that's how they'd find you."

The 'First Lady' of Real Estate

Mrs. Mary Colling, recently elected president of the real estate board of Belleville discusses the homes illustrated in the catalogue with salesman Don MacDermaid.

City Woman Assumes Office As Real Estate Board President

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

In February 1971 a new landmark will be set up in the annals of the real estate profession in Belleville because then slim, attractive Mary Colling (Mrs. Cleo Colling) will assume office as the president of the real estate Board and she will be the first woman to do so. While militant members of the Women's Lib have been burning bras and picketing beauty contests Mrs. Colling, (who does not identify herself with the movement in any way) has quietly worked her way upwards in her career which began in 1959 when she obtained her real estate salesman's license and joined the firm of W. J. McCormick Realty Ltd.

Prior to that she had been an active member of various organizations in Belleville and was charter president of the curling club. But when she decided to devote her talents to a full - time career and chose real estate as her field she obviously made the right decision because she sold her first house within six days of joining the firm. Which wasn't a bad beginning at all because there was only one other woman in real estate in Belleville at that time and their male colleagues didn't take them quite seriously! In the second year of her career she was elected salesman's representative to the Board and has served in various other capacities since then including as secretary and director.

In 1967 she became a qualified real estate broker which meant that she now either had to have her own business or a share in a real estate firm. She was then appointed manager of the firm. The following year W. J. McCormick was bought by Bowes and Cocks Ltd. and Mrs. Colling continued to work there in the capacity of manager.

They moved to their present office in February 1970.

At present Mrs. Colling who is the only woman real estate broker in Belleville has 12 salesmen and three women working for her. Although she is deeply involved in administrative work she still does some selling just to keep in touch and is ever-ready to help any prospective buyer.

Looking cool and relaxed in a beige suit set off by jade green accessories, she sat in her pleasant but simply furnished office and chatted about current trends in real estate. She remarked that the accent is now on split-level homes and two-storey houses with separate dining rooms. She also noted that people nowadays were much better informed about the intricacies of financing and the legal aspects of real estate than they were 10 years ago and they have definite ieas about what they want.

Asked what qualifications she considered were necessary for anyone interested in a career in real estate she replied that plenty of stamina, the ability to keep irregular hours, a capacity for hard work and a real interest in people were essential. She thinks that there are equal opportunities for women in the field but she feels that the irregular hours would place a heavy strain on a woman with family obligations. She herself often has to make last - minute changes in her family arrangements but fortunately her husband is extremely understanding and co-operative.

It is obvious that she enjoys her work and finds it both stimulating and challenging. She feels that people in her profession could do much for the good of the city because when people put money into homes they are likely to be better citizens.

Mrs. Colling and her husband Cleo live in a pleasant split - level home overlooking the Bay of Quinte. In spite of her heavy schedule she does a fair amount of entertaining and prefers small, intimate dinners to big parties. Widely travelled, the Collings have been several times to Europe and to the Carribean, Mexico, India and the Far East. They are keen collectors of antiques.

WAITING LIST

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — There's a waiting list of 5,400 couples who want to get married here. People at the end of the line who want to be married in a civil ceremony will have to wait until 1972. Officials say that's because the bureaucratic staff is too small to handle the applications.

College Guild Enjoys Views Of Scotland

The president Mrs. Fleming, presided at the January meeting of Albert College Guild, and opened with a poem which was a prayer for peace by Helen Steiner Rice.

The principal of Albert College, Mr. L. L. Shewfelt brought New Year's greetings and extended an invitation to Guild members to a Life and Work weekend to be held at the College the last week in January.

Reports of 1970 executive showed a successful year.

It was agreed to hold the annual bridge and other games as well as showing of slides during the mid-winter holidays.

Miss Helen Sulman led in the devotional service.

During this portion a recipe for a good day in the New Year was given as follows: 12 parts faith; 11 parts patience; 10 parts courage; nine parts work; eight parts hope; seven parts fidelity; six parts liberty; five parts kindness; four parts rest (leaving this out is like leaving the oil out of a salad); three parts prayer; two parts meditation; one part well selected resolution; one tbsp. good spirits; dash of fun; sprinkling of play and a heaping cup of good humor.

Pour into whole a liberal amount of love and mix with a vim.

Garnish with a few smiles and serve with quietness, unselfishness and cheerfulness, and a happy New Year is a certainty.

Mrs. Christensen introduced the speaker Mr. Shewfelt, who took members by means of slides on a trip through Scotland, the home of both his and Mrs. Shewfelt's ancestors. He recalled historical incidents in connection with many of the scenes, and shared with his audience the beauty of the green countryside, castles, lochs, and rivers and recalled humorously the experience of making a right-hand turn in Glasgow.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. Fred Wilson.

During the social hour, Mrs. MacKay and Mrs. McMullen poured tea.

Bureau Functions

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Women's Bureau was established Nov. 1, 1966, to commemorate the 50th year of the women's franchise in the province. Director Irene MacGregor says the bureau collects and compiles information, opinions and materials on matters of particular concern to women, makes this available to women and women's organizations and performs functions delegated by the government's executive council.

"I have a complete service for twelve at home. Of course, it doesn't all match."

IT'S WOMEN SHE SURPRISES — Elizabeth Spencer left her secretarial job seven months ago to compete in the male-dominated business of selling office supplies in Winnipeg's downtown section. Miss Spencer says it's women and not men who are surprised to see her working in such a high-pressure job. (CP Photo)

Sales Job Offers Challenge To Former Psychology Student

WINNIPEG (CP) — Elizabeth Spencer's entrance into the male-dominated world of office-supplies selling has caused more raised eyebrows among women than men.

"Most women ask me what I'm doing in such a high-pressured sales job, working for a commission and not a guaranteed salary," says the young former psychology student, who took over a downtown sales territory seven months ago for Wilson Stationers, the city's largest supplier of office materials.

"Men, on the other hand, don't make much of a fuss when they see me in the downtown business section selling. Not even those I am competing against."

Attractive and in her early 20s, Miss Spencer worked in a large department store and as a private secretary after leaving the University of Manitoba. Neither job satisfied her.

"I was looking for a job where I could be on my own and with responsibility. The job with Wilson, competing with men, offered a challenge."

Her male counterparts do not appear to mind the competition, and the previously all-male sales staff at Willson gave her a good reception when she started with the company.

"It's such a highly competitive business that I didn't think they'd give me the time of day. But they're a great group, and I don't think I'd get as much help if they were women."

But because her sales territory takes in many doctors' or lawyers' offices, Miss Spencer deals with many women who are responsible for making purchases of office supplies.

"I had to spend a lot of time boning up on new office systems, probably more time than my male colleagues. I believe women customers can be a lot rougher on a saleswoman if they ask a question and they haven't the answer."

Although she agrees with many of its objectives, Miss Spencer is no ardent defender of the women's liberation movement.

"Too many women tell me with one breath that they'd like to earn as much money as a man, but then say they wouldn't like to compete against men as I do.

"I sincerely believe there isn't a sales job going that a woman couldn't handle if she applied herself."

An Employment Centre for the Retired

By DORIS CLARK

DORIS CLARK

Inspired by some of our reports from the south, an imaginative woman in Vancouver has now started the Canadian Retired Employment Centre, for people 60 years and over. A three-dollar membership entitles one to any number of placements in a year.

This way, the applicant has already leaped the first hurdle, that of age. If an employer calls on the CREC he is committing himself to an over - 60. The Centre is operated by volunteers. Gifts of office equipment constitute most of the furniture; and sponsors contribute to the $100 per month expenses.

At this point the Centre is inviting prospective workers, employers, articles of furniture and more sponsors. The organizer, Mrs. Elaine Cora Craig, aims to set up identical centres in every major city across Canada. More power to you, Elaine!

Dear Doris: I came to Canada from Europe three years ago, when I was 14. I live at my aunt's home. Lately I am doing better with English and I am lonely. I am shy and I've got acne on top of that, which gives me a hang-up.

One of my family's friends has a daughter my age who is even shyer than I am. There is nothing serious between us but my uncle already was kidding about it. Should I go to some dances (I cannot dance), stand around and wait for something to happen, or should I take this relationship more seriously? — Carl.

Dear Carl: You don't have to commit yourself to a lifetime relationship just to take a girl out. If she's shy you'd better have some consideration for her and speak up.

Then if you make it to a movie and the beginning of friendship, confess that you can't dance and ask her to show you a few steps at home, to the music of the radio — thus bringing her out of her self - conscious shell in order to help you.

The main pitfall in making friends is your own timidity, doubtless because you are stuck with growing up in a strange land and using a still strange language. Be brave!

Dear Doris: I got a wonderful present from my parents — a gas - powered airplane. But there is a big problem about where to let it fly! Residential areas and playgrounds are forbidden for such hobbies.

It cannot be done in sandy areas nor on small front lawns. Would you please tell me what to do? — Pete.

Dear Pete: It is a problem. In built-up areas, houses are close together and the penetrating drone of your toy airplane can get on a lot of nerves. Playgrounds are likely to be well occupied with youngsters, and your hobby calls for space.

But what about flying it in the school grounds after school is out? Your principal will tell you whether this is O.K. There are public parks where you can fly airplanes. There just might be an unused field on a friend's farm. Had you thought about that?

What does the dealer suggest?

Ann Landers

Plans Overeating For Self-destruction

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why didn't you tell "Worried in Seattle," — the woman who said her husband is killing himself with food, — that he wants to die. I know what I'm talking about because I am that man — and there are many others like me.

ANN LANDERS

My religion forbids divorce so there's no way out for me. My marriage fell apart a long time ago. Home, to me, means nagging, complaining, endless arguing and screaming. The tension and hostility is indescribable. My wife has managed to kill any sexual desire I might have had. When I look at her now it's difficult to believe I ever wanted her.

Eating is the only pleasure left in my life. In the 24 years we've been married I have never cheated on my wife. She has soured me so thoroughly on the entire female sex that any thought of another woman is just as nauseating as the thought of her.

If obesity will shorten my life I say, "Pass the second piece of pie-a-la-mode." It's too late to give my any advice, Ann Landers, but if you have a comment I'd like to hear it. — TWO-TON TOMMY

DEAR TOMMY: Your admission that you want to die, comes as no surprise to me. The only thing that surprises me is that you recognize the motivation behind your excessive eating. Most compulsive eaters arent' so introspective. I am NOT talking about people who are 10 or 20 pounds overweight. I mean people who should lose 50 to 75 pounds.

The person who likes himself takes care of himself. Individuals who eat too much and drink too much, or mess around with drugs, are subconsciously trying to achieve one goal — self destruction.

You dion t ask for advice so I won't offer any. Furthermore I suspect you know the solution but you'd rather keep on doing what you're doing. So to you I say, good luck and farewell.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in your advice to the 60-year-old woman whose husband was still having affairs long after his wife was sure he had given up that sort of foolishness. She asked if she should consider divorce. You told her to make the decision based on one fact — would she be better off or worse without him.

I had to make that same decision a few years ago and I discussed it with my physician. He wisely pointed out that the immaturiy was my husband's problem, not mine, and I would be a fool to break up my marriage after so many years. So I ve managed to keep myself busy, and I am reasonably content.I hope one day my adolescent husband will grow up and settle down. I am willing to wait. If that day never comes, I still will feel I made the decision that was best for me. YORK READER.

DEAR Y.: Thanks for a good letter. Your solution was not ideal, but it was indeed the best solution for you — and for most women who are walking in your moccasins.

UCW MEETINGS

MELROSE UCW

The study of China continued under the directorship of Mrs. H. McMeehan, program leader during the January meeting of the evening unit of the Melrose UCW held at Mrs. K. McMeehan's home on the 12th evening. Mrs. H. McMeehan described the work of the people of China and the satisfaction they are deriving from the present living conditions in communes. Mechanized equipment has made for increased production, progress has been made in education and life is generally better for the poorer classes.

Hymns, suited to the beginning of the new year and several readings made the program one of interest to all present.

The nominating committee presented its report and the following women will hold office for 1971. Mrs. Don McFarlane, leader; Mrs. A. English first vice-president; Mrs. H. McMeehan, secretary; Mrs. C. Bates, pianist; Mrs. J. McFarlane, treasurer; Mrs. S. Demille, assistant pianist; Mrs. R. Badgely and Mrs. William English, auditors; Mrs. C. Hagerman and Mrs. H. Melburn, social committee; Mrs. S. Lazier and Mrs. S. Demille, card committee; Mrs. H. McMeehan, librarian and Mrs. G. McLaren, press representative. The office of second vice - president was unfilled. The past leader was Mrs. K. McMeehan.

Mrs. A. English was in charge of the worship period and her opening remark was a quotation from a memorable Christmas message broadcast by the late King George VI.

The correspondence was read by Mrs. M. Lazier and included thank-you notes from the Hi-C group for the support given to their pie social and from the two injured boys who were given free admission to the turkey supper.

The treasurer reported a balance of $206.52. The auditors complimented the treasurer on the accuracy of her book. The retiring leader spoke of the enjoyment she had found in leading the organization during the past two years and hoped that members would continue to support the newly elected leader.

The meeting closed with the serving of refreshments.

Nurse's Pants-suit Versatile Apparel

NEW YORK (AP) — As quick as you can say acetylsalicylic acid, a nurse can change her new pants-suit uniform into an ensemble fit for off-duty fun.

She just adds a feather blouse to her white nurse's slacks, or she can wear her tunic over multistriped short shorts.

The trend to pants for hospital nurses started last year and caught on at hospitals across the country.

Younger nurses with highly active jobs in specialized units were generally the guinea pigs — and for good reason. As skirts crept higher and higher in the 1960s, nurses with short skirts risked exposing their stocking tops.

However, now that nurses are winning the fight for pants suits in many places, designers are saying long pants are becoming a part of the past. Short shorts, yes. Knickers, yes. Long pants, yawn.

Nurses' costumes from 1865 were shown during an all-white uniforms presentation Thursday at the New York Couture National Press Week — just as an interesting contrast.

But with their long skirts and white aprons, these old uniforms looked more like 1971, for better or for worse. Who can keep up with it all?

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Versatile Vegetable Recipe

By MARY MOORE

You will clip this I am sure for such a versatile vegetable recipe is hard to come by.

In it you can use Canadian canned Canadian onions (for which it was designed) or onions or cauliflower which you have cooked yourself. It may be prepared in advance which will make you breathe a sigh of relief if you have impetuously and hospitably invited a crowd for dinner.

ALMOND ONION (OR ROLE (Serves 4-6)

- 2 cans drained (15½ oz.) whole onions (or equivalent in cooked onions or caulifiowerets)
- 1½ tbsps. butter
- 1½ tbsps. flour
- ½ can cream of mushroom soup undiluted
- ½ cup shredded old Cheddar cheese (packed)
- ¼ cup coarsely chopped toasted almonds
- ¼ tsp. MSG
- ¼ cup sherry
- ¼ lb. sliced mushrooms (optional)

Tip drained canned or home cooked onions or cooked cauliflowerets into buttered medium baking dish.

Make the sauce by blending the butter and flour and stirring in the undiluted soup, cheese, almonds, MSG, sherry and mushrooms until thickened and near boiling. Pour evenly over onions or cauliflower in baking dish. If desired sprinkle top with additional chopped almonds. Note: At this stage this dish may be cooled and stored in refrigerator until 1 hr. before mealtime.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 1 hr. if refrigerator cold or 45 min. if baked as soon as prepared.

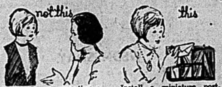
Add this recipe to your guest vegetable file.

Dinner Menu

Chilled Garden Vegetable Cocktail; Crumbed Sliced Veal Kidneys with Mushrooms; Buttered Noodles; Spinach; Fresh Grapefruit and Orange Fruit Cup; Raisin Cookies; Coffee.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Sara: "I was expecting a letter from Peggy. I wrote to her two weeks ago."

Mother: "Oh, I forgot, a letter came for you yesterday. Isn't it on the sideboard? I thought I left it there."

Install a miniature post-office near the door where mail and magazines can be sorted and left for each member of the family. A small shelf with pigeon holes or a series of baskets hung on the wall will be adequate.

Organize some of the daily routines to avoid careless mistakes and the resulting irritation.

Pay less income tax this year! Have more for yourself when you really want it.

The Government encourages you to do so under Section 79B of the Income Tax Act. They call it the Registered Retirement Savings Plan. At Mutual Life we call it the Tax-Break.

You're permitted to put into a Registered Retirement Savings Plan up to 20% of your earned income, with a maximum of $2,500 if you're not in a Registered Pension Plan – $1,500 if you are.

That could mean a big break for you at tax time in April. For instance, if you have a taxable income of $12,500, you can reduce your taxes by as much as $900 this year. And every year.

These savings can mean a big break for you at retirement.

Maybe retirement time is a long way off. But tax time isn't. Neither is your Mutual Life agent.

Give him a call or send us the coupon. Let us show you how to really save.

Remember, to apply tax savings to your 1970 income you must register your plan before March 1st, 1971.

It's your money!

Heath May Limit British Arms Sale

mula, could be that any frigates ordered by South Africa would not really be reinforcing the navy strength but merely taking the place of existing ships going out of service.

The same case could be put for replacing the old Buccaneer planes.

The arms sales proposal was thrashed out in secret sessions today that lasted six hours, with breaks for lunch and tea. Only Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith was present with the government heads.

Prime Minister Trudeau said he was optimistic, but added:

"I always feel optimistic about the future—otherwise I would not be in politics."

Prime Minister Trudeau, who wants Britain to put off a decision on the arms dispute for at least six months, said the secret morning discussions at the Commonwealth conference that lasted two hours 40 minutes "went very well."

He said they were "rational and unemotional, orderly, with no one losing his temper."

Trudeau told reporters outside the conference hall:

" . . . We're getting to the basic issues. . . . There wasn't any attempt to draw conclusions at this stage. We wanted to hear the basic views of those who had things to say and we're going to carry on. . . .

"The fact that everyone came to this conference is an indication that they're willing for, if not a compromise, at least accommodation."

The exchanges were "very frank," President Milton Obote of Uganda told reporters. The leaders went back into session after lunch for 2½ hours.

The Uganda leader, who bitterly opposes the arms sales, was one of the key speakers at the talks, described by officials as "absolutely private." Only the Commonwealth secretary-general, Arnold Smith of Canada, was present with the Commonwealth leaders.

Tight security surrounded the get-together, representing a final effort to save the Commonwealth from a damaging split over the arms issue.

At least three African nations threatened before the summit to quit the Commonwealth if Heath completes the sale he says is necessary to protect Indian Ocean shipping lanes from the Soviet navy.

Authoritative sources said he stood his ground in today's meeting, explaining the legal implications of the Simonstown Agreement, which he said obligates Britain to supply naval arms to South Africa in exchange for use of the Simonstown base south of Cape Town.

The informants said several African leaders noted that Heath's predecessor, Harold Wilson, embargoed arms to South Africa after obtaining legal opinions that no further sales were required under the treaty.

Discussions was reported centred on objections to any sale rather than a compromise on amounts or types of weapons that could be sold.

Daniel Arap Moi, vice-president of Kenya, said the question facing the conference is not one of compromise. If agreement could not be reached in private talks today, he said, "we may have to abandon the heads of government meeting and go into the plenary session and say what we have to say."

President Obote of Uganda told reporters:

"It (the arms issue) is not a subject for compromise. It's a subject for hard decision, bitter decision."

Conference sources said that at this morning's session some African leaders emphasized that supplying arms to South Africa could result in adverse economic effects for Britain.

Heath called a luncheon with the heads of government or delegation heads of Tanzania, Nigeria, Zambia, Guyana, Malta, Mauritius, Pakistan, Botswana and Fiji for an apparent continuation of debate over the lunch table.

All 31 leaders returned for the afternoon session under the same secret rules. Until today, all sessions since the nine-day summit began Thursday have included delegations, secretariat officials and large staffs.

Sources said a Jamaican proposal that additional British ships be assigned to the defence of the Cape route—thus obviating the need for maritime equipment sales to Pretoria—would be raised when the talks continue.

The 31 leaders—adopting crisis procedure for the first time since Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence in 1965—were trying to find a face-saving formula in which the divergent views on southern Africa can be expressed in terms unlikely to lead to a split of the Commonwealth.

Informants said Britain will not budge from her stand. And just as certainly, they said, the African members of the Commonwealth will stick to their view that it is heinous to aid racist South Africa in any way whatsoever.

No one expects a break in these positions. The search is for a roof big enough to accommodate both positions—if there is a roof that big and thus let all 31 members stay in the organization.

Guyana Prime Minister Forbes Burnham, asked if there was a point on which all agreed, said. "We want to keep the Commonwealth."

Canadian Talent Library Comes Into Its Own

TORONTO (CP) — What's your racket, Mr. Potts?

J. Lyman Potts was asked the question many times when he started out nine years ago to promote Canadian Talent Library, a non-profit organization initiated and principally financed by Standard Broadcasting Corp., which owns radio stations CFRB in Toronto and CJAD in Montreal.

As president of Standard Broadcast Productions Ltd., an SBC subsidiary, Mr. Potts is responsible for the day-to-day operations of the innovative CTL, which counts 205 radio stations in Canada as subscribers to its services

But when he began selling the idea of recording local unknowns he was faced with an entrenched Canadian attitude that anything Canadian, particularly in the arts, must be second rate.

"People just found it difficult to believe that someone in broadcasting would want to hire Canadian musicians to make recordings." Mr. Potts says recalling those early promotional years. "But we just wanted to do for Canadians what the Americans had been doing for their artists since the year dot, that is to give performers an opportunity to perform."

Now, Mr. Potts views the Toronto-based CTL as a major boost to stations which, as of Monday, must fill their prime-time musical programming with at least 30 per cent Canadian talent.

(This 30 per cent Canadian content ruling is laid down by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, regulatory body of the Canadian broadcasting industry, and applies only to AM stations.)

Today, the CTL has a library of 139 albums with 1,676 selections, 370 of which are Canadian compositions. So far, it has spent close to $1 million employing and promoting Canadian talent and distributes records to its radio station subscribers across the country for a nominal fee that ranges from $25 to $125 a month. These fees account for about a third of the CTL budget.

"By paying a fee, the stations help us make more records, which in turn, helps us develop more Canadian talent," says Mr. Potts. All the money received in fees is used to produce more records, many of which reach the public through commercial distributors.

Mal Thompson, manager of CTL's music services, says that since the new regulations were announced there "has been a steady procession of unknowns coming in for interviews and with their own tapes for us to hear."

Mr. Potts, who got his start in radio in Regina in the 1930s, recalls that no Canadian records were sold or heard until the late 1950s, except for a few by artists such as band leader Mart Kenny or Wilf Carter.

"But if you can write a song about St. Louis, you can write one about Halifax," he says expounding a philosophy that the library will work.

The CTL cut its first album July 27 1962, two records of 24 selections of music conducted by Johnny Burt of Toronto. In the next two months, 10 more records were made, which became the nucleus of the library.

Therapy Session Fascinating

NEW YORK (AP) — An "encounter session," 17 hours of nonstop exploration of personal hangups in a group was the vivid subject of a candid report on the public broadcasting stations Monday night.

Part of the Realities series, the 90 minute program showed 10 troubled men and women ranging from the early 20s to middle age, gathered informally in a living room setting. The ensuing activities were guided by a psychologist, Dr. Mark Goldstein. His voice was heard occasionally as he briefed the television audience on what was going on or about results he sought.

The session started quietly with the participants, all strangers, sitting around, nervous and remote. At that point the impatient viewer might have strayed to another channel, which would have been a mistake. Once nerves and shyness were overcome, it exploded into real-life drama.

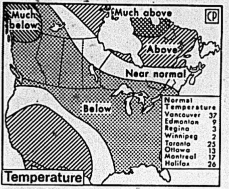
The session, based on " a new theory and technique of psychotherapy." Goldstein explained. opened up when a black woman suddenly said: "For the first time in many years, I'm not color-conscious today at all."

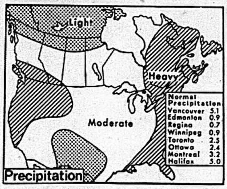
A young man shyly reported: "I like people, everybody." This provoked a tirade from an aggressive girl, who wound up in tears confessing great insecurity and a conviction that nobody liked her.

After that women spoke freely of marital problems. A woman separated from her husband talked of loneliness. A man admitted he wanted his wife to remain overweight because he was afraid he would lose her if she were more attractive.

There were furious arguments and at one point, blows were almost struck. At another, a man and woman skipped hand-in-hand around the room. Hysterical moments of merriment would suddenly die into silence or explode in a torrent of tears. The object of the session was to get these people to feel emotions—fear, anger, pain or love, it did not matter—and talk about them.

The program was long, but once the viewer got into the thing, it was intensely absorbing.





Cold Weather Ahead

Below-normal temperatures are expected for most of Western Canada, Ontario and southern Quebec during the next 30 days, according to the long-range outlook of the United States weather bureau. Temperatures in the rest of Quebec and the Atlantic provinces will be near or above normal. Precipitation will be moderate to heavy in all parts of the country except extreme northern parts of British Columbia and the prairie provinces. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occurr. (CP Newsmap)

Entertainment Roundup

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — Folk singer Glenn Yarbrough says he will chuck his career to sail around the world, then open a school for underprivileged children.

"I never have liked show business anyway," the 40-year-old Yarbrough said Monday.

Yarbrough, who gained his fame with the Limeliters of the late 1950s said his 40-foot sailboat and the bus he travels in while on tour then will be sold and the proceeds used to help finance a school for poor children.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jean Claude Killy, the champion skier, will star in a Hollywood-financed romantic adventure movie.

John Calley, production chief of Warner Brothers, announced Monday the French athlete will play the lead in Schuss, produced by Edward Rissien and directed by George Englund.

He won three gold medals in the 1968 Olympic Winter Games.

LONDON (CP) — A shapely chanteuse from Montreal known simply as Nanette began a three-week cabaret engagement at the Savoy Hotel Monday night.

It was the British debut for the American-born 23-year-old singer—real name Nanette Workman, who started in cabaret at Expo '67 and has since worked most of the clubs in Quebec as well as appearing on Canadian television.

Television Shows Aid Conservation

NEW YORK (AP) — Television has become a loud and powerful ally in the conservation movement, calling attention dramatically to disappearing or endangered species and explaining in concrete and easily understood sequences the weaknesses and breaks in the vital ecological chain.

Friday night, Elephant Country on NBC reported on the dwindling herds of Africa. Saturday, Arthur Godfrey's America: the Everglades on ABC was concerned with that vast Florida swamp land. Despite a difference in subject matter and the fact the locations were thousands of miles apart, there were remarkable similarities and a sense of urgency.

Elephant Country, with actor Cliff Robertson serving as narrator and participant in a camera hunt, told of the herds decreasing because of a year-long drought in the area and of so many animals crowding into Kruger National Park that the sanctuary was unable to feed them. Man was at the heart of the crisis, draining water from rivers vital to the herds, severing one big river with a dam thus permitting only a trickle in the water holes, and deliberately burning over acres for agriculture and driving out or killing the animals.

Man was also the villain in Godfrey's special, diverting water from the swamp to other uses: seeking to cut a canal across the state, draining and developing swamp lands into building sites.

His statistics were awesome: "When water covered the Everglades, there were 1½ million birds here; now there are 50,000 birds left—one for every 300 before."

Total effect of these nature programs—Jacques Cousteau's undersea series, Bill Burrud's Animal World and Marlin Perkins' Wild Kingdom—has to be important in the awareness of viewers to the problem.

Council Declines Shelter Action

Bus stop shelters to protect people from the elements while waiting for their buses are needed in many locations in Belleville.

This is the feeling of Don Dawson, 209 Haig Road, who in a letter to council suggests that a shelter be provided at the intersection of Haig Road and Bridge Street.

And Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffrey suggests that another location might be at the corner of Leland Drive and Palmer Road.

Alderman Jack Ireland said bus route shelters were a good idea but noted experience in other centres was that such structures were prone to vandalism.

He suggested the matter might be referred to the traffic committee.

Ultimately the letter was referred to the transit commission but aldermen didn't want it considered as a recommendation that shelters be put up all around the city.

"Maybe some local businesses or other generous soul might find it in their hearts to provide the shelters," was the suggestion of Alderman Gerald Joyce.

Instructors Say Bill 'Oppressive'

TORONTO — A brief prepared by a Loyalist College faculty member criticizing proposed provincial legislation which would deny the right of community college teachers to strike, received commendation here Sunday from a newly-formed association representing nearly 4,000 college teachers.

The association later passed a resolution condemning the legislation — Bill 217 introduced in the legislature during the past session.

The bill would prevent teachers at community colleges from going on strike for any reason and would empower a tribunal "to enter any premises where work is being done or has been done," and "interrogate any person respecting any matter."

Earl Naismith, president of the Loyalist faculty association, said faculty representatives from 19 of Ontario's 20 colleges voted on the resolution.

Mr. Naismith said the Loyalist brief was "cited as a model of constructive criticism on the legislation."

The brief, he said, was prepared by Ray Michol, vice-president of Loyalist faculty association.

The new Ontario association, formed in Toronto on the weekend, described Bill 217 as "oppressive in nature" and would affect the individual rights of government employees who were subject to the act.

At Home Scheduled

Loyalist College's communication arts — one of the college's most popular programs — will go on public show Jan. 27.

The department's facilities — including television and radio units — will be available for viewing at an open house from 3 p.m. to 10 p.m.

A sound-and-light show also will be presented in the student lounge.

Communication arts, one of Loyalist's largest courses teaches television, journalism, photography, radio, motion pictures and advertising.

Among latest projects of its students is a special display Jan. 21 at the Ontario Art Gallery.

The display will utilize multi-media facilities, including television, film slides and music.

Sampling the Wares

Belleville has jumped on the health food bandwagon with a new retail outlet on upper Front Street. Mrs. Olga Dano, an early customer, tries a whole grain breakfast cereal offered by Frank Quinn, owner of the County Health Food Centre.

Snowmobile Licences Pass Sales for Autos

A double garage and two cars in the driveway used to be both a status symbol and some kind of an indication of affluence.

But times have changed and for residents in this latitude at least, the auto has been forced to bow to the new-fangled snowmobile.

Instead of autos cluttering up the driveways it is now the motorized snow sleds and the indication of affluence is two or more of the machines at the sides of the house.

Snowmobiling is a real family sport and for many families two of the machines just aren't enough.

This, of course, is all to the good for dealers and for snowmobile registrations.

George Olsen, Belleville auto licence issuer, says that only two snow buggies are really passe for some families.

"We have had families come in and buy licences for three, four and even five of the machines," states Mr. Olsen.

In fact, so far this season, Mr. Olsen has sold more licences for snowmobiles than for automobiles.

"We have sold more than 2,000 licences this season and practically all of them have been for Belleville and the immediate district," he said.

Sales of auto licences so far have been comparatively slow with only about 16 per cent of the normal 12,000 sets of plates having been passed over the counter.

But the deadline for new auto plates is February 28 and before many more weeks roll around, business is certain to pick up.

'You Are What You Eat' Say Health Food Fans

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Chemicals are taking the joy out of eating.

And this, in a nutshell, is the basis for the growth of the health food industry in Canada.

There's no doubt the production and sale of health food is booming and a recent spate of articles in Canadian magazines hasn't hurt the business.

Health food fans and the books that document the "natural foods" diet have been around for a long time, but it's only in the last two years that they surfaced in the public consciousness.

The reason, says Frank Quinn, proprietor of Belleville's newest retail outlet, County Health Food Centre at 321 Front St., is the cyclamate scare and the campaign of Ralph Nader in the United States against slipshod food processing.

Mr. Quinn believes people are running scared before the barrage of conflicting reports about the dangers of food additives and preservatives.

"Since the government banned cyclamates (an artificial sweetener used in diatetic foods) because it caused cancer in rats, the public wonders what chemical additives in refined foods will turn out to be harmful next," says Mr. Quinn.

Alarm hasn't spread to the masses, adds Mr. Quinn.

Health food devotees are a select group, representing a cross-section of the public.

They are united in their belief that "you are what you eat" and the simpler and less refined the food the better.

Some even go so far as to refuse to eat fruits and vegetables grown with a boost from chemical fertilizers. So Mr. Quinn is searching out local farmers who use only animal manures, "Green fertilizers" and various ground rocks to enrich their soils.

So far, a newspaper advertisement has turned up six people who practise organic gardening. Mr. Quinn is contacting them with the hope that eventually he will be able to offer organically grown produce from local sources in his store.

"They tell me that 11 crops have to be taken from a given piece of ground before it is free from chemical fertilizers," says Mr. Quinn.

Like most health food retailers, Mr. Quinn sees himself as more than just a merchant.

His aim is to provide a community service, through a lending library of nutrition books, a notice board posted with the latest information on food and health and advice to customers based on his experience as a health food user.

Illness first lead Mr. Quinn to health foods, and eventually to Belleville from Toronto where he lived and worked until recently.

This city was familiar to him as his father's hometown and he had often visited relatives here. So when he decided to get out of Toronto and start a business of his own, Belleville was an immediate choice.

"Success in this business lies in communicating with the peole in the area and finding out what they want," says Mr. Quinn.

In a short two days of operation interest has been high.

Tastes differ across the country, and already a few trends are showing up here.

Brown rice sold out in the store's first day of operation, as did the whole grain bread. Honey from various blossoms, including buckwheat, is also popular locally, Mr. Quinn finds, and his unbleached, stone-ground white flour also sold out the first day of operation.

Even a basic like water comes in for attention by health food devotees. Because he had heard that "Belleville water leaves something to be desired", Mr. Quinn is selling spring water from St. Catharine's at 30 cents a gallon. Regular home delivery is available.

Kenneth Smith Named Warden

County council representative from Elzevir and Grimsthorpe townships and last year's chairman of the county council personnel committee, Reeve Kenneth Smith has been elected as 1971 warden for Hastings County.

The selection of the new warden to succeed Reeve John Wilkes of Marmora and Lake Townships, was made at this morning's inaugural session of council.

The last warden from the combined townships of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe was in 1958 when Lloyd H. Price was county council head.

Five reeves were in the running for this year's wardenship. They were Reeves Smith; Carm Gibson, Tyendinaga; Mrs. Barbara Allen of Tweed; Jack M. Bush of Sidney and Merton Hamm of Limerick.

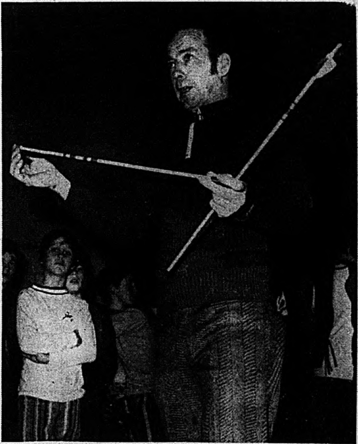
Complaint Goes To Department

Dissatisfaction caused by delays in receiving grants from the Ontario Department of Education has prompted Prince Edward trustees to direct a letter to the department voicing a complaint.

A board spokesman said today, "The books are closed for the year and ready for the auditor." He added that grant regulations have not been received.

He said that "the picture was good", in connection with the books now ready for presentation.

Archery – Sport Scores a Bullseye With Young Bellevillians



Instructor John Widdicks Explains a Point

Beginners Are Enthusiastic About Archery Course

Archery, as a community pastime, has scored a swift bullseye for the city's recreation department.

Last year the department — joining hands with the Belleville Archery Club — added archery to its programs and launched a series of introductory lessons for beginners.

Last night it re-opened the classes.

Today, club and department officials were pondering possibilities of re-arranging schedules to accommodate the unexpected response of eager new students of the sport.

Floyd Lawrence, one of the club's founders and instructor for the course, said about 40 new pupils were anticipated when registrations opened for last night's first-of-eight lessons at Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Today, registrations look closer to 70.

"The response was tremendous," says Floyd. "All we have to do now is to find time slots and work out schedules to get that many people shooting without delay."

There's even the possibility an extra night may have to be added to the course — which takes beginners from 11 years up.

Added to the 70 fledglings are about 30 archers who took last year's introductory sessions and are now back for advanced practice and instruction.

Floyd advances several reasons for the program's success — an upsurge in the popularity of archery; much groundwork by the club, which has been giving lessons to scattered groups like school students and scouts in recent times; the fact 1972 is an Olympic Games year.

Floyd believes that an "enterprising" student, starting now and applying himself to a "good, solid year" of training could draw a bead on membership on an Olympic archery team.

Such an accomplishment, he admits, would "take deep dedication. But it's feasible."

Karen Could Cut Impressive Figures of World Championship

WINNIPEG (CP) — The sport that has brought home more international gold medals for Canada than any other appears on the threshold of producing yet another world champion.

Optimism was the dominant feeling on the eve of the 1971 Canadian figure skating championships which opened today with most of the discussion centring on Karen Magnussen.

"If she skates as well at the 1971 world championships as she did last year, she'll be the world champion," says Hugh Glyn, executive manager of the Canadian Figure Skating Association.

Miss Magnussen finished fourth last year after missing the 1969 event due to stress fractures to both legs.

"She blew her first two figures, appeared to regain her form during the third figure and was back to her form for the final three," Glyn said.

"With only half of her figures, she still barely missed third to the U.S. girl, Julie Noyes."

Linda Brauckman, coach of the 18-year-old Vancouver girl, says her star pupil is "skating better now than ever before."

Mrs. Brauckman said the 1971 world championships will be Miss Magnussen's best chance yet for the gold medal.

The defending women's singles champion heads the largest field ever assembled for a Canadian championship.

Nearly 200 competitors are on hand Douglas Peckinpaugh, CFSA president, said, "due mainly to the increase in the novice event, which speaks well for the future of skating in Canada."

"It is the first time I can remember when we've had skaters from Newfoundland."

Mr. Glyn said the growing entry list for the national competition could "present us with a pleasant problem in the future."

Only one 1970 champion is not back to defend his title—David McGillivray of Toronto. The 1970 singles titlist has given up amateur skating to study medicine at the University of Toronto.

Two southern Ontario skaters are expected to compete for the vacant title. Toller Cranston of Toronto and Ron Shaver of Hamilton finished second and third, respectively, behind McGillivray last year.

"Wait until you see this Shaver," said Mr. Glyn. "The only male skater who ever really excited me was Don Jackson, but this Ron Shaver. . . ."

"In France last summer they said he's the greatest freestyle skater since Don Jackson. I expect to see him on the podium in 1972," Glyn had said during a previous visit to Winipeg "but not necessarily first. If we can get him to keep up his education and skating, he should be, without a doubt, the 1973 champion."

Among the defending champions are the brother and sister act from Peterborough, Ont.; Sandra and Val Bazic and the pairs titlists and dance champions Mary Church of Toronto and David Sutton of Guelph, Ont.

Only top-ranked Canadian not competing is Cathy Lee Irwin of Toronto. The 17-year-old runner-up to Miss Magnussen last year suffered a fractured pelvis in a skating mishap last w while training at Colora Springs, Colo.

The compulsory figures of th novice men's, ladies, dance an pairs as well as the junic dance were to be complete today.

The competition, being held i three arenas in Winipeg, con cludes Sunday with the freeskat ing in the senior dance, men's and pairs events.

The Canadian team to com pete in the 1971 North Americar championships being held in Pe terborough Feb. 4-6 will be se lected following competition.

For the first time in NHL history the All-Star Game will feature three brother combinations, the Hulls, Mahovlichs and Espositos.

Sports On All Fronts

MONTREAL (CP) — Jim Fanning, Montreal Expos' general manager, announced Monday that catcher Ron Brand and pitcher Jim Britton have returned signed contracts for the coming season. Brand and Britton are the 13th and 14th members of the National League club's 35-man winter roster to sign.

* * *

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Jean Beliveau is expected to resume practising with Montreal Canadiens today. The Montreal captain was forced to retire after hurting his leg in Sunday's 4-4 National Hockey League tie against the Sabres in Buffalo. A club spokesman said Monday Beliveau had been sent to hospital here for examination, but that X-rays revealed no fracture, "just a severe bruise."

* * *

ADELBODEN, Switzerland (AP) — Patrick Russel of France was the easy winner of a 19-nation giant slalom race Monday, but lost his World Cup men's lead to second-place Gustavo Thoeni of Italy. Russel's total time for the two-leg event was 2:23.47, almost 1½ seconds ahead of Thoeni's 2:24.95, with French downhill ace Henri Duvillard third in 2:25.43. Karl Schranz of Austria, the World Cup defending champion, missed Monday's events because of a heel injury.

* * *

MONTREAL (CP) — Donato Paduano of Montreal, Canadian welterweight boxing champion, Monday accepted a $15,000 guarantee or 20 per cent of the gate to defend his title Feb. 18 against Clyde Gray of Toronto in the 18,000-seat Montreal Forum. Promoter Regis Levesque had previously offered Paduano, ranked No. 3 in the world, $10,000 for the bout. However, Roger Larivee, the champion's manager, turned down the offer. The bout will be over the 12-round distance. Paduano now has a 22-1 won-lost record following his recent defeat by world lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland. Gray is 28-1. The Toronto fighter lost his only decision to former lightweight champion Eddie Perkins of Chicago.

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont., who has already received an invitation to appear in the Masters golf tournament at Augusta in April, has been ranked fourth among all amateur golfers in America by Golf Digest magazine. The magazine ranks the Kitchener Westmount golfer behind Lanny Wadkins of Virginia, Allen Miller, the Canadian amateur champion from Pensacola, Fla., and Arizona's Howard Twitty.

Buffalo May Keep Bills

BUFFALO (AP) — Ralph C. Wilson Jr., owner of Buffalo Bills, and Erie County executive B. John Tutuska met privately for more than an hour Monday concerning construction of a stadium that would keep the National Football League team in this city.

The two issued a statement afterward that said the session was "entirely of a preliminary nature" and indicated they would meet again later this week.

"Mr. Wilson feels that it is really up to the county and the county legislature to determine wha type and size of stadium to construct," the statement said, adding:

"The Bills would like a sadium that would be comparable and competitive with other stadiums in the country."

Wilson said last week he would move the Bills to another city unless the county made a definite commitment within 60 days to build a replacement for antiquated, 45,000-seat War Memorial Stadium.

Wilson met last week with public officials in Seattle and with the head of a Memphis group regarding possible transfer of the Bills to their cities.

A $50-million domed stadium was proposed for a site in suburban Lancaster four years ago, but the project has been all but scrapped because of controversies over location, management and rising cost.

The county legislature is to meet Tuesday to deal with a resolution that the dome be declared officially dead.

Wilson has been a strong supporter of an 80,000-seat open-air stadium.

Eagleson Resigns From Association

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Alan Eagleson anounced Monday he will resign today as executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association.

His successor is Michael Canon, a graduate from Halifax's St. Mary's University whom Eagleson himself hired for the job.

"My decision was made some time ago and I have quietly interviewed about 15 people for the position," Eagleson said in an interview Monday.

"The association has grown to such proportions that I just couldn't spend as much time on it as I wanted to," said the man who, in less than four years, turned the association into an organization respected by league club owners and even the most reluctant NHL general manager.

While "Cannon will be doing the day-to-day work on behalf of the association . . . I'll still be available for consultation whenever he needs it."

The 36-year-old Toronto lawyer, who is also president of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, has been responsible for initiating pension and insurance plans for NHL players, establishing an emergency fund for former players who after they leave hockey fall upon bad times, and getting owners to agree to sign players to contracts before the opening of trainig camp.

Also among his achievements with the association are the licensing program which produces for the NHLPA an annual profit of $100,000 and the American Airlines golf tournament which helps raise between $25,000 and $35,000 annually for charity.

"We had a lot of problems when we started," Eagleson recalled.

"At first I was being accused of a conflict of interest," he said, referring to his additional legal role as an arbitrator in player contracts.

"Finally I convinced the owners that I was in this for the good of hockey and not for the benefit of Robert Alan Eagleson. . . .

"I assured them that the day I'd give any player or group an advantage because of my position, I'd back away from it."

He spoke of Punch Imlach, who in 1967 as coach and general manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs "tried to break up the association by telling the Maple Leaf players that they couldn't be loyal to him and still remain members of the association," and wouldn't allow association meetings in the Maple Leaf Gardens.

Now, with Imlach general manager of the Buffalo Sabres, Eagleson says he meets no objections to holding meetings in Buffalo.

"I went to Buffalo a few days ago and Punch was on the ice practising with the team. I asked him where we could hold our meeting and he told me anywhere we wanted. After the meeting I had a pleasant chat with him.

Trade Rumors Abound At All-Star Break

BOSTON (CP) — While the all-stars were receiving their honors at Monday night's National Hockey League all-star dinner, trade rumors, most of which ~~had no~~ foundation, were rampant in hotel lobbies.

And Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, who resigned his position officially today, threatened legal action against Toronto Maple Leafs if they don't trade his client, centre Mike Walton, within a week.

Walton, who has been certified too ill to play again with the Leafs, was mentioned prominently in the trade rumors. Leaf general manager Jim Gregory could not be reached for confirmation.

Nor could his Philadelphia counterpart, Keith Allen, whose Flyers were said to be interested in Walton, defenceman Brian Glennie and goalie Bruce Gamble in exchange for goaltender Bernie Parent.

Gregory and Marcel Pelletier, director of player personnel with the Flyers, were closeted before the dinner which precedes tonight's 24th NHL all star game at Boston Garden.

The game will be carried by CBC TV's national network starting at 8:30 p.m. EST.

Gregory was also reported to have been in touch with St. Louis Blues, but Sid Salomon III, Blues vice-president, denied there was any trade business discussed.

Eagleson, who explained his decision not to remain a full-time employee of the NHLPA was based on his desire to spend more time with his law practice and family, said of the Walton situation that had been dormant for almost two weeks:

"I'm not going to see a kid destroyed because they (Toronto) feel they can't make a good deal for him."

Walton left the team Dec. 2 with what was later diagnosed as a depressive illness. An independent psychiatrist, appointed by NHL president Clarence Campbell, suggested that in the best interests of the player he should not play again in a Leaf uniform.

Eagleson said he would continue to negotiate players' contracts, but his full-time duties would be handled by an executive secretary, probably Michael Cannon of Ottawa, a graduate of Halifax's St. Mary's University, whom Eagleson recommended for the position.

Boston Bruins' Bobby Orr went through the formality of carting off four individual awards at Monday night's dinner, the most ever amassed by a player in one year.

The 22-year-old defenceman was officially presented with the Art Ross Trophy as the league's top scorer in 1969-70; Hart Memorial Trophy as the most valuable player; James Norris Trophy as the outstanding defenceman, and the Conn Smythe Trophy as the top performer in Boston's Stanley Cup victory over St. Louis last spring.

GORDIE HOWE

Expected To Play

Tony Esposito, Chicago Black Hawks sophomore goalie, won two individual awards—the Calder Trophy as the league's top rookie last season and the Vezina Trophy as the goaltender allowing the fewest goals against during the season.

Other individual trophy winners were:

Phil Goyette of Buffalo Sabres, winner of the Lady Byng Trophy, as the player best exhibiting ability and sportsmanship while with St. Louis last year, and Pit Martin of Chicago, the Bill Masterton Trophy as the player who best exemplifies perseverence, sportsmanship and dedication to the game of hockey as seen by the NHL Writers' Association.

Tonight's game will feature three brother acts.

With Chicago now in the West Division after re-alignment, the Esposito brothers will be facing each other—Boston's Phil, the league's top sharpshooter with 42 goals in 44 games, going for the East, against brother Tony, the West's goaltender.

Brothers Pete and Frank Mahovlich, both with Montreal Canadiens, will line up for the East against the Hull brothers, Bobby and Dennis, of Chicago in the West colors.

His starting lines will have Red Berenson of St. Louis at centre for Chicago's Bobby Hull and Chico Maki and Stan Mikita between Chicago team-mate Dennis Hull and the Blues' Gary Sabourin.

The third line will have Chicago's Pit Martin between rookie Greg Polis of Pittsburgh Penguins, a replacement for injured Penguin Ken Schinkel, and Bill Flett of Los Angeles Kings, while Philadelphia's Bobby Clarke will pivot Danny Grant of Minnesota North Stars and the Blues' Tim Ecclestone.

Doug Roberts of California Golden Seals flew in Monday to represent California on the West team after team-mate Carol Vadnais was sidelined with a thumb fracture.

Another all-star selection, Boston's John McKenzie, was replaced by team-mate Eddie Westfall after McKenzie dislocated his shoulder against Toronto Sunday night.

Gordie Howe, 42-year-old veteran defenceman in his 25th year with Detroit Red Wings, will dress for his 22nd all-star game despite an ailing right elbow.

Howe at first turned down the invitation to play for the East.

"He'll dress for the game, but whether he plays will depend on whether the elbow is sore." Ned Harkness Detroit's general manager said Monday.

Fairways Send Caine 'Forget-Me-Nots' in 3-3 Tie with Cougars

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

COBOURG — If Mike J. Caine was harboring some less-than-fond memories of one Belleville Fairway before last night's Eastern Ontario Junior B contest, there are a couple of others that the Cougar netminder would just as soon forget.

Caine, possibly remembering a crushing check thrown by Brian O'Coin that levelled the Cobourg twinetender when he left his net to clear a loose puck in a Dec. 14th meeting between the two teams, tangled with the Belleville centre in a first period melee that saw two players and Cobourg coach Jon Fisher evicted from the game.

Although Caine, with a little help from his friends, managed to even his score with O'Coin, a couple of other old tormenters combined to prevent Cobourg from taking a home ice victory.

Left winger Joe Clarke, whose last period goal in the Dec. 14 meeting in Cobourg had given the Fairways a comeback win, tallied again in the final frame to pull his team to within one goal after the Cougars had built up a 3-1 lead.

John Mulvihill evened matters with less than three minutes remaining when his bullet drive from the blueline caught the top right hand corner of the net, allowing the visitors to come out with a 3-3 tie and remain two points behind Cobourg in the battle for the final playoff spot.

In the first meeting between the teams in Cobourg this season, Mulvihill had sparked a Belleville comeback with two goals and three assists in the 5-5 contest.

Cobourg dominated play for most of the game, allowing the visitors to draw many of the costly penalties that had hurt the Cougars in their previous encounters.

Most of the action in a scoreless first period came at the 15.06 mark as Caine was skating to his bench on a delayed penalty call.

"I was watching the play when he skated by and whacked me one", said O'Coin of the incident, "when I saw he wasn't going to get a penalty I decided to go after him."

Unfortunately for the Belleville pivot he chose a spot directly in front of the Cobourg players bench to start the festivities. O'Coin was belted by two or three different Cougars before Meagher jumped into the fray, and in turn received a few whacks.

Meagher and Wayne Helps of Cobourg were ejected for being the parties involved in the fight, while Fisher was given the gate for some overzealous arguing with referee Don Ogden.

Belleville's best scoring chances came on Meagher's point blast that Tim Yohn just failed to cash in the rebound and a partially screened point shot by Mulvihill on which Caine made a fine glove save.

Standout centre Bruce Sherwin showed that manpower advantage meant little to him with a pair of second period goals. The Cobourg speedster walked in to beat Jury with a low shot on a Cougar power play, and later stole the puck from Danny Lupenette and repeated the performance with his team playing a man short.

Lupenette got Belleville's only goal of the second period tucking a rebound under Caine after Dave Ferguson had rattled a shot off the cross bar.

Ron Jury came up with some fine puckstopping of his own in the latter minutes of the frame blocking a whistling point shot by Harry Livingston and robbing Al LeBlanc on two good scoring chances.

Mike Caine, the only player in the league to wear colored skates, managed to steal the spotlight away from his namesake in the Cobourg net by putting the home team ahead 3-1 with just over eight minutes to play in the game.

Clarke's goal came on a fine individual effort as he skirted the Cougar defence and jammed in his own rebound after Caine had made the initial save. Minutes later, the Cobourg goalie raced out to poke the puck away from Clarke and prevent a similar play.

Mulvihill's tying goal came after MacDonald had been nabbed for holding and Lowe and Yohn received major penalties for a battle in front of the Cobourg net.

The Belleville rearguard fed the puck to Ferguson on the other point, before taking the return pass and beating Caine cleanly.

Kevin Dockrill played a hard hitting game on the Fairway blue line, while up front, Dave Ferguson performed well in a penalty killing role.

Quick as A Cougar

Cobourg Cougar goalie Mike J. Caine stretches to glove a hard drive from Dave Ferguson of Belleville in last night's Eastern Ontario Junior B action. Caine's standout puckstopping was matched by Ron Jury at the other end as the Fairway goalie faced 39 shots in the 3-3 bout.

Long and Short of It

Belleville's economy-size centre Danny Lupenette battles with lanky Cobourg rearguard John Gutteridge during their Eastern Ontario Junior B contest in Cobourg last night. Lupenette counted on goal in the 3-3 contest that kept the Fairways two points back of Cobourg in the battle for the league's final playoff position.

Mo-Hawks Plot Trip Tonight

The answer to the question "Which Way Am I Travelling?" could very well be answered for the Belleville Mo-Hawks tonight.

The Belleville Senior A entry had climbed as high as fourth in the league standings before weekend losses to Galt and Oakville dropped them into fifth spot.

With Kingston only one point back of the Mo-Hawks and Oakville three points ahead, tonight's meeting with the Aces is a crucial one for Belleville.

The Mo-Hawks will definitely be without the services of scoring leader Doug Senior for tonight's action. The shifty pivot suffered a badly bruised back in the weekend action and it is not yet known when he will be able to return to the lineup.

DOUG SENIOR

Coach Dave Jones isn't sure whether or not he will be able to call up a replacement for Senior from the Picton Intermediate B's. "We used to be able to use players from these teams all season, but the ruling was changed," observed Jones, "I'll have to get in touch with the OHA today and find out if we can get a replacement. If not we'll just have to play shorthanded."

The only set line for tonight's bout will be the George Wayne McConnell threesome, which has been playing outstanding hockey of late.

Steve Rexe will be back in goal after receiving a rest in Sunday's 9-2 loss to Oakville.

Game time tonight at the Belleville Memorial Arena is 8:45 p.m.

Mustangs Stampeded

The Mustangs were stampeded to their second loss of the season last night as Mulroneys Sunoco pulled of a 6-1 Gashouse League upset.

Dave Middleton engineered the upset by counting three goals and an assist. Other goalgetters were Larry Fritz and Ralph Brant.

Tom Woodley scored the lone goal for the first place Mustangs who drew three penalties against two for the winners.

Things went more according to plan in the other contest with the second place Merchants picking up a 4-1 win

Brian Smith led the winners with a pair of goals getting help from Carl Boomhower and Wally Istead.

Belvedere Nips Stinsons

A pair of late goals carried the Belvedere Hotelmen to a 4-2 Quinte Hockey League win over Stinsons last night while in the other game played, DCA Transfer remained winless by dropping a decision to Central Taxi by the same score

Gene Francis tallied the winning goal for the league leading Hotelmen while Bill Goodfellow's second goal of the game provided insurance.

Rick Denard had opened the scoring for Stinsons with Elmer Cain replying for Belvedere. Bruce Symons scored the other goal for the losers. The Hotelmen drew the only penalty of the entire contest.

It looked for a while as though DCA would finally break into the win column building up a 2-0 lead with just 15 minutes remaining in the game.

However Al Walker counted twice and Andy Prudden and Ted Schwager scored the others to give the second place Taximen the win. Bill Nolan and Jim Drummond had scored for the losers.

Haywood In NBA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Controversial basketball star Spencer Haywood won court approval Monday to continue playing with Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association until trial of his anti-trust suit against the league.

U.S. district court Judge Warren J. Ferguson granted a preliminary injunction to Haywood and set a trial date of March 2.

At the same time, the judge said that "a professional athlete cannot be used and treated as merchandise."

The NBA, however, will go to appellate court in San Francisco Tuesday arguing that the lower court did not have jurisdiction in the case.

Haywood, 21, originally signed with Denver Rockets of the American Basketball Association as a hardship case after his first year at the University of Detroit. The former Olympian became disenchanted at Denver despite a reported $1.9 million contract for six years and last Dec. 28 he signed with Seattle.

Bureau to Tell How Figures Are Adjusted

OTTAWA (CP) — The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today it will soon issue a new report on seasonally-adjusted labor force statistics, telling how the adjustments are made.

The latest employment report estimated that 538,000 people were unemployed at mid-December, out of a total labor force of 8,329,000. That meant 6.5 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in December, compared with 5.7 per cent in November and 4.7 in December, 1969.

But on a seasonally-adjusted basis, the bureau said, unemployment was 6.6 per cent, up from 6.5 in November. The seasonally-adjusted rate was 6.9 per cent last September and as high as 7.6 per cent in late 1960 and early 1961 when the actual rate swung between five and 11 per cent.

The bureau issued a special footnote to its employment reports today, trying to explain the philosophy behind the seasonal adjusment of employment and unemployment figures.

"Fluctuations in economic time series, such as unemployment rates are caused by seasonal, cyclical and irregular movements," the bureau said.

"A seasonally-adjusted series is one from which the seasonal movements have been eliminated."

The seasonal factors which affect employment and unemployment are regular annual events, such as the changes between winter and summer activity caused by the climate, crop cycles, holidays and vacation periods.

"A seasonally-adjusted series is one which has been modified for normal annual conditions (the seasonal component), but which retains both longer-term trends (the cyclical component) and other residual movements such as strikes or unusual weather conditions (the irregular component).

"The annual average of a seasonally-adjusted series is equal to the annual average of an unadjusted series, within a small fraction, because over the course of a year the seasonal factor averages unity (or averages out).

"Seasonal adjustment is an essential tool in business cycle analysis because it eliminates the seasonal element which tends to obscure the underlending trend cycle," the bureau said.

In brief, by its adjustment the bare employment and unemployment figures, the bureau tries to show what the trends are. Unemployment in Canada invariably hits a peak in January and February each year, and falls to a low point in the late summer. The seasonally-adjusted rate cuts through these peaks and valleys.

All the bureau wants to show by its seasonally-adjusted data is the long-term trend. The long-term trend is otherwise clouded by winter layoffs which regularly affect, say, the tourist industry, and peak summer employment in, for example, harvesting field crops.

DBS will shortly issue a new report on seasonally-adjusted labor force statistics covering the period 1954 to 1970.

It will show both unadjusted figures, with the factors used each year in making the adjustment, and one year of forecast factors.

Buses Collide, Four Are Injured

Four Belleville area people were injured yesterday morning following a collision on Bridge Street at the corner of Ritchie Ave. between a Belleville Transit Commission bus and a Rathbun Busline bus.

According to Chief Douglas Crosbie, the accident occured at 8:29 a.m. when a city bus driven by Leslie Shambo, of Lewis Street, stopped to take on a passenger at the Ritchie Ave.-Bridge Street bus stop.

The Rathbun bus, driven by Alfred Thomas Barr of Trenton then collided with the rear of the city bus.

Injured while boarding the city bus was Gwendolyn Gorman of Park Lane in Belleville who sustained a sore neck and shoulders.

Injured on the Rathbun bus were Barbara Thompson, 16, of RR 1 Carrying Place, Robert Jones, 19, of RR 1 Carrying Place and William Colton, 16, of RR 1 Consecon. All three sustained cuts and bruises.

Mr. Barr has been charged with careless driving in the incident.

Quebec Hopes to Make All Students Bilingual

QUEBEC (CP) — A master plan designed to improve and increase the teaching of French in the province's English-language schools was announced Monday by Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre.

Mr. Saint-Pierre told a news conference that new regulations, part of controversial language legislation enacted by the former Union Nationale government in 1969, will go into effect Sept. 1.

It means that subjects such as history and geography will eventually be taught in French, thereby serving a dual purpose—to teach French as well as the subject being taught.

This means that it will be impossible for English-speaking students to graduate from high school without a working knowledge of French, Mr. Saint-Pierre said. He also said that it is hoped that by 1977, all pupils entering secondary school will be bilingual.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market climbed fractionally in moderate mid-morning trading today as it entered its fourth consecutive gaining session.

On index, industrials were up .25 to 178.57, and base metals .09 to 92.72. Golds were down .17 to 166.49 and western oils .49 to 198.83.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 646,000 shares, up from 610,000 at the same time Monday.

Gains outnumbered losses 148 to 106 with 197 issues unchanged.

Beverages and steels led advancing sectors.

Twelve of the exchange's 17 sub-groups were higher.

Among rising issues, Falconbridge was up 1½ to $141, Dylex Diversified ⅜ to $6⅜, Westcoast Transmission ½ to $23, Algoma Steel ⅜ to $16⅜, Ranger ⅜ to $14⅜ and Central-Del Rio ⅛ to $12⅝.

Shaw Pipe was down ⅜ to $10½, Shell Canada ⅜ to $35, Brascan ⅜ to $16¼, Endako ¼ to $13½, Sherritt ⅛ to $17⅝ and Total Pete 10 cents to $7.35.

On index, industrials rose .77 to 178.32. Golds dropped 2.04 to 166.66, base metals .46 to 92.63 and western oils .63 to 199.32.

Volume was 2.54 million shares.

Gains outnumbered losses 294 to 234 with 230 issues unchanged.

Strongest sectors were banks, communication, geeral manufacturing, idustrial mining pipelines and steels.

Fourteen of the exchange's 17 sub-groups were higher.

Algoma Steel rose ½ to $16. The company reported 1970 net earnings of $2.03 a share, up from 79 cents in 1969.

Among other rising issues, General Dynamics was up 3⅞ to $23⅞, Falconbridge 2½ to $139½, United Funds Management 2¼ to $12¾, Ford of Canada 1¼ to $69, Versafoods 1¼ to $9⅜ and Koffler 1 to $11.

East Sullivan was down $1.05 to $3.70 and Sullivan Mining Group 70 cents to $3.90. The two companies say they will omit regular quarterly dividends of 12½ cents because of low metal prices.

Canadian Homestead lost 15 cents to $7.60 after reporting first-half net profit of four cents a share, down from seven cents in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Quality to Be Emphasized In '71 Santa Claus Parade

Emphasis on a smaller parade was announced last night at the annual meeting and election of officers for the Quinte Santa Claus Parade Committee.

Frank Foley, newly returned chairman of the committee, said that "we will try for a parade perhaps a bit smaller with as much quality as possible."

A special theme committee will be set up to hear opinions of area youngsters as to their preference in floats.

Setting their sights high, the committee hopes to use the Rose Bowl parade as an example of a theme parade.

Mr. Foley explained that the parade, although improving in quality, would use the extravaganza event as a guideline only.

Committee members agreed that they are in a better position now than at the same time last year.

"We've got an experienced qualified group now . . . last year was a year of learning for us," he said.

Midway through the planning stages, the name of the parade was changed to encompass the entire Quinte region for the 1970 parade.

Although several entries from outlying districts were featured, plans are under way to immediately contact interested parties outside of Belleville for the 1971 event.

There will be another tag day, a financial fund-raising event necessary for the success of the parade, which is scheduled for Dec. 4.

The committee will have to go through the financial review board and the city before holding the tag day.

"Although we will still have to scrounge, we are in a better position than last year," the chairman concluded.

The only new face on the committee is Ron Caswell, who has taken on the new position of second vice-chairman.

The committee hopes to advance members over the years, somewhat of a stepping-up procedure.

Returning executive members are John Lewards, 1st vice-chairman; Les Shore, treasurer; Peter Richardson, secretary; Don Foster, parade co-ordinator and Angus Duffy as parade marshal.

Other members of the committee agreed to continue for the 1971 event.

Mr. Foley extended appreciation on behalf of the committee to the Recreation and Arena Committee for use of the Ben Bleecker hall.

"We just have to have something like this hall for preparade assembly," he stated.

"Use of the hall made the parade possible."

The committee also expressed appreciation for help received from all interested parties.

"People from this area are warm and wonderful . . . you just have to ask for assistance."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Athlete's Foot Needs Treatment

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My son has been complaining of itching between the toes. We've been using some foot powder for the past two weeks, but it seems to be getting worse.

My husband says it's probably athlete's foot and nothing to worry about. He says leave it alone. Isn't there something to do except waiting until it gets better? — Mrs. J.

Comment: There's always something to do even though some patients find they're up against a stubborn infection. Athlete's foot — or, perhaps you prefer to call it by its technical name, dermatophytosis — is common in both children and adults.

In some schools one out of every two children is infected before the age of 10. In other large gatherings (among soldiers and college students) the involvement may be even higher.

The trouble usually appears between the skin of the toes, as this region is warm and moist. It becomes red, swollen, blistery and may begin to ooze and peel. The more the patient rubs and scratches to overcome the itching the more the infection takes hold.

In some cases it may last months or years — improving during the winter months and getting worse during the summer. Public showers in school gyms and in clubs are common breeding grounds for the fungus that causes athlete's foot.

I suggest, Mrs. J., that you convince your husband that a dermatologist should see your son — if only to try to keep the infection from spreading to others. He will prescribe special medications that are helpful and comforting. But don't give up on the treatment. As I said, the condition is stubborn.

Meanwhile, boil your son's socks after each wearing. Disinfect and change his shoes daily. Your husband is right. It's nothing to worry about — but neither is athlete's foot something to disregard.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: This will interest some of your bridge-playing readers. Some time back I recall one of your columns in which you warned that bridge was only a game. You said, that for good health's sake, it should not be taken too seriously.

Well, as many people do, I read and forgot! Until about a week ago, when I visited my doctor and found my blood pressure was way over 200.

I told him how excited I get when I play bridge (which is about three times a week) and he said, "If you don't have fun and feel relaxed better quit."

I followed his advice (and yours). Would you believe it, my pressure has already dropped 30 points? I hope some of your tense bridge-playing readers will follow suit. — Mr. H.

Comment: I hope so. And tense poker players and pinochle players — and those in any other indoor or outdoor sports that produce tension rather than relaxation, such as the golfer who flubs his drive and gets so mad.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: The other day I was out walking with my year - old granddaughter. We saw a neighbor's dog lying quietly in front of their house. They came out. I said, "Can Jenny pat your dog?" They said, "Of course. He's very gentle." They got into their car and left.

So I let the little one gently put her hand on the dog's side. Suddenly, without any warning, he growled and made a lunge for her hand. If he hadn't been facing the other way, the child would have been injured severely.

This is just a warning to other parents. It's cute to hear the little ones say "Bow-wow" when they see a dog and bring them over for a closer look. But better keep your distance. A strange dog is not always as predictable as a house pet.

Newfoundland Gripped In Mammoth Snowfall

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A state of emergency declared here at the height of an intense weekend winter storm ended at 6 a.m. today as workmen continued the job of cleaning up.

Most schools remained closed but many other disrupted activities were returning to normal in eastern Newfoundland.

The storm moved out to sea Monday after sweeping the island's eastern half with winds gusting to 70 miles an hour.

The wind blew a 20-inch snowfall into drifts—some 18 feet high—that blocked all roads east of Gander, bringing air and surface transportation to a halt.

One death was attributed to the storm and a search was to continue today for a man missing since Saturday night.

There was widespread minor damage but initial estimates by police, civic officials and businessmen indicated total loss was little more than $100,000.

Canadian National Railways said its trans-island bus service —stalled since the storm began Saturday night—would be back in full operation later today.

Air Canada and Eastern Provincial Airways expected regular schedules to be picked up during the day. Some flights arrived Monday night, the first since Saturday.

CN ferries plying between North Sydney, N.S. and Port Aux Basques, Nfld. were scheduled to sail overnight. The William Carson and Lief Eiriksson spent the weekend in port to avoid heavy seas and freezing spray in Cabot Strait.

Searchers on snowmobiles Monday found the body of Gerald Harnett, in his early 20s, who left his home in the Burin Peninsula community of Lord's Cove Saturday night to walk 10 miles to visit his girlfriend in Lamaline.

A search was to continue for Reginald Fiander, missing since he left Marystown Saturday night on a 35-mile trip to St. Lawrence. His abandoned car was found Sunday.

A baby was stillborn in a doctor's office at Harbour Grace, 65 miles west of here, after a snowplow tried to bring the mother to hospital.

Deputy Mayor Leonard Stirling declared St. John's in a state of emergency at the height of the storm Sunday night.

Mr. Stirling stressed the move was a preventative one to keep streets clear of traffic while plows were working.

PC Candidates Campaigning

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch suggested solutions to Ontario's unemployment problems Monday in campaign speeches in both Oshawa and St. Catharines.

He and the four other candidates seeking election to leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party were in different provincial centres Monday speaking to delegates to the leadership convention, only three weeks away.

A. B. R. Lawrence, financial and commercial affairs minister, spent part of the day in Toronto before going to St. Catharines.

Education Minister William Davis was in Hamilton, Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, split the day with private meetings in Parry Sound and Gravenhurst and Mines Minister Allan Lawrence held private meetings in Toronto.

Most candidates were expected to be in Sudbury tonight for the second of five all-candidates meetings. A third will be held in Windsor Thursday.

Mr. McKeough, however, was scheduled to be in Barrie today.

Both Bert Lawrence and Mr. Davis were also to be in North Bay before arriving in Sudbury tonight.

Mr. Welch, in his speechse Monday, said unemployed workers should be put to work on projects essential to Ontario, such as public housing for the elderly and municipal contract.

He also suggested an attack on foreign markets with exports to help create employment.

Bert Lawrence, also speaking in St. Catharines, said government services need restructuring to make them more reflective of human needs and qualities.

He said the government will obtain support only if it is working for the people.

"They will place their confidence in a party or government obviously and directly concerned with the quality of life and committed to its improvement."

In Hamilton, Mr. Davis told delegates not to expect an extension of grants to separate schools in the province beyond Grade 10.

He said he would not give hope for a change in government policy on separate school support if he is elected leader of the party.

Poor People Plan Marches

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Demonstrations by Canada's poor to dramatize their plight are being planned across the country for Jan. 25, organizers of low-income and welfare groups said Monday.

Many demonstrations are still in planning stages but most will include sit-ins and marches. One will conclude with the burning of Health Minister John Munro's white paper on income security.

Focal point of the demonstrations, conceived during a federally-sponsored poor people's conference in Toronto earlier this month, will likely be Parliament Hill.

Federal and provincial deputy ministers who have responsibility for welfare will meet in Ottawa Jan.25-27 and ministers Jan. 28-29. The meetings will be closed and not held in the Parliament buildings.

A spokesman for self-help groups from Ottawa and Hull, Que., said demonstrations are still at the planning stage but the main idea is for most Ottawa-Hull groups to march to Parliament Hill, possibly put on some skits and then try to get into the meetings. One item expected to be discussed at the meetings is the white paper.

In Toronto, people from 30 groups representing welfare recipients, low-income families, unemployed, students and others will demonstrate at the twin-towered Toronto-Dominion Centre.

"The reason we chose that location is that people have come to realize that places like the Toronto-Dominion Centre are symbols of wealth and power and wealth and power are the cause of their poverty," said John Mooney, a member of the Toronto committee, National Day of Protest.

In Montreal, a number of committees are meeting to map out strategy for combined French and English demonstrations at welfare offices although some feel the demonstrations won't be worthwhile.

Other Ontario cities where demonstrations are planned include Hamilton where there will be speeches, picketing of welfare offices and the burning of Mr. Munro's white paper.

In London, the poor have been asked to organize picket lines, sit-ins and sleep-ins at welfare and municipal offices but plans haven't been completed. Some organizers say there is a mixed reaction to the ideas.

In Peterborough, demonstrations are planned in front of city hall and government offices.

Demonstrators organized by United Workers, an unemployed group, will march on social services offices and hand out leaflets calling for better housing, more unemployment insurance benefits and lower taxes and living costs.

In Kingston, the city's poor will demonstrate in front of Finance Minister Edgar Benson's office and in St. Catharines, the Union of Unemployed will ask MP Jim McNulty (L—St. Catharines) to attend a meeting to answer questions on unemployment. A march to city hall will follow.

Picketing In Plazas Under Test

TORONTO (CP) — The right to picket businesses in shopping plazas was to be tested today as the Ontario Federation of Labor stepped into the wage dispute between A and P supermarkets and 2,000 of its workers.

A union statement said David Archer, president of the OFL, and another OFL official were to join the picket line outside an A and P store in Toronto.

Plaza owners in some locations called police Monday who ordered picketers to move outside the centre.

The OFL officials have advised the Ontario attorney-general of their intention and invited "the appropriate action on your part."

A union spokesman said members of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workers of North America were receiving co-operation from other unions.

He said the International Brotherhood of Teamsters had refused to cross union picket lines and that most deliveries to the 97 stores affected were being made by supervisory personnel.

A spokesman for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. said "very few" of the stores had been closed down by picketing.

However, union spokesmen said several stores in Lodon, Windsor and Hamilton had been closed.

The union's negotiating position is tied to an agreement signed with Steinberg's Ltd. last summer. Male A and P clerks earn $124 weekly, compared with $143.50 at other firms.

The strike began Thursday, three days after the chain entered the supermarket price war in the Toronto area.

Gasoline Sales, Leases, Probed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario committee on franchises began public hearings Monday with questions to oil company representatives about leases and sales arrangements with gasoline and service station operators.

The committee holding the three-day hearings was appointed last year by A. B. R. Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs and a candidate to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts.

K. W. Langdon, executive secretary of the Ontario Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association, told the committee 100 Esso dealers were locked in a room before being asked to sign up for a give-away promotion for Esso hockey broadcasts.

They were to contribute to the scheme according to their gallonage, payments ranging to $2,000.

He said when the dealers attempted to leave the room they found the doors guarded by Imperial Oil Ltd., employees.

"There were implied threats for those who didn't sign," Mr. Langdon said.

He told the committee he received the information from one dealer and later confirmed it with others.

S. G. M. Grange, committee chairmen, said he is not certain service stations operate as franchises. In fact, he said, the word franchise as a business term has never been defined—in Canadian legislation.

A Shell Canada Ltd. official told the committee his company does not establish and protect a trading area for any of its lease-operated stations. The number of stations in an area is left to "competitive forces," and no protection is provided for the lease-holder, Mr. C. G. Kappler said.

However, his company would not open a second station in an area adequately served.

Mr. Kappler, retail manager, said gasoline sold to a subsidiary, Beaver, which operates as a discount service station, and to other cut-rate gas stations, is not the same as that sold by Shell operators. While the basic product is the same, not all the additives are included.

Franchising is a system in which one person or company authorizes another to distribute goods or services under a marketing plan devised for him.

Much of the questioning centered on complaints from service station operators about treatment by oil companies whose products they sell.

In a majority of cases, service stations are owned by oil companies and operated by lease holders.

Mr. Kappler said his company would object to any attempt to fix trading areas for service stations, and would resist any attempt to permit lease-holders to bargain collectively on such things as rents.

Prov. W. A. W. Neilson, committee counsel, said service station operators complain that while their leases bind them to sell only one company's gasoline and oil products, the companies are not exclusively bound to sell only to their own operators or to protect the lease holder.

Mr Kappler said it is unfair to apply the name "gimmick promotions" to some oil company advertising programs, as several members of the committee did. The programs, usually involving a give-away of some kind, are not compulsory for company lease-holders, and with most of them participating dealers make more money as a result, he said.

Prof. Neilson said some operators complain they do not want the sales promotions and do not always make money on them.

The hearings, open to the public, continue Tuesday and Wednesday.

Other committee members are Watson E. Evans and Mrs. J. R. A Turner.

Pay Freeze Is Sought

TORONTO (CP) — A plant at nearby Weston will be closed and 1,000 workers laid off if they do not approve a three-year extension to their present contract, Canadian Acme Screw and Gear told its employees by letter Monday.

The automobile parts company, a division of Levy Industries, said the plant will close in three months if 900 production workers do not accept a three-year wage freeze.

Gord Rivett, president of Local 984, United Auto Workers, said current hourly rates are $3.50 to $3.90 for most workers and that wage demands are "not out of the world."

Union negotiators have refused to accept the proposed freeze and set a strike deadline of Wednesday noon.

A union - membership meeting has been set for Wednesday morning to discuss the management statement.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Trees Fine Air-coolers

The efficiency of your air-conditioner is best measured in BTUs—the British Thermal Unit that indicates the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree.

The cooling capacity of the average home air-conditioner runs from 5,000 to 7,000 BTUs. Even the larger window units, on a separate circuit, generally give out no more than 10,000 to 14,000 BTUs.

Now look at a large, well-watered tree. The daily evaporation from this single tree can produce the effect of more than a million BTUs.

Thus, the "air-cooling" effect of one tree is equal to a hundred or more air-conditioners, if the tree gets an adequate amount of rain. Multiply this by thousands and millions of trees, and you begin to understand the importance of preserving our forests, and tree-life everywhere.

It is just not a sentimental, or esthetic, or "nature-loving" attitude that impels ecologists to take such a militant stand for preserving and enhancing our national woodlands system. It is the most practical and sensible attitude one can take.

All that most people know is that a tree is pretty to look at and gives shade and wears a nest of robins in its hair. But it also has vast implications that dear old Joyce Kilmer never dreamed of.

The more we learn about the great chain of life on this planet — and we have learned more in the last two decades than in the last 20 centuries — the more we are forced to recognize that the simple everyday things we have always taken for granted are part of a web of immense complexity and sophistication.

Gov. Ronald Reagan's famous dictum of a few years ago, "What's so special about a tree? You've seen one, you've seen them all," reflects an ignorance and indifference we can no longer afford to tolerate. If we pulled out air-conditioners as ruthlessly as we bulldoze trees, he and a few million other Californians would rise up in arms at once.

As Ray Hoague, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service man up in my neck of the woods put it not long ago, most of us are familiar with the common uses of trees in manufacturing and their most important uses — protecting the soil from raindrop impact, stabilizing the water tables, lowering the peak flows, and their ability to absorb polluted air and emit air richer in oxygen.

"Trees are essential to life on our planet," Hoague warns. "They have much to do with the moderation of temperature, noise, wind and water." And, of course, their cooling-effect is what brings millions of visitors to the North Woods every summer. Without air-conditioners.

Commonwealth Survives

Consultation Pledged On Arms Sale Policy

SINGAPORE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's words that the Commonwealth is "still very much in one piece" were given strong backing today when Britain agreed to an accommodation on its arms-for-South Africa policy.

Delegates emerging from two days of secret talks at the Commonwealth conference said Britain agreed to continue consulting Commonwealth nations on its proposal to sell naval arms to South Africa but without committing itself to any indefinite postponement of the issue.

Leaders of 31 nations could not resolve the impasse created by the arms question in two secret sessions totalling more than six hours Tuesday.

Prime Minister Heath of Britain found himself nearly isolated as all but two of his fellow Commonwealth leaders opposed selling arms to the South Africans.

The 31 delegation heads held two more secret sessions today and came up with an accommodation that in effect staved off what could have been the disintegration of the Commonwealth.

At least three African countries have made it plain in private talks they would be ready to quit the Commonwealth if Britain confirmed its intention to sell weapons to the apartheid republic.

The late accommodation between Britain and its critics was said to have come about at the initiative of Nigeria.

Today, the conference decided to set up an eight-nation committee to study and report back on the arms row.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith named the eight members of the committee as Australia, Canada, Britain, India, Jamaica, Kenya, Malaysia and Nigeria.

The study group decision was the major result of secret talks.

Labor Officials Fail To Compel Arrests

TORONTO (CP) — Top labor officials joined strikers Tuesday in an attempt to challenge a Supreme Court ruling on pickets as the Ontario A and P strike increased in bitterness.

David Archer and Terry Meagher, president and secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Federation of Labor, respectively, were unable to get themselves arrested for trespassing at a west-end Toronto shopping plaza.

Mr. Archer and Mr. Meagher walked for two hours with pickets outside an A and P store on the plaza, watched by two policemen, but neither store nor plaza officials had them arrested under the Petty Trespass Act.

Mr. Archer said he advised Ontario Attorney-General Arthur Wishart they would be picketing "in defiance" of an Ontario Court of Appeals judgment last year which bans pickets from plazas.

He invited Mr. Wishart to take "appropriate action."

Peace Moves Backed

By The Associated Press

The semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram said today Palestinian guerrillas had dropped opposition to a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict, but a spokesman for one major commando group denied it had done so.

A spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said in Beirut, Lebanon, that the PFLP "continues to oppose all efforts for a settlement and continues to believe that the only way to liberate Palestine is through armed struggle."

The spokesman made clear, however, that he was speaking only for the front and not for other guerrilla groups.

The PFLP spokesman labelled the Al Ahram report of a change in its position as an "hallucination."

Al Ahram said the central committee of the Palestine guerrilla organization at a meeting in Amman, Jordan, adopted a resolution expressing "unanimous support for any political moves by Arab states to liquidate the consequences of the June, 1967, aggression."

The resolution was endorsed by the radical, militant Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine as well as the more moderate Al Fatah organization, largest of the guerrilla groups.

Previously, the Palestinians had vehemently denounced all Arab participation in peacemaking efforts as treason to the Palestinian cause.

The guerrillas have been demanding the establishment of "a secular democratic state" to replace Israel and rejected the November, 1967, UN Security Council resolution as a basis for settlement.

No Split In Cabinet On Smoking

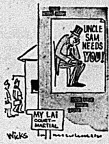
OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Tuesday the cabinet is united on the action to be taken against cigarette smoking.

The fact that no date could be given for introduction of the legislation in the Commons indicates no lack of resolve to go ahead, he said in an interview.

Delay in introduction of legislation was simply a matter of the size of the government legislative program.

He said in an interview recent reports have contained inaccurate speculation about cabinet-level opposition to steps to curb cigarette advertising and other anti-smoking measures.

Among speculation in recent months have been reports that the government will seek to ban broadcast advertising of cigarettes and to limit printed ads to simple statements of brands for sale.



Road Ban Is Sought But Not Endorsed

By ROY PEACOCK and HARRY MULHALL

The raucous snowmobile has set Ontario's tourist business booming . . . and raised angry echoes around one ideal romping ground: The Quinte northland.

Conflicting reflexes in public affairs to the snowmobile phenomenon were sharply focussed yesterday when:

- Hastings County Council was petitioned to seek a provincial government ban on snow vehicles using public roads, closed private property. No action was taken.
- Ontario Tourism Minister James Auld said skiing and snowmobiling have changed Ontario's tourist business from a risky, three-month gamble to a profitable, 12-month operation.

Meantime, in Ottawa there was a third reaction.

The federal transport department announced new design and construction standards to reduce the snow vehicles' death toll.

The snowmobile issue was propelled before county council by a protest originating in Herschel township.

Careless operation of snow vehicles have angered township councillors to the extent they passed a resolution seeking the provincial ban. The move asked that snow vehicles be barred from all highways, township roads and private property where consent for use has not been granted.

County councillors, asked to concur in the Herschel resolution, agreed that snowmobiles were a cause of concern. However, they didn't feel that banning the vehicles from the roadways was an answer. More preferable was that operators be educated in proper usage of their machines.

Reeve Jack Bush of Sidney admitted that snowmobiling was a matter of concern in his township, especially in the built-up areas.

He said his phone was constantly ringing with complaints from irate residents about the roaring of the snow sleds and ignition interference playing havoc with color TV reception.

He said he wasn't sure that the province didn't make a mistake in licensing the vehicles for roadway use.

It was on the highways and township roads where snowmobilers were getting killed.

But most of the reeves in the northern parts of the county came to the defence of the snowmobile, pointing out that they meant considerable to the economy of the area.

Aged Men Fell Ill, One Dies

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Thomas Hollingsworth, 78, of nearby Mallorytown died en route to hospital Monday after being found suffering from malnutrition and pneumonia in a farmhouse about 10 miles west of here.

A hospital spokesman said his brother, Bert, 73, who also lived in the farmhouse, is suffering from malnutrition, frostbitten feet and possibly pneumonia. He was, however, in satisfactory condition.

Police found the men after neighbors said they had not been seen for several days.

Police said the men apparently became ill and were unable to care for themselves. Food and money were found in the house.

Conservationists Find Ally in Nixon

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Conservationists looked today to the White House as a possible new ally in their fight against pollution following President Nixon's decision to halt construction of a 100-mile barge canal in Florida.

The announcement of an end to work on the controversial canal—on which more than $50 million has been spent—was made by presidential spokesman Ronald Ziegler. He also left open the possibility that the 30 miles of trench already excavated might be filled in.

In a statement, the president said the canal—which would have cut the Florida peninsula and was intended to reduce barg transportation costs could cause potentially serious damage to the environment and destroy wildlife.

The president's decision comes as attention in the United States is riveted to two other pollution problems—a massive oil spillage in San Francisco Bay, and a planned trans-Alaskan oil pipeline.

The spectre of what could happen to North America's West Coast ecology following any collision involving a supertanker was raised during discussions on the pipeline at an international conference on pollution held here during the weekend.

On Monday came the San Francisco slick—caused when two Standard Oil tankers collided and discharged more than one million gallons of oil into the bay.

"The bay spill provides an ominous model of what will likely happen to the coast of Canada and the United States if plans to build the Alaska pipeline and transport oil out of Valdez (Alaska) are approved by the department of the interior," said David Brower, president of the Friends of the Earth, a group of conservationists trying to prevent the pipeline.

So far, conservationists have successfully blocked action on the pipeline through court injunctions, and the interior department, in a statement last week, admitted it could cause damage to the ecology and environment.

But despite this, the department said the pipeline—which would carry oil from Arctic fields to Valdez for shipment by tankers to continental United States—should be built for national security reasons.

Conservationists, however, have argued that a pipeline down Canada's MacKenzie Valley would be safer and would eliminate the need for tankers and their threat to the coastline.

Arena to Stay as Is

Architects' Recommendations Turned Down by Committee

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Memorial Arena last night emerged with its 40-year-old dinginess virtually intact from a session of its administrators debating a proposed major overhaul of the city's oldest recreation facility.

On a 4-3 vote, the city's Arena and Recreation Committee turned down an $890,000 reconstruction blueprint that proposed revamping the entire arena into a downtown community centre.

The committee's resolution that now goes to city council said such a cost was not justified for the arena. It called for a precautionary program of protective renovations to render the aging building safer.

This complied with at least a segment of the reconstruction proposal — contained in a $2,000 study drafted by city architects Watson and Wiegand — which found the centre's safety facilities below standard.

But the study's total objective evoked little response from the committee.

Mayor Russell Scott felt that any major expenditure on the old arena would be "putting good money out for bad".

The present structure, while it might not be completely satisfactory for senior hockey action, still "serves its purpose very well," said the mayor.

Alderman Donald Soutter, committee chairman, sought to have the committee leave a route open to other alternatives for renovating the arena.

He said he wasn't satisfied that the Watson and Wiegand study offered any viable alternatives to the $890,000 total reconstruction scheme or a new community centre costing $1.5 million or more.

The study, he felt, showed a "shocking lack of imagination" in what might be done with the arena.

"I'm not sure that some other architect or this architect couldn't do something with that building at a fewer number of dollars than he is suggesting."

Ald. Soutter voted against the motion because, he felt, it did not leave an open door to such alternatives.

The arena problem opened up a much broader issue for the committee — that of a community centre facility, Ald. Soutter felt.

He believed the committee had a responsibility to assume a leadership role in the issue and evolve alternatives based on the community's needs and financial ability.

A community centre could cost $2 million, he warned.

But "I don't think the alternative is something that is done sometime in the future," he said.

"If we need one (a community centre) in the city, we're charged with getting some of that money in the (city hall) capital works budget in the next five years," he said.

"I think we have to try and present the community with a positive program," said the chairman.

However, he recalled, the electorate had turned down a community centre proposal (in 1968) and there likely would be no further action without another referendum.

"If that's the case," said committee member Mrs. Joan Guthrie, "I would favor some improvements in this one (Memorial Arena) because that may be all we have to offer the community for who knows how many years."

Committee member Seymore Bochnek said a community centre was a basic need in a city Belleville's size.

"It's criminal what we have compared to other communities," he said.

Compounding the discussion was the fact an urban renewal study on the city's downtown area now is in the offing.

Committee members pondered the likelihood its proposals may involve the Memorial Arena and a community centre.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey, who said she wasn't happy with the reconstruction study, nonetheless felt the arena was ideally located as a downtown community centre.

She pondered if the committee should not wait for the urban renewal study proposals.

Nonetheless, Ald. Jeffrey proposed a motion that council consider plans for a community centre in future capital works budgets.

The motion also called on council to take "the necessary steps" to ask the electorate for a decision.

Mayor Scott said the move was premature and any proposals for a community centre should be held over until the urban renewal study was produced.

"What we're really trying to find out," said Ald. Soutter, "is if the council even wants anybody to consider a community centre."

The committee tabled the Jeffrey motion.

Renovations needed to meet safety requirements at the Memorial Arena will be determined by the centre's management.

Snow Halt

City workmen yesterday halted traffic on Bridge Street West to remove snow banks along the street. A grader moved the snow into the centre of the street where the shovel picked it up for truck removal. At the same time, cars were detoured.

Prince Edward Carnival Plans Are Completed

PICTON (Staff) — Members of the winter carnival committee for the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce are "painting the town red" with bright posters advertising the program of events planned for the county's first salute to snow country.

The four-day carnival beginning Jan. 28 through 31 will open with a giant bonfire at Picton fairgrounds lighted by the winner of a snowmobile race among municipal officials.

Ice Follies sponsored by members of the local figure skating club, assisted by guest skaters will be featured in the County Centre Friday, Jan. 29, at 8 p.m. A one-hour performance will be followed by a skating costume contest organized by the Prince Edward Figure Skating Club. This dress-up caper is open to the public and winners will receive prizes for their costumes. Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

A minor hockey tournament will kick off Saturday's program of events. Local OMHA clubs and OMHA clubs in this district will compete during a full day of hockey. Members of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police will face off against the Ottawa Roughriders Saturday night at 8 p.m., with game proceeds donated to the mentally retarded. The game will be played in the County Centre, Picton.

A Curling Bonspiel will be held at Prince Edward Curling Club Friday, Jan. 29, and Saturday, Jan. 30, welcoming entries from other rinks.

Prince Edward County's snow queen will be crowned at the County Centre Friday, January 29, at 9 p.m. The snow queen competition is sponsored by the Picton Kinsman Club and is open to all single girls over 17 years of age residing in Prince Edward County. Entrants are asked to mail their name, age and address to the Picton Kinsman Club. Contestants' names will be published in the local paper and the winner will be selected by ballots sent in by readers.

A popular event scheduled for January 29 is a 40 - mile cross - country snowmobile race starting on West Lake at Wellington and finishing at Prince Edward Yacht Club. The first snowmobiler to cross the finish line will receive a cash prize of $100, while runners up will be awarded prizes of $65, $40, $25 and $15. Trophies also are offered for classifications: Group 1, A - stock, B - stock, C - stock; Group 2, D - stock, A modified, B modified; Group 3, C - modified, D - modified, E - modified.

Track races will be held at Picton fairgrounds Sunday afternoon January 31 beginning at 1 p.m. Classes include A, B, C, D, Stock, A, B, C, D, E, Modified, and Powder Puff Stock 0-400 cc.

All races will be governed by OSRF 1970-71 rules with two heats in each class. An entry fee of five dollars will be charged. Prize money for first place winners is $60, while runners-up will receive $45, $30, and $15. Trophies also will be awarded.

The cross country race and the Sunday track meet both are sponsored by the Prince Edward Snowmobile Racing Committee. The Kinsman Snowmobile Draw will be one of the final features of this eventful winter weekend.

Blame for Blaze Not Established

TRENTON (Staff) — No decision has been made by the Public Utilities Commission here on whether or not it will accept responsibility for a fire at 86 Princess St. Saturday.

A Public Utilities crew was thawing out pipes at the residence of Edward Weeks when fire broke out about 4:30 p.m.

The commission contacted its insurance broker and the incident was investigated Monday.

However, the insurance report on the blaze has not yet been received by the PUC.

Barry Box, public relations officer for the PUC said today that the matter may be raised at Thursday's meeting of the commissioners but it is not on the 24-item agenda, already the longest in PUC history.

The interior of the Weeks' house was gutted in the blaze. The family did not have time to remove their possessions.

"What is not water damaged is smoke damaged," Mr. Weeks told The Intelligencer. The building was not insured.

Proctor-Lewyt Lays Off 29

PICTON (Staff) — Proctor-Lewyt Ltd., Picton, this week announced that 29 light assembly workers have been temporarily laid off with notification that it may be longer than 13 weeks before they return to their jobs.

J. W. (Bud) Stewart explained that the staff reduction was caused by the general economic situation coupled with a lack of storage space.

Proctor-Lewyt Ltd., which manufactures household appliances such as electric kettles, irons and toasters formerly employed a staff of 199 workers.

Mrs. Stewart said lack of warehousing facilities created a storage problem. "If we continue to build, then we have a problem. We have to rise and fall with the situation as it is in the world today, like anyone else."

Obituaries

ARTHUR JOHN RENDELL

Arthur John Rendell died at Hastings Manor on Tuesday after a lengthy illness. Mr. Rendell, born in North Fredericksburg, is survived by his wife, the former Lulu Archer. Mr Rendell was in his 84th year

Mr. Rendell lived in Deseronto where he is survived by a son, Morley and two daughters, Mrs. William (Marjorie) Wood and Mrs. William (Jeannette) Higgins. A second son Wilfred is now living on Salt Spring Island, B.C.

He is also survived by two brothers, Clinton and Ross, both of Napanee, and Mrs. Frank Loyst of Whitby, Mrs. Arnold Vanderwater of Deseronto and Mrs. Edward Tunnicliffe.

Mr. Rendell was predeceased by a brother Ernest and two sisters Hazel and Grace.

Mr. Rendell was educated in North Fredericksburg and spent most of his life in the dairy and grocery business. He was active in the Deseronto United Church and also served on town council.

Funeral service will be held Friday, Jan. 22 at the White and Morris Funeral Home and will be officiated by Rev. William Hendry. Interment will be in Deseronto Cemetery.

U.K. Mail Held Up

With the mail strike effective in Britain, the Canada Post Office has announced that mail to the U.K. will not be forwarded until termination of the strike.

Roy Wainwright, Belleville Postmaster, said this morning that the temporary embargo on air and surface mail to Britain would go into effect immediately.

"We are trying to discourage people from mailing and we are asking them, at the wickets, to keep their items until the strike ends."

He explained that anything that is mailed will probably be stockpiled in Montreal and Toronto.

However, this shouldn't effect Belleville drastically: "we don't have too much mail to the U.K. as it is," the postmaster stated.

IN MEMORIAM

DELINE, Floyd — In loving memory of my dear father who passed away suddenly, Jan. 20, 1969.

There is always a lonely heartache,
Always a lonely tear,
But there are always precious memories,
Of the days when you were here.

—Always remembered by his daughter Joyce, son-in-law Mike, granddaughters Tammy and Debbie.

DELINE, Floyd — In loving memory of my dear husband Floyd, who passed away suddenly January 20, 1969.

To some you may be forgotten,
To others part of the past,
But to me you will be remembered,
As long as life shall last.

—Lovingly remembered by wife Win.

FRASER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father James H. Fraser who passed away suddenly Jan. 20, 1966.

Five years you have been gone,
Memories still linger on,
We feel his presence ever near,
He is the one we hold so dear.

—Sadly missed by wife Olive, daughters Bonnie and Sheila.

POLLITT — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Florence Pollitt, who passed away Jan. 20, 1970.

Oh! dearest wife and mother,
Since you have passed away,
It seems not a year ago,
But only yesterday,
Oh! dear one, how we loved you,
And love cannot forget,
The Lord took you from us,
It was His Holy will,
And left in our hearts a vacancy,
Which no one else can fill,
But in our saddest moments,
One happy thought holds sway,
We will meet again, dear heart,
And be happy some sweet day.

—Husband and Family.

Britain To Consult

Smith said the leaders considered the factors affecting the security of maritime trade routes in the South Atlantic and Indian Ocean which were of vital importance to a large number of Commonwealth countries.

The eight nations are to report back on their study as soon as possible.

Smith, reading from two short statements, said that in agreeing to take part in the study, Prime Minister Heath did so only on certain conditions.

They were:

—Britain, though listening to others' views, retains the right "to take such action as it considers necessary to give effect to its global defence policy in which the facilities at Simonstown constitute an important element."

—Britain is bound, if asked by South Africa, to carry out legal obligations of the Simonstown agreement as outlined during the conference.

—Britain has received South African assurance weapons will not be used for any purposes other than those for which they have been supplied.

In case of any breach, Britain would refuse further supplies of equipment and spares to the South African government.

Later Smith announced the study group would meet in London.

Delegation heads met for three hours 20 minutes this morning. They broke for dinner after a four-hour afternoon session. They were to resume for an unusual night plenary session to discuss the arms issue further.

Thursday the sticky question of a declaration of Commonwealth principles, dealing with action against racial discrimination, is expected to lead an overcrowded agenda delayed by the long deliberations.

Informants reported Heath indicated he was ready to accept a new Nigerian formula for a disputed passage in the draft declaration binding Commonwealth members to withhold all aid from countries like South Africa which practice racial discrimination.

That would clear the way for broad agreement on the document, submitted by President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia as an apparent stumbling block to the British arms sales plan.

Robe and Chain for New Warden

Warden Kenneth Smith, reeve of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, has new robe of office adjusted by his wife Jean at yesterday's inaugural session of Hastings county council. Warden Smith won the role over three other contestants.

Brighton Film Judged Best

The village of Brighton is on the map as a film-making centre — thanks to the enterprise of a class of public school pupils.

They placed first in this district in a film-making contest sponsored by the Educational Television Branch of the Ontario department of education.

Now, the junior movie makers will themselves star in an ETV program Feb. 19.

Their award - winning film, Pollute In, and the members of the class, will be shown in a video-taped sequence filmed by a CBC camera crew.

Pollute In was judged the best film produced by schools in region 9, comprising the counties of Victoria, Northumberland and Durham, Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Lanark and Leeds and Grenville.

The 1969-70 grade 8 pupils of Miss Jane Wright at Brighton Public School produced the film as an entry in the Series 70 competition. It treats the causes, effects and possible correction of pollution in a comedy setting.

Although some entries in the contest cost several hundred dollars to produce, the Brighton pupils made their film for less than $50.

Safety Show Scheduled

TRENTON (Staff) — The Rotary Club of Trenton and the Trenton Police Department are sponsoring another snowmobile safety program here Feb. 10.

A feature - length film on snowmobile safety and discussion of traffic laws regulating operation of the machines will comprise the program slated for St. Peter's School gymnasium at 7 p.m.

This will be the third time the safety show has been presented. More than 400 area residents attended the first two presentations.

County Councillors Back Belleville

Hastings county council will go along with a request by the city of Belleville for more representation on the Hastings - Prince Edward County Health Unit.

Under the present setup, Belleville, with close to one-third of the total population represented by the unit, has only two members on the 10-member board.

Three members are from Hastings, two each from Belleville and Prince Edward, one from Trenton and two are appointed by the provincial government.

Board members have already agreed to the additional representative from Belleville but approval by both Hastings and Prince Edward county council is also necessary.

A motion to allow Belleville three members on the health unit board was carried by a slim majority vote.

Warden Says Major Job to Be Government Structure Changes

Considerations with respect to municipal reform will be one of the main problems confronting Hastings county council this year.

That is the feeling of Warden Kenneth Smith, reeve of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, who in his inaugural address said that change in municipal government was to be expected.

"But that change need not be drastic," he said. "I feel that some sort of amalgamation will be required, but I trust this will be accomplished with the same degree of co-operation and good relations that has marked council discussions in the past."

Meeting in caucus during the morning, councillors went to four ballots before Reeve Smith was chosen as warden. The final vote between Reeve Smith and Tyendinaga Reeve Carman Gibson was tied the first time around and a second ballot was nessary to decide the winner.

As the afternoon formal session of council was opened, Clerk-Administrator Carl Bateman told council members that they would get out of council only as much as they put into it.

"It is up to you to take an active part in council and in committee work," Mr. Bateman said.

"After all that is what local government is all about."

Noting the changes which are taking place in municipal government, Mr. Bateman told councillors that in this period of change political leaders now more than ever were willing to listen to views from the local level.

Rev. W. Sedgewick of Queensboro pronounced the benediction for the inaugural session of council. The new warden was officially sworn in by Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson.

The inaugural session was attended by no less than 11 former wardens of the county, including Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins. Four of the ex-wardens are still members of county council.

Also attending yesterday's inaugural meeting was Herbert Young, president of Loyalist College. Mr. Young was introduced by Frank Rabel, chairman of the Loyalist college board and former member of county council.

Mr. Young said that he and his staff were working closely with high school principals in the area in order to expand the college facilities along with the needs of the people in the Quinte district.

Mr. Young said that full daytime enrolment at the college was now 500 students.

In addition there were 660 students attending evening and extension classes, 40 apprentices in electronic and motor mechanic classes, and 440 manpower retraining students.

Extension courses were operated at Bancroft and it was hoped that further extension courses would be offered at Napanee.

Automotive insurance companies are shirking responsibility by refusing to pay the cost of fighting fires in cars and trucks along the highways.

This is the feeling of Hastings county councillors who say that insurers frequently ignore bills asking reimbursement for fire fighting equipment called out to put out fires in transient vehicles.

The discussion was prompted by a resolution from the county of Oxford asking that the province reimburse municipalities for expenses when fire equipment is called to answer fire calls along the highways.

Newly elected warden Kenneth Smith, reeve of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, said this was a problem for his municipality.

He said his township had no fire department and when trucks or other vehicles caught fire along the highway the Tweed Fire Department was called out.

"Our township gets the bill for the fire call but the insurance companies will have nothing to do with us — we are never able to collect," he said.

Reeves of Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga townships said, however, that in some instances where transport cargoes have been saved by fire department action, insurance companies paid for the fire calls.

Reeve Carm Gibson of Tyendinaga didn't feel payment for fire calls was a provincial responsibility. He said it was an insurance matter.

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey took the same view. He said his municipality never had any luck in collecting from insurance companies although before they had their own fire department Belleville had to be called out.

Frank Cruise, agent for the A. W. Wilson Insurance Company, the firm with which the county places its liability insurance, said the problem "was an interesting situation."

He said he would bring it to the attention of insurance companies.

Council concurred in the Oxford county resolution.

Council took no action on a Kitchener resolution asking that the Ontario Department of Highways implement a program of research to discover an alternative to the use of salt on highways which would not act as a pollutant and would not be prohibitively expensive.

Also filed was a resolution from the county of Victoria, which asked that the province give consideration to the levy of a 25 cents admission fee to provincial parks to be turned over to the municipalities in lieu of taxes.

Farm Bounty

Last week's farm conference in Belleville brought together an interesting concentration of government and university experts with information and advice for Quinte-area farmers.

New production techniques and aids are as vital in agriculture as they are in industry at large and the conference had a valuable contribution to make in this regard. Farmers learned for example that while there are numerous chemicals available for weed control, good cultural and management practices are also effective counters to the weed problem.

The wide variety of food available in supermarkets today has been illustrated dramatically by the growth from 2,000 items in stock 30 years ago to four times that number today. Housewives, moreover, are as interested in a bargain as ever, as well as in quality.

To the public the supermarket is one of the most immediately apparent symbols of our modern affluent society. In it are concentrated the skills and wealth of the land and of those who not only make their living from it but provide the rest of us with life-giving food. Efficiency is the keynote of such an operation and it may be no coincidence that their staff seem to go about their business both swiftly and efficiently. It is hard to beat the supermarket for interesting and trouble free-shopping, and in obtaining our needs there is to be reminded of the products of the soil and the industry of citizens in many parts of the world which makes it possible. For on the shelves are products from as far afield as England, Ireland, Scotland, the United States, Argentina, and Australia.

If this then is the supermarket, and a product of the toil of many, both farmers and public must bend every effort to ensure that our future environment is a fit place for continuing bounty. Pollution and over-population are twin spectres threatening it. Let us play our part in ensuring there is clean air and water as well as food for all.

A Serious Situation

Suddenly the shadow of unemployment is looming larger and the Government is getting the blame while being urged to do something about it.

Unfortunately it is not that easy and Opposition spokesmen, from Mr. Stanfield to the NDP's voluble Douglas and Lewis, are simply playing politics with their largely destructive criticism. And if it is not destructive it is often impractical.

For all that, the situation is serious and it is a tragedy that about all the politicians have to offer is lip-service. In all the industry in the country, is there nothing, skilled, semi-skilled or unskilled, that could absorb many of these unfortunate people?

One wonders too in a high-unemployment area like Vancouver, where the weather is not as severe as in the rest of the country, why work could not be provided picking up litter from the beaches, that sort of thing. But again maybe it is not that easy — in all of Canada there are enough unemployed to populate a city of half-a-million — but nevertheless there must be better ways of spending days than queuing up at Manpower offices and drawing welfare.

Golf in the Sun

As ever televising of the Crosby pro-am golf tournament at Pebble Beach, California, afforded this frigid area of the continent the tantalizing spectacle of golf in the sun, along with the sound of the wind and waves breaking on the shore.

Here we saw a rising young star, 28-year-old Tom Shaw, blonde and all-American as they come, win the $27,000 first prize, a $1,000 for every year of the life of the young man from Oregon.

Shaw is typical of the new breed of golf star in the United States. There are still a fair number of the old hands around, including Arnold Palmer who finished second, but the future, not to mention the present, in golf belongs to comparative youngsters like Shaw

Right On!

In noting that "irrational objections (by other countries) cannot be given much weight in British policy-making," The Daily Telegraph adds what surely is a very telling point, in connection with the current deliberations in Singapore: "Unfortunately, Commonwealth conferences sem almost expressly designed to make such differences loom far larger than they should."

Taxpayer Will Foot $2,600 Million Bill

U.S. Unions Unhappy with Nixon's Aid to Big Business

WASHINGTON (CP) — The sobering announcement of record United States unemployment and President Nixon's handout to big business to help fight it has tended to polarize the attitudes of labor and management.

Nixon's recent announcement of a major overhaul of tax depreciation regulations to allow businessmen more generous tax deductions for investment in new equipment was hailed by business leaders but damned by labor and some consumer organizations.

The decision, which will cost the treasury an estimated $2,600 million in corporate taxes this year, some four days after the labor department reported that unemployment had reached a nine-year high of six per cent in December.

"Workers and wages did not cause this inflation and they have not profited by it," President George Meany of the AFL-CIO said of the situation.

Although the Nixon action has been interpreted by some to mean that what's good for big business is good for the country, even critics suggest this is an unfair over-simplification.

"In fact, the move makes good economic sense," says the Wall Street Journal, "and the timing isn't so bad either."

Be that as it may, the reaction of the powerful unions is that it represents a further Nixon commitment to the "trickle-down" theory of economics: that if big business is given massive doses of money some of it is bound eventually to wind up in the worker's pocket.

"In this time of recession, inflation and six-per-cent unemployment," said an AFL-CIO statement, "it is incredible that the president can find no better action than to extend a tax windfall of several billion dollars to the nation's corporations."

Paul McCracken, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, ventured that the impact of these measures "will build fairly slowly," and other economists have suggested that it may be a year before any significant influence on the job market is felt.

Business blames labor for upsetting the balance of power. But it is noted that as average hourly pay advanced 5.8 per cent in the last year, the cost of living in November was 5.6 per cent above the figure a year earlier. Thus, just about the whole increase was offset by higher prices.

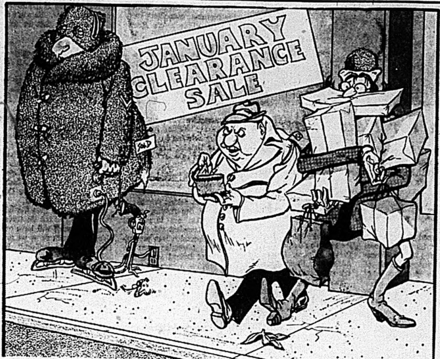
Still, many would quarrel with Meany's flat denial of labor responsibility.

Many economists argue that there are unions and then there are unions—some are haves and some are have-nots.

Other statistics indicate that while the average hourly wage increase was 5.8 per cent, some of the powerful unions in key industries have got more than a 14-per-cent increase.

As the Washington Post put it, "one segment of labor—the unemployed—is taking a severe drubbing from the current economic situation while another—the large powerful unions—is riding the crest of excessive benefits for its own members."

What it boils down to is the tragic fact that the curtailment of economic activity, the classical method of dealing with inflation, exacts sacrifices from those least able to bear them, those already at the bottom of the economic ladder.



"Now I know why they call them Clearance Sales — they clear out everything that's left over from Christmas in one's wallet!"

Mr. Stanfield's Tax Cut Theories

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Conservative party leader Robert Stanfield, faced with the problem of making the Opposition credible while Prime Minister Trudeau basks in an international spotlight, has come up with a dubious proposal.

Zeroing in on the problem of unemployment, which certainly constitutes the government's most vulnerable area, Mr. Stanfield has proposed a six per cent income tax cut to help get more of the jobless back to work.

This has the merit of being a clear alternative to government policy, which has been refusal to ease up on the tax burden because of what this might do to the anti - inflation fight.

Instead, the government has maintained, until just recently, that inflation was the most serious problem it had to face and that an economic crackdown with a considerable amount of unemployment was essential to keep it under control.

Cautious slackening of controls in the past few months merely underlines its continuing belief that a rapid switch would probably wreck the inflation - control program and set the spiral soaring again.

Of course Mr. Stanfield's proposal has a strong popular appeal. Nobody likes the government taking such a large slice of his income, and some letup on the tax take would not necessarily lead to a big spending spree.

But a cut of six per cent would, in the present state of human nature, likely have that effect, encouraging people to boost consumer demand in many areas with an almost predictable result.

Mr. Stanfield's error is in assuming, and asking the electorate to believe, that a tax cut if it is big enough will have an almost miraculous effect and jolt the economy into much greater activity.

No doubt it would have some such effect, but it may be questioned whether it would be all that great. And the likelihood that it would work in ways which would soon disturb the precarious wage-price balance and give inflation a new and possibly even more disastrous push upward would be great indeed.

By taking what might be an acceptable theory and pushing it to an extreme, Mr. Stanfield has called into question his own reasoning and motives.

Dayliner Rail Service

Brockville Recorder and Times

The Canadian National seems prepared to go through with its plan to cut the rail-liner service between Brockville and Toronto despite protests from city and provincial government officials.

We're on the side of Mayor Broome and city council in the fight to retain the service. And even if the railway people can produce survey and computer advice to indicate the service doesn't pay, we're still against the cut. As Mayor Broome has pointed out, the over-all revenue that the CN takes out of Brockville should be the matter under consideration when decisions such as this are made. And that would include the tax support that the railway receives.

We've had railway people tell us that there have been some slack periods and some very busy periods in the operation of the dayliner. It is the most convenient of trains for business people and people planning a short visit to Toronto. It is as cheap and faster than other trains and other modes of transportation. It is faster for another very good reason too. It is about the only passenger train that runs on time.

With everyone becoming pollution conscious, it is just possible that more and more people will start leaving their cars at home when they plan to travel. Indeed there is agitation now to limit families to one car, by legislation if need be, as a move to curb air pollution caused by autos. People will turn again to the railways, in greater numbers, as the mode of inter-city travel, we're sure. One train can eliminate 200-300 cars from the highways and greatly reduce air pollution.

The Case for Mobile Homes

Kingston Whig-Standard

The possibilities for modestly-priced and perfectly adequate housing in the form of "mobile homes" have been examined many times in these columns. This is an area of housing which has been neglected in most parts of Canada, although it has reached a very advanced state of perfection in the United States.

It is interesting to see that a local developer, Robert W. Clark, has announced that he will apply for permission to locate 104 of these units on a site within the boundaries of Kingston. Acceptance would involve an amendment to a municipal bylaw which now prohibits mobile home parks within the city limits. Mr. Clark has pointed out that density at the site would be 8.3 units per acre, the same density required for duplex houses.

We are not surprised to notice that Mr. Clark avoided calling the units to be used on this site "trailers". This is a word which is carefully avoided by most professional mobile home agents and builders because it gives a completely wrong impression of such units. These are not car-drawn trailers. They are much too big for that purpose. They are taken to the site on wheels which are then removed and the unit is set on proper concrete footings.

Judging from those details of the proposed park so far released there would seem to be no good reason for objecting to the idea. It appears that each of these home sites would have a minimum of 3,600 square feet of space, allowing for more green area than is found in most subdivisions.

Mobile homes are a legitimate and well-tested means of providing relief from the high cost of modern house-building. Well organized and properly cared-for, mobile home parks are just as acceptable aesthetically as most subdivisions and better than some. There would seem to be good reason for permitting this enterprise to find its place within Kingston's borders.

Flow of Rich Soil to Nile Delta Blocked

Soviet-built Aswan Dam Mixed Blessing to Egypt

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Amid signs of renewed tension in the Middle East, the formal inauguration of Egypt's Aswan Dam has reaffirmed the strong Soviet stake in the military and economic future of that crucial area.

The huge dam and the artificial Lake Nasser, which stretches southwards for 317 miles, constitute Russia's biggest foreign-aid project. They have already produced big changes in the industrial and agricultural life of Egypt.

With vast new irrigation schemes now possible in a country desperate for arable land and with electric power from the dam to be delivered all the way to the Mediterranean port of Alexandria, the dam is bound to make still further contributions to the moulding of a new Egyptian society.

But the effects of the giant undertaking have not all been beneficial.

For instance, the dam has blocked the downstream flow of nutritional silts which previously enriched the Nile Delta.

There are complaints, too, that Mediterranean Sea water no longer is kept by the natural flow of the river from seeping far up the Nile. As a result, soil in the delta area is being eroded.

However, the Egyptians feel the advantages of their dam far outbalance any undesirable side effects.

They are mindful, too, that the vast hydroelectric structure involved millions of dollars in Soviet aid and the labors of 1,800 Russian specialists at the peak of its 10-year construction period.

Moscow stepped in with this immense commitment of resources after Western nations declined to participate.

The now-completed array of power and water-storage facilities at Aswan is protected by Egyptian troops using Soviet arms and by air installations equipped with Russian-built jets and rockets.

Soviet President Podgorny accompanied Anwar Sadat, Egyptian head of state, at the official opening of the dam, pointing out this Soviet involvement in the Middle East.

And, by interesting coincidence, the dam was dedicated while the Israelis—branded by Moscow as instruments of American imperialism—attacked Arab guerrilla positions in Lebanon and desperate efforts continued to end for good the fighting in Jordan between Palestine insurgents and King Hussein's Jordanian army.

Meanwhile, the current attempt under United Nations auspices to achieve a permanent end to Arab-Israeli hostilities apparently is making little progress.

Farther south, in the Eritrean region of Ethiopia, Moslem rebels against the authority of Emperor Haile Selassie have disclosed that they want to join neighboring Arabs in receiving Soviet aid.

All these developments indicate that the road to peace in the Middle East remains a long one and that Russia has made itself a dominant force in the troubled region's future course of development.

The Topic Is the Arts

Anne Barr, (second from right), consultant to Ontario Arts Council's touring program, discusses common topics with members of Quinte Arts Council at Kiwanis Centre meeting last night. Exchanging views are Rick Rolston and Elizabeth Hirst, Quinte Island Theatre and Frank Seemungal, Belleville Theatre Guild.

Support Available for Arts

There's a livelier future in the offing for smaller Ontario centres seeking more contact with major performing arts groups — at reasonable cost.

It's possibilities were outlined to the annual meeting of the Quinte Arts Council last night by Anne Barr, consultant to the Ontario Council for the Arts.

Involved is a new cultural program linking the provincial arts council with local sponsorship groups in bringing top national talent into communities which hitherto have been ignored because of high production costs.

Miss Barr, consultant for the council's Ontario Touring Program, outlined the plan this way:

A local organization designates itself to sponsor a performance, undertaking ticket sales, reasonably priced to encourage wider community response.

The council then would make up the difference in the actual cost of presentation.

However, there's one basic stipulation: Before any council assistance is forthcoming the local sponsor must achieve an 80-per-cent ticket sale.

Miss Barr, who has been in Belleville since late last week discussing problems and activities with local arts and recreation groups, says the plan already has proved itself — notably in Kingston, where a pilot project was first launched last year. Its culminating achievement was the visit to Kingston of the Shaw Festival.

It resulted in stimulating public enthusiasm for the performing arts to such a degree that now there is difficulty booking the city's Grand theatre.

In an era when mounting production costs have increasingly isolated smaller centres from the performing arts, the program holds out the promise of returning local communities to the once-active touring performing circuits of former times, she said.

However, basic to its success are local ticket sales — an area of hard work for which there is no substitute for personal contact, she said.

Already, the program may soon benefit Belleville Now under discussion, says Miss Barr, is a possible performance of the National Arts Centre Orchestra.

Snowmobiles Debated

But Herschel Reeve Kenneth Fisk urged that more safeguards and regulations were needed.

He said he had seen as many as 40 or 50 of the machines going down township roads in a group.

"They take up the whole road," he said.

Reeves coming to the defence of snowmobiling included Thomas Burnside of Madoc village and ex-warden John Wilkes of Marmora and Lake.

Reeve Burnside couldn't see restrictions banning the vehicles.

"They would only go where they can operate and the revenue would be lost," he said. "It is a matter of education."

Reeve Wilkes felt some of the blame must be placed on the manufacturers who "make the machines to go too fast."

Thurlow Deputy Reeve Borden Forsythe agreed.

He said the vehicles should be equipped with an automatic cut-off on the throttle in case the driver was injured.

Also he said many accidents resulted because there are no lights when the vehicles are not moving.

Reeve Wilkes and Reeve John Mackenzie of Faraday township said snowmobile clubs could do much in promoting safety by encouraging proper snowmobile trails.

Dungannon Reeve Calvin White heartily agreed with club activity in the promotion of safety and responsibility.

"They (snowmobiles) should never have been allowed on the highways in the first place," he said.

At the same time he said many snowmobilers were apparently equipped with wire clippers.

He said he was getting a bit tired of going around each spring repairing wire fences that had been cut by snowmobilers during the winter.

Meantime, in Toronto, Mr. Auld said the increase in snowmobiles to 130,000 last year from 80,000 — is a trend that has "transferred many resort areas.

"The situation and structure of the tourist business has changed to such an extent that year-round operation is becoming feasible," he said in a statement.

Tourist operators, thanks to snowmobiles and skis, can finance their businesses and make mortgage payments over 12 months when it was difficult to operate in a season of only three months, he said.

In Ottawa, Transport Minister Donald Jamieson yesterday answered questions on snowmobile regulations in the Commons.

"As to the objective of a safe recreational pastime, this depends to a large measure, as I am sure everyone is aware, on the skill and care of the driver," said Mr. Jamieson.

"We have drawn up safety regulations in respect of these machines and, before they leave the factory, they have to meet certain specific standards."

He said the department will make research grants in respect of the whole question of snowmobile safety "to see what kind of standards might be adopted in the field.

Among the mechanical requirements announced by the department for snowmobiles produced after April are:

They be able to stop within 40 feet from a steady speed of 20 miles an hour on packed snow with a 175-pound driver. Alternatively they must be able to lock their traction belts.

Reflectors on the rear, sides and mufflers that meet ministry specifications.

Further standards will become effective in 1972 — including handgrips, shielding for all moving parts and an apparatus to disengage the clutch if the driver removes his hand.

Under the regulations, snowmobiles manufactured after Feb. 1, 1972 will be limited to a sound intensity of 82 decibels — estimated to be the level of noise made by a large truck.

David MacDonald, PC, Egmont, told the Commons that one problem is that there are 70 or more manufacturers and there are wide variations in the quality of their products.

Safety features he called for included high motor standards to guard against mechanical failure in isolated areas; roll bars and improvements in footrests to guard against the driver's foot being caught if the machine rolls.

Snowmobilers Can Be 'Impaired'

PICTON (Staff) — A report from the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police this week carried a warning to snowmobile operators against mixing "alcohol and gasoline". "The Ontario Safety League claims impaired ability has been a contributing factor in a high percentage of snowmobile accidents in Ontario in the past few years," stated the release. "Many fatalities involved operators who were too drunk to realize what they were doing or able to control their machines."

It was noted that when snowmobilers are using public thoroughfares where most of these impaired ability accidents occur, driving provisions of the criminal code apply to them just as they do to the drivers of motor vehicles. This means that a snowmobiler may be required to take a breathalyzer test and can be charged with impaired driving. If convicted, the court has the authority to prohibit the operator from using a snowmobile on a highway in Canada.

Vacant Throne Seeks A Queen

Regardless of the efforts of the Women's Liberation Movement, beauty contests have no end of applicants.

The Belleville Winter Carnival annually holds a Snow Queen competition, calling on girls from city high schools to enter.

So far there are 16 girls vying for the position.

The Kinette Club hosts of the contest, announced that to obtain more entrants, all girls between the ages of 16 and 19 would be eligible.

The judging will take place at Centennial High School on the night of Thursday, February 4.

Information concerning applications for the Carnival Snow Queen competition can be obtained from Mrs. Dianna Canning at 962-7603.

Discount Non-brand Gas Identical to Esso

TORONTO (CP) — The gasoline supplied by Imperial Oil Ltd. in Ontario for sale at lower prices at discount and non-brand gasoline stations is identical to gasoline sold at higher prices at Esso stations, a company official said Tuesday.

H. W. Shea, senior operating official for Ontario, told the Ontario committee on franchises his company also sells gasoline at lower prices to independent outlets that are in direct competition with Esso dealers.

"They are buying at a lower price," but the sales represent a drop in the bucket compared with the volume handled by all Esso dealers, he said.

Mr. Shea explained that the difference in selling prices reflects the services provided by the two types of outlets.

Discount and non-brand outlets do not take credit cards or support advertising campaigns or promotions. They have less realty taxes and depreciation and have less requirement for a trained sales force.

At Monday's sitting C. G. Kappler, retail manager for Shell Canada Ltd., said gasoline sold by Shell to discount stations is not the same as that sold by regular Shell outlets. While the basic product is the same, he said, not all the additives are included.

At another session Tuesday, nine former managers of Becker Milk Co. Ltd. stores said they could not understand stock shortages discovered in their stores when the company's investigators took surprise inventories.

They said Becker employees would arrive at their stores from time to time and make snap inventories of stock, which the managers were required to endorse, but which they had difficulty checking.

Frak Mayer of Burlington said he was dismissed shortly after one such inventory, without reason at the time, and consequently lost his $1,000 bond, a month's pay and commissions.

Audry Gladman testified that when she complained that her inventory could not be short because only family members work in her store, a company official "told me that there are families and there are families."

Victor Heyn said three inventories taken in his store between Oct. 8 and Jan. 28, 1970, showed shortages of $137, $1,330 and about $600.

Mr. Heyn said that after he was dismissed, he proved to the company that its inventory check had been $800 inaccurate and later received $585 back from his lost $1,000 bond.

Beckers which has about 3 stores across Ontario and wh employs its manager and workers under contract, did not appear at the hearing.

The hearing was scheduled to conclude today.

Volunteer Bureau Gives Report of Activities

The Central Volunteer Bureau Board held its first meeting of the year on January 13 when chairman, Maurice Stotesbury, welcomed Mrs. Jane Haslett, volunteer chairman of the Christmas Sharing Program, who reported on the 1970 program. A service of the Volunteer Bureau, the Christmas Sharing Program assisted 357 families and 1300 children at Christmas time. The Board expressed gratitude to Mrs. Haslett for the job well done.

New terms of reference drawn up for the 'Meals on Wheels' committee were read and unanimously approved. Copies of these will be sent to Mrs. Marion Adams, chairman of this program, to be left with each church hosting the luncheon club, as they cover completely the functioning of this program. There are now 25 elderly regularly attending luncheon each Wednesday, and 20 receiving a hot meal delivered to their homes. Volunteer drivers are provided, and 12 local churches take a month each to host this community service.

The Volunteer Bureau has been issued a charitable organizations' registration number, in accordance with terms laid down by the registrar-examination of Charitable Organizations in Ottawa.

Mrs. Mary Thompson's letter of resignation as chairman of the Bureau's Housing Registry was read, as was her report. Discussion resulted in Board agreement that a housing registry provided a community service and should be continued. Mrs. Ruth Burrows, executive director of the bureau, was asked to find a new director for this program and to draft guidelines for the Board's consideration.

Mrs. Burrows read her report of Volunteer Bureau activities as follows: "Our Day Nursery for handicapped preschool children is now held two half-days weekly. There are 12 children at present, with transportation provided. Volunteers meet monthly for discussion and training.

Pre-kindergarten programs in the schools for four-year olds will be extended to an additional school this month. At present there are 45 children attending volunteer pre-kindergarten programs at Queen Victoria, Hillcrest and Queen Mary Schools for two half-days weekly, and another 15 at Holy Rosary will bring the number of children participating in pre-school enrichment programs to 60 - students attending the Early Childhood Development Course at Loyalist College are doing field work in these programs, under the supervision of Mrs. E. Exelby who directs the course. Mrs. Miriam Bishop continues to be directly responsible for the school program. Volunteers for this group also meet regularly for orientation and training.

Friendly visiting for elderly program continues under the direction of Mrs. Gwen Brain, with ten volunteers in Church areas being given direction and information to distribute to the elderly they call upon, listing services available for elderly in the community.

Another of the service programs, English classes for new Canadians, is now directed by Mrs. Bert Simpson, and continues to be held one morning weekly. Textbooks are obtained from Dept. of Immigration in Toronto, but much of the teaching concentrates on basic English which will help the newcomer find her way about Belleville, in shopping, etc. Sixteen women are now attending this class, and they bring their preschool children who are cared for in a nursery program.

The furniture exchange is in great need of furniture donations; the clothing depot is at present collecting in particular teenage girls clothing and children's skates.

Apart from usual services provided to agencies on request, scheduled volunteers are scheduled for all office work and bookkeeping for the United Fund for several weeks during the campaign. Tutors have been found for special education classes, a carpentry instructor, sports assistants, teachers for upholstering courses, yoga courses, and refinishing antiques, for community programs. Volunteers are assisting Mrs. Vera Morphy in preparing a community resources survey.

Approximately 48 new volunteers were interviewed and placed in community programs since September. All requests for volunteers with the exception of special driving have been found.

A list was provided for each director of all programs and services of the Volunteer Bureau in the community to assist them in publicizing the services and in recruiting volunteers.

Club Activities

PRINCE EDWARD - BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

It was moved by Mrs. R. Jose and seconded by Mrs. M. Welch that the present executive should continue in office for another year during the first meeting of the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' club held in 1971 at the recreation centre on January 13.

Earlier, president Mrs. F. Henderson welcomed the gathering of 34 women and spoke of one's purpose in life. She posed the question to each one as to what she had done since the club met last and asked each one to think about the purpose for which they were there.

A moment's silence was observed in memory of Mrs. M. Doyle who had been the club pianist and who had passed away recently. Mrs. W. Weese will be the pianist for 1971.

On February 28, the anniversary of the club will be observed. The group led by Mrs. F. Way and Mrs. C. Cunningham were in charge of the meeting.

Mrs. Way said that one of the weaknesses of human beings is to be self-satisfied and not to try to better themselves. She stressed that everyone should watch over her speech and not let any hard or harsh words about others escape her lips. She continued that no unkind action should mar one's day and there should be a record of some kindly deed done for others.

She said that such simple acts of kindness as a neighborly visit, or an invitation to an outing would reveal oneself. She suggested that this should be everyone's new year resolution.

There were readings by Mrs. E. Lloyd and Mrs. P. Parliament and contests were conducted by Mrs. F. Henderson. Community singing was enjoyed by all.

SITTING PRETTY — Among the displays at the Canadian Floorcoverings Market held in Toronto recently was this one by Armstrong Carpets. The chair is upholstered in a nylon shag carpeting, while the wall is covered in "splush," a carpet quality halfway between a shag and a plush.

Women Hear Aims of WMS

The Presbyterian Women of St. Columbia Church held their regular monthly meeting on Monday evening in the church hall.

Despite the miserable weather conditions, quite a number of members attended and enjoyed an interesting and informative talk by Miss Frieda Matthews on the aims and purposes of the W.M.S. followed by a question and answer period.

A short worship service was led by Mrs. J. Allan after which the new president, Mrs. Nancy Burke, took the chair for the business meeting. Arrangements were completed for the forthcoming Valentine Coffee Party to be held at the church on Wednesday, February 10th, 9.30 a.m. to 11.30 a.m. Everyone will be welcome to come and enjoy this social hour.

The evening concluded with refreshments served by the committee in charge.

A850
SIZES 8-16

No Waist Seam, Just Belt It

The simply superb (and superbly simple) shirtdress is the single most important look you can choose for any and every day. Make it the length you like, but make it now and for 1971! Printed Pattern A850 by Abe Schrader has no waist seams (almost all straight sewing). The belt clasps the waist gently, not tightly. The details are just perfect — long tab front, buttoned pocket, wavy yoke detail and deep pleat down the back. Choose worsted weaves, crisp tweeds, knits, flannel and for night-time elegance, consider creamy satin.

Printed Pattern A850 is available in New Misses' Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 2¾ yards 54-inch fabric.

Send ONE DOLLAR for Printed Pattern A850 to THE INTELLIGENCER, 60 FRONT STREET WEST, TORONTO 1, ONTARIO, Pattern Department. Please print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Tourist Industry Topic at WI

Mrs. G. Bush gave an informative talk on the growth of the tourist industry in Hastings County during the January meeing of the River Valley Women's Institute held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Vernon Harry with 22 women in attendance. Mrs. Bush displayed a variety of maps and bulletins all of which gave much information on the Highlands of Hastings, the Moira River Conservation Authority, snowmobiling and square dance clubs. Selections were read by Mrs. George Grills and Mrs. ED. Kent.

Mrs. Roy Tucker presided over the business meeting and thanked the members for catering for two events in December. Eight shut-ins were remembered at Christmas. Committees were appointed to cater for a banquet on Saturday evening, Jan. 23. A donation of $1 per member will be sent to Guelph for the expansion of MacDonald Institute. The February meeting will be held at the centre with Mrs. Philip Conley as hostess.

Mrs. Gerald Burks presented the retiring 4-H leader Mrs. Roy Irven with a gift on behalf of the members. The subscription for the Countrywoman magazine, published by the associated country women of the world will be renewed for five years. A letter was read from the provincial president Mrs. A. Zoeller. She reminded the branch institute to make plans to observe the 75th anniversary in February 1972. She suggested that an open meeting for the whole community should be held once a year and that good, thought-provoking programs should be planned for each meeting.

The federation of Women's Institutes urges each branch to support their own project to raise money for the expansion of MacDonald Institute at Guelph. Various reports were given and each convener spoke briefly about her department of work.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen who is a contributing member of the Associated Country Women of the World displayed a program of the 30th triennial conference to be held in Norway in August 1971. She also displayed a clipping from a Dundas newspaper which gave an account of the funeral of Mrs. Van Wagner, a charter member of Stoney Creek WI, the founder of the institute movement.

The ACWW convener read a news release from the North American Indian Women's Association meeting held at Fort Collins, Colorado in August, 1970, with 68 Indian women representing 43 tribes from 23 states.

The pennies for friendship were collected. At the close of the social hour Mrs. Ross Bush thanked all who had contributed to the success of the meeting.

WHAT TO WEAR

MONTREAL (CP) — New fashions carry the problem of what accessories to wear. The Leather Bureau of Canada recommends knee-high boots in suede or stretch wet look — and laced granny shoes to go with gauchos and knickers. Peasant shirts, skirts and dirndls require sandals, ballet-type shoes or Mary Jane straps.

Parents Should Set Certain Hours for TV Watching

By DORIS CLARK

I am asked, "Is there a set limit of time that a boy or girl should be allowed to watch TV?"

I'm convinced you can't be arbitrary about it. What is too much for one child is perfectly fine for another. Little Lynie sits in front of the TV with her two brothers, but avidly reading the book she has propped up in front of her. Even when the boys shout or giggle at TV antics she doesn't stir.

There should be a balance, and in some homes the establishment of a certain viewing hour when the kids' favorite programs are on, is all to the good.

Let your youngsters discuss with you how they stand about their other responsibilities. If they have carried their weight when it comes to table setting, dishwashing, cooking, garbage carting, snow shovelling, and if the homework is done, you can agree together as to whether TV privileges come next.

Dear Doris: Our daughter Lorrie, 17, told me a week ago she is pregnant. The minute the boy found out he dropped her.

Lorrie wants to keep the baby, my husband is all for it and says it is our grandchild and we will look out for it until Lorrie some day meets a boy who will want to marry her.

My older daughter and my son, both in their 20's, think she should give the baby up. My poor old head spins. Should we or shouldn't we?

My husband makes me feel like a two - headed monster whenever I suggest letting the baby be adopted out. I know this poor little baby isn't something you can toss around or throw away but I would like to know which way is best? — Horns of Dilemma.

Dear Horns: There is a stigma which the whole family shares, but unwed pregnacies have been happening with alarming frequency. Many girls have been keeping their babies. Yet every baby has a right to two loving and married parents. There will be some hurt either way.

If Lorrie keeps her baby and does eventually marry there is a real danger that this initial mistake will be thrown up at her, unless her husband turns out to be a wonderfully understanding person.

A family counselling interview would help you all sort yourselves out. Get in touch with the child care agency right where you are, and let every concerned member of the family have his say. This is not something which can be decided by me or anybody like me at long distance, and the final decision is Lorrie's.

Confidential to Silver Anniversary: The cake could be two or three tiers and it could be a white cake, iced in white and decorated with silver trimmings. Or you could bake the cake in two parts in round tins with holes in the centre, then cut and ice them to look like entwined wedding rings.

For a gift your parents will cherish, arrange for a silver-framed group photograph of the whole family.

Livable Philosophy Makes Life Better

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Occasionally you print messages of value from other sources. Here is a bit of livable philosophy which I have found most helpful. If you feel it has merit, please print it.

ANN LANDERS

Take time to think — thoughts are the source of power. Take time to play — play is the secret of perpetual youth. Take time to read — reading is the fountain of wisdom. Take time to pray — prayer can be a rock of strength in time of trouble. Take time to love — loving is what makes living worthwhile. Take time to be friendly — friendships give life a delicious flavor. Take time to laugh — laughter is the music of the soul. Take time to give — any day of the year is too short for selfishness. Take time to do your work well — pride in your work, no matter what it is, nourishes the ego and the spirit. Take time to show appreciation — thanks is the frosting on the cake of life. — A FAITHFUL ANN FAN.

DEAR FAN: Beautiful! On behalf of my readers, I thank you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I lived with my married daughter for 20 years. Her children were like my own. I raised them. I didn't plan it — it just happened. My daughter was glad to have the "help," and the way it turned out I was the one who did all the things for the kids that a mother usually does. I did the feeding, bathing, dressing, settling differences, and putting to bed.

I am out of my daughter's home now but the kids still love me and treat me as if I were their mother. My daughter resents this. She told me a few months ago that I intentionally stole their affection. She says I now must stay out of their lives because it's time they learned that SHE is their mother. I'm so hurt, Ann. I don't know what to do. Of course I shall respect my daughter's wishes but it is killing me. When the kids want to come to my place I have to make up excuses. (I never get invited to their home.) Please tell me if there is anything I can do. You can use my name if you wish. I have nothing to lose. I've already lost everything. — SAD GRAN.

DEAR S.: Your daughter can set up rules and regulations but she can't change your grandchildren's feelings about you. Love is not transferrable. If you raised the kids they are as good as yours. I hope your daughter sees this column and reconsiders, for the children's sake as well as yours.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS. I'm an unmarried woman of 38 and have always enjoyed good health. I recently read that unmarried women are more susceptible to breast cancer than women who are married. Is this true? I have always believed just the opposite. Please inform me. — PORTLAND.

DEAR PORT: Recently 30,000 nuns over 39 years of age were studied. The results showed that the nuns had a higher incidence of breast cancer than married women of the same age group.

These findings give added credence to the warning of the American Cancer Society that ALL women should have a physical checkup annually. Learning how to perform breast self-examination every month can be a lifesaver. Your local chapter of the American Cancer Society offers free instruction booklets. I suggest that you write for one at once.

Meal of Pork Hocks, Beans

By MARY MOORE

A dependable example of the average Canadian taste is revealed to me when I have my family with me.

I was planning a bean and pork hocks meal and carried on with it despite my doubts. Would the children eat that rind on the hocks? Would there be enough meat to stretch for seven people? I was only half successful. I loved it and after much soul-searching decided that there are many hungry families in our audience on low budgets and who cannot afford to have fussy tastes. This is a very flavorful, economical meal. And another thing: many of our young cooks do not know what to do with pork hocks.

PORK HOCKS WITH BEANS
(Serves 6)

1 lb. white navy beans
7 cups cold water — divided
4 lbs. pork hocks
1¾ tsps salt
½ tsp. flavor salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. MSG
¼ cup chopped onion (or bottled flakes)
½ cup chopped celery and leaves

Wash beans and soak them overnight in your soup kettle in 4 cups of the cold water in a cool place.

Four hours before mealtime put them on to cook adding the remaining 3 cups of water, washed hocks, salts, pepper, MSG, onion and celery. Bring to boil and simmer covered until beans are tender and meat is falling from bones — allow most of 4 hrs. and turn hocks over at halftime. Lift bones from pot and serve dinner plates in kitchen for this meal, giving each some of the rind. Some of our crowd wanted catsup with this dish. I think it cost about $1.25.

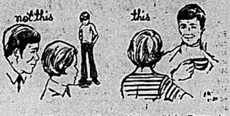
Tests Device

COVENTRY, England (AP) — Arthur Pickard tied the business end of his fishing line around his wife's waist and set her to running around the yard, which understandably attracted the neighbors. He explained he was testing a device to warn fishermen of bites and it was all in the cause of scientific angling.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Denny is the most secretive youngster. He mopes around, but no matter what I say, I can't get him to tell me what is wrong. I'm sure something happened at school today, but he won't say a word."

Mother: "Ask Denny to help you in your workshop for a while. I think he needs to talk to someone about a school problem and maybe while the two of you are working, he'll tell you about it."

Some teen-agers want to work out their own problems and feel annoyed by parental prying or anxiety. Be available but don't try to force a confidence.

Britain's First Post Office Strike Closes Mail and Telegram Services

LONDON (CP) — Britain's first nationwide postal strike began today and union officials said support for the stoppage among their membership appears to be 100 per cent.

At Mount Pleasant post office in London, billed as the world's busiest sorting office, 2,000 men were out

A number of non-striking women operators in the telephone system, a service operated in Britain by the post office, carried on working despite hostile shouts from pickets at exchange buildings.

But national and international telegram services run by the post office fell silent after the strike took effect at midnight (6 p.m. EST Tuesday).

Signs of bitterness between management and union representatives indicated the strike may be a long one.

But there also was evidence of a less frigid relationship developing between Tom Jackson, head of the Union of Postal Workers, and Employment Secretary Robert Carr.

As Britons braced for the consequences of the walkout by 230,000 employees, there were fears of more disruption to come on the country's troubled labor front.

Leaders of a union representing engineers and firemen employed by the nationalized British Railways threatened action to back demands for substantial pay increases covering their 30,000 members.

Some militants in the union were reported calling for a strike while others favored a work slowdown.

Only about a dozen employees turned up today at Electra House on the banks of the Thames, the busy centre of Britain's international cable traffic, after the postal strike began. Overseas news traffic was not affected.

Last-minute talks between the post office, which is a Crown corporation, and the union proved of no avail.

Carr was present in an apparent effort to reach a thorough understanding of the positions of both sides

No new discussions were immediately scheduled.

Post offices stopped accepting telegrams and postmen began sealing the slots of mailboxes Tuesday a few hours before the strike began.

Almost half the nation's 47,000 telephone operators were expected to stay away from their switchboards. The rest are part-time, non-union workers or members of the National Telecommunications Staff Association, which is not on strike.

At London's inland telegrams office, an operator said he could accept only life-or-death messages but couldn't guarantee their delivery.

Automatic dial telephones Telex and international-leased wire services were not affected.

Spokesmen for the union and the post office said nothing was accomplished in the 11th-hour discussion Tuesday night at which Carr presided.

"I think the post office wants to smash the unions," said Jackson.

The union is demanding a 13-per-cent increase in base pay a week. The post office says it can't afford more than eight per cent, and the Conservative government contends that any more would be unduly inflationary.

A government report published Tuesday said weekly pay in British industry last October averaged £28 ($70), after a 13-per-cent increase during the previous 12 months. It said the cost of living increased during that period 7.5 per cent.

Mail service to Britain was embargoed in Canada, the United States, France, Spain, West Germany, Australia and Japan. Mail pickups ended through Britain with the day shift Tuesday, but by midnight there were backlogs of 3.5 million pieces in London, 250,000 in Birmingham, 150,000 in Glasgow and 115,000 in Belfast.

Big corporations cranked up private postal systems, ferrying foreign mail to France for posting. The first courier arrived in Paris by plane with 30 letters. Others used private boats or the channel ferries.

A printing company sent a carrier pigeon to a branch office with microfilmed memos. It didn't arrive on schedule, and its handlers believed it was taking shelter from squalls. But other experts noted that it is the pigeon mating season.

In Birmingham, 20 striking mailmen started a cut-rate delivery service to "run the money-grubbing pirates out of business by undercutting them." Their competition came from 2,500 pretty girls working for a leaflet delivery company.

Guy's Hospital in London began messenger service to summon patients waiting for surgical beds. Newspapers and radio stations offered to publish important messages.

Special courier services in London registered with a Chamber of Commerce clearing house, which referred businesses to them. Most private deliveries cost about five times the post office's fivepence rate.

Starch in the Long Johns?

The complaint about too much starch in the wash won't stand up this time, says Jane Johnston of Edmonton, even though her wash will. The "solid evidence" is merely because her wash froze when she hung it out to dry in the 25-degree-below-zero weather. (CP Photo)

U.S. Will Bomb Viet Cong Where Needed in Indochina

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The White House said Tuesday that U.S. air power would be employed throughout Indochina if necessary to protect American troops in South Vietnam against North Vietnamese or Viet Cong offensives.

Spokesman Ronald Ziegler, pressed about a widening U.S. air role in Cambodia, said the United States has bombed in Laos, Cambodia and in North Vietnam and would continue to do so if the Communists imperilled U.S. troop withdrawals from South Vietnam.

Ziegler denied suggestions that the president was escalating the war step by step—as alleged by Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern earlier Tuesday—or following a new policy in Indochina.

Ziegler disputed contentions that the president had ruled out the use of American air power in Cambodia when the U.S. South Vietnamese operations ended against Communist sanctuaries last spring.

He said the president said last June American air power would not be used to support South Vietnamese troops in sanctuary areas after the withdrawal of American forces which operated there.

But, he said, the president since then had made it clear that U.S. air power would be used in Cambodia depending on the flow of Communist forces and supplies as they related to American troops in South Vietnam.

He said the current air war in Cambodia is being conducted because the Communists are trying to re-establish their Cambodian sanctuaries during the dry season and renew their threat to U.S. forces in South Vietname.

Windsor Doctors Get Okay To Split Million Dollars

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court dismissed an action Tuesday that would have prevented 419 Windsor doctors from splitting up more than $1 million.

The $1,038,452 is the general reserve of Windsor Medical Services Inc., a doctor-operated medical insurance scheme that was dissolved after the Ontario government took over health insurance.

A Supreme Court action was instigated by Ontario's public trustee in an attempt to prevent the doctors from carrying out their plan to share the reserve among themselves.

The public trustee's department alleged that Windsor Medical was a non-profit organization on the same basis as a charity and that the doctors' plans were contrary to the objectives stated in its charter.

Mr. Justice Campbell Grant decided that it was not, and has not become, a charitable organization.

He disagreed with the contention of B. J. MacKinnon, legal counsel for the public trustee, that the corporation was set up to promote health on a non-profit basis, to advance medical science and to encourage research and preventive medicine.

Mr. Justice Grant said Windsor Medical was set up to provide medical services for subscribers and that it acted as an agent for both doctors and subscribers.

Many of the doctors, who stand to gain about $2,500 each, have stated publicly they will give their shares to charity.

Mr. Justice Grant said the corporation was not obliged, under its letters patent, to use surplus funds to promote the corporation's objectives, nor was it obliged to direct them to charitable purposes.

"The public did not have the right to demand membership in the corporation. The corporation had discretion over subscribers it would accept. A medical member had the right to refuse to treat any subscribers coming to him for medical services.

"Self-interest was the motive inducing both parties to enter into the agreement (medical plan.)"

Lands to Be Bought for Beaches

TORONTO (CP) — G. H. U. Bayly, deputy minister of the Ontario department of lands and forests, said Tuesday the Ontario government has authorized land purchases on the northeast shore of Lake Erie but he could not reveal what land was involved.

Mr. Bayly said in an interview that the government has acquired land for parks purposes on the western and central portions of the lake, but denied earlier reports that the department was interested in acquiring sites for two "mini-parks" just west of Buffalo, N.Y.

He said he knew nothing about mini-parks and denied the report which said $15 million was involved.

A Buffalo newspaper says property owners in the Point Albiino and Windmill Point areas near Buffalo were being "sounded out" to determine whether they would be willing to sell their summer homes and land.

New York Policemen on Beat But Pay Issue Not Settled

NEW YORK (CP) — New York policemen were back on the beat today, but the pay issue that sparked their six-day wildcat strike remained unresolved in the courts.

Justice Irving Saypol of the state Supreme Court was scheduled to begin the second day of the trial to decide the pay claim today, with the possibility still open that patrolmen could go out again if the city appeals his decision.

At issue is the question of pay parity between the patrolmen and sergeants. Under terms of the old contract with the city, the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association contends that each man is entitled to $2,700 in back pay.

The patrolmen claim that under their old contract they are entitled to $3 for every $3.50 earned by sergeants. They filed suit when sergeants won a raise in arbitration.

The state's highest court ruled last Thursday it could not decide the case on the facts presented and ordered the trial.

The trial started Tuesday after a wild PBA meeting at which delegates voted two to one to have the patrolmen return to the streets. Immediately after the meeting, Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy warned that any patrolman who refused to work would face suspension.

Saypol, who warned policemen to stop demonstrating outside his courtroom "like a bunch of idiots," began the proceedings only after he was assured by headquarters that nearly all the men on the 4 p.m.-to-midnight shift had complied with the PBA decision.

Also pending is the question of punishment for the estimated 20,000 patrolmen who walked out. Penalties are mandated by the state law which forbids strikes by public employees.

Elsewhere on the city's labor scene, 1,600 teamsters ended a two-day strike and resumed fruit and vegetable deliveries at four major wholesale markets today. A strike by telephone craftsmen entered its 10th day.

The end of the police walkout came during a stormy meeting at the Hotel New Yorker where delegates of the PBA voted 229 to 112 to go back to work.

Railwaymen Pressured To Bend Company Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — A CP Rail dispatcher Tuesday told the Canadian transport commission there are subtle pressures exerted on employees to bend railway operating rules.

R. J. Cranch told a special commission inquiry into railway safety that his main job as a dispatcher is "to move trains efficiently."

And a dispatcher "needs all the friends he can get to do the job properly," Mr. Cranch said. To do an efficient job he must have the co-operation of everyone from "sectionman up to a superintendent."

Then, asked commissioner J. M. Woodard, was there a subtle pressure put on dispatchers to move trains?

"Yes," replied Mr. Cranch. "It is a built-in feature of a train dispatcher that he move trains to the best of his ability."

Graham Day, chief counsel for CP Rail, asked whether there is anything about working "to the best of ability" that requires a direct violation of rules.

"I have no written proof of it," said Mr. Cranch.

But there had been one instance where direct pressure was put on him to bend the rules and other indirect pressures had been put on him from time to time.

Mr Cranch said he couldn't agree with a statement by Mr. Day that the company sacrifices efficiency if it tolerates an unsafe practice.

Safety was a prime consideration in efficient railway operation but it wasn't the only one.

Under questioning by J. F. Walter, counsel for the Canadian Railway Labor Association, Mr. Cranch outlined two practices he feels are unsafe.

Train orders—the written instructions that govern the movement of trains—have been issued "indiscriminately to employees in alarming numbers" and in some cases have been given to taxi drivers to deliver to train crews, he said.

Mr Cranch said a system of switching where the dispatcher is the only individual controlling train movements through switches is another unsafe practice.

Sydney J. Harris Says

War Like an Operation

If people could comprehend "social pathology" half as well as they understand the pathology of the body, we might be well on our way to solving some of the world's most pressing problems.

When one says that force really accomplishes nothing, and that one war only breeds the germs of the next, one is invariably met with the rejoinder: "Well, then what were we supposed to do about Hitler — just sit there and let him take over the world by force?"

But this is a false (and essentially meaningless) question. Obviously, by the time a cancer metastasizes in the body, it is too late for anything but radical surgery, which may have as much chance of killing the patient as of curing him.

By the time the cancer of Hitlerism spreads, it is already too late for anything but the most radical surgery, which is war. Yet no one would pretend this is better than preventive medicine, which detects the cancer in its earliest stages and stops it at the inception.

If we had genuinely learned anything from World War I, it was that World War II was bound to happen unless Europe federated itself in some way or other. Instead, the same old power politics persisted among nations, and the cancer of Naziism swiftly grew in Germany.

Take a small, but equally dramatic, example — that of Cuba. The U.S. supported a corrupt and reactionary regime there for many years, and almost guaranteed that the Cuban body politic would breed a Castro, or his communist equivalent. We really offered the Cuban people little choice between reaction and revolution.

War, on the scale it is practised in the modern world, is not a "natural" phenomenon; it is a form of social pathology, caused by the same things that cause bodily disease — neglect, greed, ignorance, unwillingness to sacrifice a lesser pleasure for a greater good.

The League of Nations could have been made operable, just as the United Nations can be. Nations that unite on a dozen scientific, educational and commercial fronts can unite to prevent the pathology of war, if they really wanted to. Now, with the nuclear bomb sheer self-interest should dictate such a policy, but the lesson has not yet been learned.

You have to fight a Hitler, as you have to cut out a malignancy: but that is no argument against non-violence — it is merely a proof that if you don't help make things better, they will get worse. If we had treated Germany after the first World War as intelligently and humanely as we did after the second, there would have been no Hitler.

We stopped him, but the threat of another war looms larger than ever. All we gained was time — and what have we done with it?

Growers' Agency Possible

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government will consider a single producer-controlled agency to handle production and marketing of all fruits and vegetables only if the farm industry indicates it wants it, Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Tuesday.

"If you . . . are interested and prepared to support these suggestions . . . you will find sympathy at the government level," he told the Ontario Fruit and vegetable Growers' Association.

"However, I want also to point out that we would not want to superimpose legislation of this kind on an unreceptive fruit and vegetable industry. It must be clearly indicated to us that you want this kind of legislaion."

Warden Elected

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Harvey Malcolm, deputy reeve of Manvers Township, was elected warden of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham Tuesday.

Mr. Malcolm defeated Howard Quantrill, reeve of Hope Township, by a five-vote margin. He succeeds Jay Whittington, reeve of South Monaghan Township, who held the post in 1970.

Cobourg is about 25 miles southeast of Peterborough.

All-year Tourism Profitable

TORONTO (CP) — Skiing and snowmobiling have changed Ontario's tourist business from a risky, three-month gamble into a profitable 12-month operation, Tourism Minister James Auld said Tuesday.

"The situation and structure of the tourist business has changed to such an extent that year-round operaion is becoming feasible," he said in a statement.

Tourist operators, thanks to snowmobiles and skis, can finance their businesses and pay mortgage payments over 12 months when it was difficult to operate in a season of only three months, he said.

Mr. Auld predicted that the 1971 winter season will be "most successful" and the number of skiers will reach 200,000.

The number of snowmobiles in Ontario increased last year to 130,000 from 80,000—a trend that has "transformed many resort areas."

Final Warden?

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — John Williams may be the last warden of Ontario County.

The Pickering Township reeve was elected to the post Tuesday night by a one-vote margin over Reeve William Gillespie of Beaverton.

William Newman, member of the Ontario legislature for Peel South, predicted that this year's election would be the last under a couny council form.

"I expect the inaugural meeting next year will be in the form of a regional government council," he said.

Dairy Farmers Demand Increase

FREDERICTON (CP) — The Dairy Farmers of Canada sent a telegram to Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson Tuesday asking for an immediate increase of "at least 40 cents" in the market price support given to manufactured milk.

The telegram asked that a decision be made at once, and be announced when Mr. Olson addresses the farmers at their annual meeting here today. The three-day meeting opened Tuesday.

The proposed increase in the price the government offers to purchase milk products would amount to about five cents per pound on skim milk powder, and 3.7 cents per pound on cheese.

The 40-cent figure was suggested by Orvil Guy of Winchester, Ont., and supported by George R. McLaughlin of Beaverton, Ont., who said producers in his province had instructed delegates not to come back from the convention without more assistance.

Installation Ceremony

Mrs. W. G. Harvey conducts the ceremony when Mrs. J. E. Nelles is installed president of the WHA while Mrs. B. E. Burley, past president looks on.

Financial Statement

The largest financial contributor to the Belleville General Hospital's Women's Auxiliary, as in the past number of years, is again the group's Opportunity Shop. The total contribution this year as of Dec. 31, 1970 was $11,500.

This was revealed in the treasurer's report given by Mrs. Everett Fairman and approved by the George A. Welch and Company Chartered Accountants. The financial results for the year 1970 have been most gratifying.

Due to those who have worked diligently all year, receipts amounted to 14,390.05 with total disbursements $5,687.73. Of the $40,000 pledged for the new hospital, $33,457.28 had been spent in 1968 and 1969 and in 1970 $3,124.05 was spent on equipment and furnishings. This leaves approximately $3,418.38 still to be used for the furnishings of the hospital.

In dealing with financial statistics Mrs. Fairman reported that the capital account is as follows: Victoria and Grey certificates with accumulated interest amounts to $14,243.83, Kinross mortgage debenture is $5,000 with cash in bank amounting to $16,331.38 resulting in total assets at $35,675.21.

President's Report

Mrs. B. E. Burley, the retiring president of the WHA reads her presidential report for 1970.

Women's Hospital Auxiliary Hears Topic On EMO by Quinte Area Co-ordinator

How to be prepared for any emergency such as a nuclear war or a natural peacetime disaster was the subject of the address by Lt. Col. Angus B. Duffy, co-ordinator of the Quinte Area Emergency Measures Organization who was the guest speaker at the annual luncheon meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary held on Tuesday afternoon at Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital. Lt. Col. Duffy explained the purpose of the EMO which he said was an agency of the government at three levels, namely the federal, provincial and municipal levels. The organization was created to prepare people for emergencies and its functions include educating the general public about how to deal with such events, buying and stockpiling emergency supplies and advising the government on what course of action to take when an emergency occurs.

Lt. Col. Duffy stressed that there was a possibility of a nuclear war in spite of the vague sense of security most people have regarding the prospect of one. He reminded the audience that the ideological war between the Russians and the Americans was still overshadowing the world and any of the existing trouble spots such as Vietnam or Berlin could escalate into a global war. He also brought to the attention of his audience that Canada is geographically situated between the two great powers and therefore Canadians cannot hope to escape the terrible consequences of a world war. Lt. Col. Duffy said that the EMO also had facilities to deal with natural peacetime disasters such as hurricanes and fires.

He emphasized however, that the EMO had power only to advise the municipality but to the decision to put their plans into action rests entirely with the government. One problem the EMO has to deal with is public apathy. He asked his audience if they would be able to save their lives and those of their families in the event of a disaster. He posed the following questions to them. Did they own a battery - operated radio which they could use in the event of a power failure? Did they know hether their municipality had an emergency plan? Did they ever think about whether the schools their children attended and their city hospital had adequate facilities to deal with emergencies?

Lt. Col. Duffy concluded by asking his audience to give some thought to these matters and recommended that they read the EMO publication about 11 steps to ensure their survival in the event of a disaster.

A vote of thanks was proposed by Mrs. C. D. Ashley who also presented Lt. Col. Duffy with a gift on behalf of the WHA. Earlier, Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the WHA for the past year welcomed the gathering which included Canon Robert Wright, Alderman Arnold Orr, representing the city council, Harleigh A. Hamilton, representing the Board of Governors of the hospital. Robert Joy, hospital administrative assistant, Dr. Kenneth Douglas representing the medical profession and Miss Ruth Gaw, director of nursing services.

Mrs. B. E. Burley in her presidential report stated that the WHA had had a year of progress and success thanks to the outstandingly competent executive committee, a host of dedicated members and the co-operation of the hospital administration, the nursing administration and the Board of Governors.

She gave a brief summary of the work of various committees and mentioned that for the first time since the organization of the auxiliary a provincial life membership was conferred on one of the past presidents Mrs. F. A. Beeby who will be presented with the pin on her return from India.

Mrs. Burley also said that in view of the trend towards regionalization in health care, steps have been taken to co-operate with other auxiliaries in this area to share the work they would do in future for the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing. She concluded by thanking the members of the WHA for the help and co-operation extended to her during her term as president and she hoped they would extend the same to the new president Mrs. J. E. Nelles. A number of other reports were read by members of the executive committee.

Congratulatory remarks were made by Alderman E. A. Orr, H. A. Hamilton, Robert Joy, Dr. K. Douglas and Miss Ruth Gaw. The guest speaker was introduced by Mrs. J. E. Nelles.

The delicious steak luncheon was provided by John Boughen, head of the dietary department of the hospital, and his staff. Mrs. S. Kvarda and her social committee were responsible for arranging the event and Mrs. Kenneth Bird provided piano music.

The centrepiece at the head table consisted of pink and white carnations, 'mums and gladioli flanked by two pale pink candles. After the meeting the floral arrangement was presented to Mrs. S. B. Bochnek, chairman of the voluntary services committee, who was unable to attend as she is a patient in the hospital.

Forceful Speaker

Lt.-Col. Angus B. Duffy, co-ordinator of the Emergency Measures Organization, guest speaker at the WHA luncheon meeting addresses the gathering while past president Mrs. B. E. Burley and Alderman A. Orr listen attentively.

New Officers Installed

The new slate of officers for the year 1971 were installed at the Belleville General Hospital Women's Auxiliary luncheon held at Education Hall.

The new executive was installed by Mrs. W. G. Harvey and these include: past president, Mrs. B. E. Burley; president Mrs. J. E. Nelles; 1st vice-president, Mrs. S. B. Bochnek; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. D. Ashley; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Duffy; recording secretary, Mrs. D. G. Burr; treasurer, Mrs. H. W. Adams, and corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. K. Manning.

In charge of the Bulletin is Mrs. J. H. Forrester; finance, Mrs. H. W. Adams; Holiday Treats, Mrs. P. M. Till; membership, Mrs. S. B. Bochnek; Opportunity Shop convened by Mrs. F. H. Bowler assisted by Mrs. C. A. Campbell, Mrs. J. Gallagher, and Mrs. F. A. Beeby; public relations, Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, puppets, Mrs. C. D. Ashley; Samaritan Cupboard, Mrs. A. B. Duffy; social, Mrs. M. Tretina and Volunteer Hospital Services, Mrs. J. B. Durrant.

During the installation ceremony the new president Mrs. J. E. Nelles was presented with a Canadian Association of Hospital Auxiliaries' crest by outgoing president Mrs. B. E. Burley for outstanding service.

Concentrated Effort To Upgrade Services

The In-Hospital Volunteer program as reported by Mrs. S. B. Bochnek, chairman of the service placed the emphasis on service this past year. No new services were added to the program with fewer volunteers lending their assistance in a more concentrated effort to upgrade those services already being offered.

The program consists of seven services, cradle picture sales, free lance visiting, hairdressing appointments, free lending library and magazine distribution, pediatric playroom supervision, planter care and transportation.

A total of 115 volunteers, of which 82 are adult and 33 juniors help to maintain the high standards set as the total on each service.

In March, new quarters were made available. One room houses all services and another is used as an office. The office is shared by Auxiliary committees.

All planters in the hospital were refurbished which included replacing plants and earth, transplanting and trimming. A utility cart has been purchased to assist in this service in transporting supplies.

An extensive mailing of questionnaires to all Volunters in May and June proved most beneficial in helping maintain all services throughout the summer months. Junior Volunteers again lent their added assistance on the library and pediatric services and again, one person was hired to handle the cradle pictures service.

In July a more complete uniform was introduced to Junior Volunteers. In addition to their pink and white smocks, they are also supplied with white panty hose and sneakers.

In November, the second annual mother and daughter tea took place. Junior Volunteer awards were presented. The award program has undoubtedly proved itself worthwhile. Junior Volunteers assist year 'round in the pediatric program where they fill more than half the requirements. A total of 2,803 hours were contributed last year as compared to 2,094 in 1969 when a greater number of volunteers were needed to assist with the program. Out-patients numbering 27 were provided with transportation via volunteer drivers or taxi to physiotherapy, X-ray or emergency departments at Belleville General Hospital. Transportation was also provided to Kingston General Hospital for special treatment.

Since changing the Visiting Program from long term to free lance, the number of patients visited has more than doubled from 804 in 1969 to 1,966 in 1970. This service included writing letters, reading, doing small errands, translations when required, in addition to just general conversation.

Nursing administration advises that service and hairdressing service are invaluable morale boosters. There were 176 hairdressing appointments arranged in 1970.

The cradle picture service continues to bring smiles to new mothers with their baby pictures. Over 330 hours were spent circulating kits for prospective sales.

By far the most sought after service is the free lending library and magazine distribution. A total of 6,582 books and 12,204 magazines were circulated this past year.

Supervisory work took 245½ hours to help maintain services and assist the chairman.

The Chairman of volunteer services attended 30 meetings with conveners, supervisors, nursing and administration, and instructions; also attended the spring conference in Kingston last April to learn and exchange ideas on volunteer services. Volunteers were interviewed and placed and 68 volunteers terminated service.

In 1970 a total of 5,681 volunteer hours were contributed to all In Hospital Services.

Up-grading and service has been the two key efforts this past year. There is no doubt they could not have been achieved without the concentrated support of all volunteers who have served to bring comfort, pleasure and convenience to a great many patients at Belleville General Hospital.

Auxiliary Continues Unbroken Pattern of Services During Past Year

In 1970 under the leadership of the president, Mrs. B. E. Burley, the Women's Hospital Auxiliary continued its unbroken pattern of service to the hospital reported M. Eloise Burr, recording secretary of the auxiliary.

She stated that 275 members were enrolled by the membership chairman, Mrs. J. E. Nelles.

Ten general meetings were held during the year, with an average attendance of 52. Programs were arranged by Mrs. J. H. Forrester, chairman of the public relations committee, and were designed to increase members' knowledge of various aspects of health care.

At the annual meeting in January, R. Alan Hay, executive director of the Ontario Hospital Association, described the work of the Association whose main aim is to ensure the highest possible standard of patient care in Ontario hospitals.

In February W. F. Todd, Superintendent of Building Services at the hospital, explained fire prevention methods used to guard patients' safety.

Opportunity Shop workers were honored at the March meeting, with the president awarding certificates to workers with ten or more years of service. A brief history of the Shop was related by Mrs. F. A. Beeby.

Later in the year, members heard the Rt. Rev. J. P. Sullivan, chairman of the Board of Governors, describe the location of the new hospital administration building and its purposes. Mrs. Marianne Adams, supervisor of In-Service Education at the hospital, demonstrated the uses of the crash cart, one of the pieces of equipment purchased for the hospital from auxiliary funds.

In the fall, Mr. Ivan Wright, director of the Dept. of physiotherapy, explained rehabilitation methods used to restore patients to good health.

Members heard Mr. R. L. Bentley, personnel director at the hospital, speak about the relative newness of personnel departments in hospitals and the value of placing employees in suitable jobs.

In November, Mrs. J. E. Nelles and Mrs. D. G. Burr, auxiliary delegates, gave a report of the Diamond Jubilee of the Hospital Auxiliaries Association of Ontario, celebrated at a convention in Toronto. Tray favors, made by local members and arranged by Mrs. J. H. Forrester, were displayed at the convention.

Social committees, convened by Mrs. J. B. Durrant, Mrs. J. B. W. Curtis and Mrs. Stan Kvarda, were responsible for the tea hour at the general meetings and for special events during the year.

A monthly newsletter written by Mrs. N. K. Manning, chairman of the Bulletin committee, was mailed to 350 members and interested citizens. By this method, members were kept in constant touch with auxiliary activities. A new, more efficient method of processing and mailing the bulletins was initiated this year.

To acquaint women in the community with auxiliary work Mrs. J. E. Nelles prepared accounts of the meetings, published regularly in The Intelligencer. Use was made of radio station CJBQ to welcome new members.

Several standing committees contributed to in-hospital service. Among them was the Holiday Treats committee by Mrs. P. M. Till.

Special days such as Christmas, Easter, St. Valentine's Day and St. Patrick's Day were marked by the distribution of small gifts to hospital patients. Included were tray favors made by a number of Girl Guide and Brownie companies and CGIT Groups in the area.

The Puppet committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. C. D. Ashley, placed 300 hand - sewn puppets in the paediatrics ward of the hospital for presentation to young patients on discharge. All materials used to make the dolls were donated by interested members and their friends.

During the year the Samaritan Cupboard committee, convened by Mrs. Robert Temple, kept the hospital supplied with infant's layettes, given to newborn babies in need upon discharge from hospital.

Several events of a sociable nature were held in 1970. A tea for graduating nurses and their mothers took place in Education Hall, and the auxiliary participated in the reception honoring graduating Medical Laboratory Technologists at the Belleville General Hospital. Two dessert luncheons made an interesting change in the format of the general meetings.

Mrs. A. B. Duffy, corresponding secretary, attended to the auxiliary's extensive correspondence during the year, and was charged with forwarding bulletins and newspaper articles to the Public Relations Department of the Provincial Association.

A permanent record of published material relating to auxiliary activities was maintained by the archivist, Mrs. L. J. M. Tremblay.

Opportunity Shop Again Big Contributor to Hospital Auxiliary

As a co-chairman of the Opportunity Shop Committee, Mrs. H. F. Bowler reported the Shop's activities during 1970. The year has been most successful in every way resulting in $11,500 turned over to the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. This is due of course to the efforts and man hours given by faithful and interested volunteers, a good committee and the continued support of the interested public. The Shop continues to be one of the chief sources of revenue for the WHA in their work for the purchase of equipment and special comforts for the patients and nurses at the hospital.

While the Shop was closed for summer vacation, all shelving, display stands, clothing bins, etc, were re-painted by staff volunteers. A much needed new counter with glass top was made and installed and prior to reopening on Sept. 10 the exterior was repainted. Keeping the interior and exterior in good repair and bright condition has contributed greatly in attracting the public from all walks of life.

The shop operates six days a week: it is open to the public from 2-4 p.m. each day except Friday when it is open all day from 9.30 a.m. to 8.30 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Each morning when the shop is closed, a staff of four volunteers does the sorting and pricing. Unsaleable articles have zippers and buttons removed where necessary and a local car dealer is supplied with wipers cut from these articles. All this means that approximately 100 volunteers are constantly required. For various reasons, some are unable to continue and newcomers who would be interested in this work are welcome. A call to the Shop at 962-5115 is all that is needed.

In her report Mrs. Bowler also expressed thanks for continued assistance of Radio Station CJBQ for their publicity and The Intelligencer for news coverage and thanks to local merchants, a generous and interested public, pricers and salesladies and to the efficient shop committee, including: Mrs. J. Gallagher, Mrs. C. A. Campbell, Mrs. F. A. Beeby, Mrs. F. H. Bowler, joint chairmen; Mrs. R. L. Brettingham, secretary-treasurer; Miss Ivy Eggleton, bookkeeper; Mrs. W. Greaves who staffed the shop for the first part of the year and Mrs. R. N. Pringle who took over as staffer in October.

A financial statement of the Opportunity Shop was also given.

Giacomin's All-Star Hex Continues

BOSTON (CP) — New York goalie Eddie Giacomin has trouble handling initial shots in all-star games.

Evidence—Chico Maki, playing his first all-star game and on his first shift, scored at the 36-second mark and the West was en route to a 2-1 win over the East in the 24th annual National Hockey League all-star game Tuesday night.

Dean Prentice scored for the West in the 1970 game at St. Louis with his side's first shot at Giacomin, again in the East goal. But the East won 4-1.

Two years ago at Montreal, Giacomin entered the game midway through the third period and while he couldn't recall who it was, the West scored on its first shot on goal after the Ranger netminder moved in. The teams wound up in a 3-3 tie.

The 31-year-old Sudbury, Ont., goalie was surprised by Maki's shot from near the East's blue line, as the Chicago Black Hawk winger used Ranger defenceman Brad Park for a screen.

Maki played irregularly after scoring, favoring a recurring groin injury. But his score served to inspire the West and team-mate Bobby Hull converted a rebound shot by Bill Flett of Los Angeles Kings into a 2-0 lead before the game was five minutes old.

After Yvan Cournoyer, Montreal Canadiens, narrowed the gap in the sixth minute of play by rapping Boston defenceman Dallas Smith's blue-line shot beneath Hawks' goalie Tony Esposito, the Westerners played a close-checking game that upset the East's power.

The effects of the defensive cover were never more in evidence than during the last period. While enjoying a man advantage twice through minor penalties to the West, East players managed only two shots on the opposition goal in that 20-minute session.

Blues' Ernie Wakely handled only five shots after replacing Esposito midway in the game.

Coach Harry Sinden even threw a full Boston contingent in to the East attack in an effort to salvage a tie, but to no avail.

The line up comprised of Phil Esposito, runaway leader in NHL scoring, Ken Hodge and Johnny Bucyk and defencemen Bobby Orr and Smith was confused by hard-pressing West forwards and the solid work of the defensive core anchored by Chicago's Keith Magnuson and Ted Harris of Minnesota North Stars.

"We played together," said Esposito after the game, "but tonight we were like strangers."

Sinden, however, who now is a business executive in Rochester, N.Y., was quick to credit the West with a well-deserved victory.

"They played well enough to win, we didn't," said Sinden, who steered the Bruins to their first Stanley Cup championship in nearly three decades before resigning last May. "It's that simple."

The tempo of the light-hitting game was set early when referee Bill Friday tagged Harris with a tripping penalty for what appeared to be a solid hip-check that sent Orr, the 22-year-old superstar and darling of Boston Garden fans, sprawling.

The East's Frank Mahovlich of Montreal took a minor penalty shortly after and it was while he was still sitting out his infraction that Hull notched the winner, drilling a 35-footer past Giacomin.

West coach Scotty Bowman and Hull had both forecast a West victory.

ED GIACOMIN

Bowman told reporters in a pre-game interview that with the Hulls, Bobby and brother Dennis, and seven other Chicago players in the West lineup for the first time, an upswing in the division's all-star fortunes would be felt immediately.

Hull told more than 1,000 persons gathered at the NHL's annual dinner Monday night the West would win, illustrating his point with an empty watch box that would "be filled with $500 tomorrow night."

Chicago's Golden Jet, whose record-shattering 58th goal was scored here during the 1963-69 season, was accorded a standing ovation by the 14,994 fans when introduced during opening ceremonies, accolades exceeded only by those given the venerable Gordie Howe and Sinden.

Bowman, who normally doesn't let his emotions show, had an ear-to-ear grin after the game. While he enjoyed a certain amount of success in leading the Blues to three division titles, Tuesday's win was his first in two previous all-star games.

"I didn't know what to do with all that talent," said the 37-year-old Montrealer, who held the dual role of general manager-coach before relinquishing the latter title to Al Arbour this year.

"I just had to open and close the door."

Bowman credited the West victory to a team effort, but pinpointed Bobby Hull as the catalyst around which the others functioned.

Chicago, which made up the biggest portion of West Division personnel, won the East Division schedule last year before moving over to the West Division with realignment during the off season.

Centennial's David Dent eludes the checking attempt of BCI junior Peter LeBaron in Tuesday's Bay of Quinte COSSA contest. The Chargers came through with a tight defensive effort to hand BCI their second loss of the season. The voctory moved the undefeated Centennial juniors into a first place tie with Quinte in the Western section of the ten-team league.

Chargers Prove Adage

Centennial juniors proved last night that a good defence is sometimes the best offence in a 63-53 win over BCI.

The unbeaten Chargers used tight defensive play to force a number of costly turnovers in sending the Collegians to their second defeat of the season.

Six-foot, three-inch centre Vahe Parmaksezian paced the winners with a 21-point effort followed by Brian Morphy with 19 points.

Rick Bell's jump shots accounted for the bulk of his 20 points. Blake Jones was second high scorer for BCI, hitting for 13.

The Collegian midgets moved into a first place tie with place tie with Picton on the strength of a one-sided 77-26 victory.

Mark Gallupe poured in 30 points for the Collegians followed by Donovan with 19. Lemoire's ten points were high for Centennial.

Centennial seniors defeated BCI in the other match up between the two schools. No scores for the game were available

Mo-Hawks Best When Marchen on Beat

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Belleville Mo-Hawks seldom lose when Greg Marchen gets angry.

So it was only a matter of time after the unofficial Mo-Hawk blueline policeman got in a first-period swinging match with Kingston's Pete Ford that the Mo-Hawks skated to a 3-1 win over the Aces.

Marchen capped off the win — the Mo-Hawks' sixth in seven meetings with their old rivals this season — with an early third-period goal on a slapshot Kingston goalie Mike Lovett couldn't handle.

That boosted the lofty defenceman's goal output to nine and gave him the ammunition for some dressing-room jibes. "That's three times as many as I had all last year," Marchen beamed, well within earshot of forwards like Lorne O'Donnell, who also has nine goals to date.

The only Mo-Hawks who can claim to have scored more often than Marchen are Wayne McConnell, who got his 14th in the second period Tuesday night; Al Ferguson, whose 15th was Tuesday's game-winner on a powerplay late in the second period; and Doug Senior, a 14-goal scorer who won't be on skates for at least a week after suffering two cracked vertebrae in a goal-post collison in Oakville Sunday.

Senior's lineup spot was filled by intermediate call-up John McConnell last night as the Mo-Hawks continued to frustrate the Aces with whatever roster they throw at them.

Tom Thurlby's powerplay point shot at the game's 6.23 mark gave the Aces the lead, while Kingston tough guy Pete Ford, Marchen, and Ralph Plane watched from the penalty box.

Marchen and Ford were each serving minor and fighting major sentences after slugging toe-to-toe in the Belleville end.

Marchen drew another minor later in the game to give him nine minutes on the night. He had logged a tame 12 minutes in his 25 previous games.

Marchen and fellow blueliners Bob Wilson, Lou Kazowski and Lionel Botly deserved much of the credit for giving goalkeeper Steve Rexe one of his easier nights against the Aces, who were losing their sixth straight game.

The Mo-Hawks outshot their visitors each period and 34-25 overall, and have now outscored the Aces 30-12 in seven meetings.

The win, which gave the hometowners a three-point fifth-place bulge over Kingston in the OHA Senior A standings, also pulled them to within one point of fourth-place Oakville.

Possibly deterred by a three-game losing streak, or attracted to Tuesday's televised all-star game, Belleville senior hockey fans continued to stay away in droves.

Only 253 paid at the gate to watch one of the better Mo-Hawk efforts. The club had as many spectators watching some of their training camp scrimmages in Trenton.

BOSTON (CP) — The National Hockey League Players' Association today accepted a $500,000 guarantee from Licensing Corp. of America to handle players' endorsements over the next five years. The New York City firm has similar pacts with the National Football League Players' Association, major league baseball owners and players, National Basketball Association owners and the United States Lawn Tennis Association. The agreement calls for two-thirds of the money derived from endorsements to go to the NHL Players' Association and one-third to LCA. The agreement ends one of similar dimensions the NHLPA had been negotiating with NHL owners during the last year. Red Berenson of St. Louis' Blues was re-elected president of the players' association and Lou Angotti of Chicago Black Hawks was returned as vice-president.

BOSTON (CP) — Pittsburgh Penguins' franchise in the National Hockey League will remain in that city, a league board of governors' statement said Tuesday. The board said the NHL, which assumed operational functions of the financially-plagued club last Dec. 1, will continue to administer its obligations throughout the 1970-71 season, with the hope of finding a new owner before next June's league player drafts. The statement said four applicants for the franchise are being considered, but one of the stipulations of the sale will be that the team remain in Pittsburgh. NHL president Clarence Campbell referred to the upswing in Pittsburgh's fortunes this season as "remarkable." He said attendance is up nearly 58 per cent over the same period last season. The Penguins, who had been remarkably devoid of fan support throughout most of their previous three years of operation, entered the current season with an operating deficit of more than $5.6 million.

* * *

CHICAGO (AP) — Ernie Banks, who will turn 40 Jan. 31, signed for his 18th baseball season with Chicago Cubs Tuesday. Technically, first baseman Banks signed his 1971 pact as a player-coach, which he also did two years ago in signing a two-season contract.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Heavyweight contender Oscar Bonavena suffered an injured left hand in a mis-directed blow at a punching bag Tuesday, and his Feb. 12 match against Floyd Patterson in New York will be postponed. The injury occurred during a final workout at the Luna Park Gym before Bonavena was to leave for Puerto Rico to continue training for the bout against ex-champion Patterson at Madison Square Garden in New York.

NEW YORK (AP) — Herve Filion of Lachute, Que., won a world record 486 races in 1970 and also led all North American drivers with $1,647,837 earned, according to official United States Trotting Association statistics released Tuesday.

SONNY LISTON

Liston's Death 'Natural'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Charles (Sonny) Liston, former heavyweight boxing champion, died from natural causes, but traces of narcotics were found in body tissues, a Clark County coroner's report said Tuesday.

The report said Liston, found dead in the bedroom of his $60,000 split-level home here Jan. 6, died from poor oxygen to heart muscles caused partially by heart circulation problems.

But the coroner, Dr. Mark Herman, said traces of codeine and morphine were found in the former champion's body tissues and that scar tissue, possibly from needle marks, was found in the left bend of the elbow.

Dr. Herman said morphine and codeine are "breakdown" products of heroin. Oficers had said a quarter-ounce of heroin was found in a balloon in Liston's kitchen, plus a small quantity of marijuana.

Sister Propped Up Ailing Skater

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bernard Souche had the flu all day and a nose bleed shortly before going on to the ice for the finals of the novice pairs competition at the Canadian figure skating championships Tuesday.

His partner, 13-year-old sister Marie, told herself she would just have to work that much harder during the routine to help along her 15-year-old brother.

Competing out of the Upper Canada Skating Club in Toronto, the pair combined for a near-flawless performance to capture the novice pairs championship, receiving first-place totals from six of the seven judges.

It was the first championship to be decided in the six-day competition, and the only one Tuesday.

Reid Macdonald of Preston, Ont. and Janice Maikawa of Dundas, Ont. finished second with 55.8 points, 3.1 behind the champions. The Vancouver entry of Carol Kreuzinger and Orin Cox placed third.

Most of the day's activity centred around the arrival of two of the country's top senior ladies—defending champion Karen Magnussen of Vancouver and Cathy Lee Irwin, a native of Toronto.

Miss Magnussen, 18, is expected to retain her national title in preparation for the North American championship next month.

Until a week ago her main competition here was expected to come from Miss Irwin, an 18-year-old blonde who arrived on crutches, the result of a practice mishap last week. Despite the fractured pelvis that is keeping her off skates for six weeks, the 1970 Canadian runner-up stole the spotlight.

Miss Irwin, who fielded questions throughout the day from reporters, officials, skaters, spectators and other wellwishers, said:

"What can I say? They all say they're sorry it happened. All I can say is 'so am I'."

After finishing 10th in last year's world competition—"a good start for me"—she expected to improve that standing this year and take aim at the 1972 Olympics.

The combination of Miss Magnussen and Miss Irwin would have given Canada two of the finest female skaters in international competition.

"I'll have to work that much harder now," Miss Irwin said. "I'll have to really skate well and hope to make the selectors think that I'm skating well and deserve a chance at the '72 Olympics."

Ontario skaters dominated the opening day's events. Besides winning the novice pairs' title, Ontario entries led after completion of the compulsory figures in the novice men's and ladies' singles and the initial rounds of the novice and junior dance events.

Lee Armstrong of Chatham, Ont. held a solid margin over Kevin Robertson of Toronto in the men's event while Kim Wylie of Galt, Ont. was atop the ladies' section.

CATHY LEE IRWIN

Ginnie Griceo and John Rait of Toronto were the novice dance leaders after the first round Tuesday with David Porter and Barbara Berezowski also of Toronto, holding a narrow margin in the junior dance.

The junior dance event was the closest with the leaders less than one point in front of the runners-up, Keith Campbell and Judy Currah of St. Thomas, Ont. Miss Berezowski and Porter compiled 127.3 points after their opening performance compared to 126.7 for the second-place combo.

Miss Grieco and Rait were awarded 83.9 points for their novice dance routine, good for a 2.8-point lead over David and Marilyn Johnstone of Vancouver. Another Vancouver pair, Randy and Debbie Burke, held down third spot going into the final round Thursday.

Armstrong came up with a strong compulsory figures showing to earn 234.4 points, which gave him a good lead over Kevin Robertson of Toronto, second with 214 points. Robert Dick of Vancouver held down third spot.

Miss Wylie had little breathing room in the novice ladies' event with 232.8 points, only eight in front of Barbara Terpenning of Vancouver. Cynthia Zacher of Oakville, Ont. followed with 222.4 points.

The novice men's and ladies' events will decide champions tonight with the free skating sections. The novice and junior dance final rounds are both scheduled for Thursday evening.

Quebec Cabinet to Meet

ID Cards Will Be Debated

QUEBEC (CP) — The touchy question of compulsory identification cards for all Quebec residents will be debated at a weekend cabinet meeting Jan. 23-24, Premier Robert Bourassa said Tuesday.

However, the possible issuing of such cards, first proposed by Justice Minister Jerome Choquette during the recent kidnap crisis, would be only part of a general discussion of subjects to be included in a white paper on justice in Quebec.

Officials in the justice department say Mr. Choquette has retained his interest in ID cards but does not want to make a definite decision until a thorough report on the matter has been completed.

A special committee has already been set up to examine all aspects of issuing such cards. It will also compile reactions to the idea before submitting recommendations to the justice department.

Mr. Choquette announced during a meeting of Crown prosecutors Nov. 8 that he was considering cards.

The kidnap crisis, he said, proved that police required new methods to maintain public order and "to assure the liberties and rights of citizens."

It was clear, he said, that police did not have sufficiet information on the whereabouts of certain individuals in the province "to control the situation effectively."

The prosecutors were told that "a law governing compulsory identification cards to my mind constitutes a minimum technique that a modern state requires to handle different criminal elements, be they terrorists or organized crime."

A decision on the cards will have to made soon as Mr. Choquette plans to introduce his white paper during the next national assembly session beginning Feb. 23.

Among its problems, however, is the legality of identification cards which would be compulsory in only one province.

Federal goverment officials, while not declaring such cards to be unconstitutional, are known to regard the proposal with some skepticism.

An opinion poll conducted among French-speaking citizens has indicated 86 per cent would favor ID cards. Only 66 percent of English Quebecers were in favor.

What information they would carry has not been determined, although Mr. Choquette said at one point they should include a photo and fingerprints of the bearer.

A poll showed some 91 per cent of French-Canadians in the province favor the use of ID cards, primarily during elections. The separatist Parti Quebecois supports this position and will discuss the issue at a party conference in mid-February.

Different cards are already in use by Quebecers, notably those for social security and the province's health insurance scheme.

Other cards are used in the construction business and other industries and are used primarily to classify workers.

Some sources suggest ID cards could be used during the purchase of arms or dynamite, for identification at public assemblies and in many other ways.

Cost of the scheme has been estimated at $5 million to $10 million, plus several more million a year to keep it running, at a time when the Liberal government is trying to pare expenses.

A major critic of the proposal is Jacques Hebert, publisher of Les Editions du Jour and president of the Quebec Civil Liberties Union.

"I am absolutely opposed to any system of state identity cards," he said in a recent interview.

"They would be useless in the fight against crime and a source of problems for honest people.

"People in the underworld or those who operate outside the law would get cards anyway — be they genuine or forged. Right now they manage to get themselves false passports so why should it be any different with identity cards?

"In the long run it just allows for more direct control over citizens by police."

He Blames Trudeau

W. A. C. Bennett, premier and finance minister of British Columbia, blames Prime Minister Trudeau and the Quebec government for the turmoil in Quebec. In an interview with The Canadian Press, Mr. Bennett said Mr. Trudeau gave priority to constitutional change instead of economic development and Quebec failed to develop her resources.

Benson Sees Stage Set for Future Prosperity

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister E. J. Benson told the Commons Tuesday the government has set the stage "for a substantial improvement in production, employment and real income," with current fiscal and monetary policies.

He attacked Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield for urging tax cuts that would cost the government up to $1 billion without directly helping the poor or the unemployed.

The Commons defeated 108 to 89 a Conservative motion deploring the "abysmal failure" of the government to stimulate the economy.

Standings in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 152, Conservative 72, New Democrat 23, Creditiste 13, Independent 1 and vacant 3.

Today, the House debates a bill setting up mining districts in the Yukon, and another bill authorizing a new rate structure for the Northern Canada Power Commission.

Mr. Benson gave no indication whether the government plans to introduce further policies to expand the economy and reduce unemployment.

But he said current policies, introduced in the December budget and earlier, could accelerate the economy to capacity by the end of the year.

The budget forecast a deficit in 1971-72 of $570 million.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas accused the minister of raising "the old bogeyman" of a lack of funds to combat unemployment.

With the economy going at full steam, any deficit would be recovered even with lower tax rates

As it is, the country is losing $5 billion a year through lost productivity by unemployment, Mr. Douglas said.

Mr. Benson agreed with Mr. Stanfield that tax cuts would stimulate the economy wihout an immediate inflationary effect.

But he said tax cuts would not help the unemployed and the poor, who do not pay taxes anyway.

The government's policy of direct payments to lagging sectors of the economy has a quicker impact on unemployment without the risk of renewed inflation, Mr. Benson said.

The minister cited as examples the $150 million in loans to the provinces designed for immediate make-work projects, grants to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., aid to shipbuilding and the shoe industry and regional incentives to eastern Ontario and the Montreal and Hull, Que., areas.

As a sign of the government's success, Mr. Benson cited unemployment statistics showing that the seasonally-adjusted rates for the last three months had been kept below the September high of 6.9 per cent. The December rate was 6.6 per cent, or 538,000 unemployed.

He also repeated reports from several authorities, including the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, predicting an economic boom by the end of the year.

The Opposition, Mr. Benson said, had been "totally devoid of any sound policies or programs for dealing effectively with earlier problems that plagued our economy and they are bankrupt of sound ideas in respect of our current needs."

Opposition MPs had engaged "in a frantic scramble to outdo each other in their demands for massive tax cuts and increased government spending without the slightest consideration for the severe damage that could be inflicted on our economy if their proposals were adopted."

J. Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque) accused the government of "callous incompetence" in creating high unemployment.

But he disagreed with suggestions that the government incur a larger deficit.

Earlier in the Commons, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said rationalization of industry might lead to future unemployment.

Making certain industries competitive in world markets could mean temporary unemployment, but the government's goal was still full employment.

Steve Otto (L—York East) said the government should consider nationalization of the chartered banks, which had not acted in the national interest.

Liberal Policy Papers Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — A dissident group within the Ontario Liberals will urge the party to ditch many proposals in recent policy papers, replacing them with concrete proposals to increase employment and improve the quality of life.

Spokesman K. R. Blowbatt of nearby Mississauga said in an interview Tuesday night the group, based mainly in Toronto ridings, wants the party to advocate Ontario using its surplus resources to buy its way into the U.S. market.

They will present their proposals to the party policy conference being held here beginning Thursday in preparation for the next provincial election.

Sale of recreation lands to non-Canadians should be stopped, land now held by non-Canadians should over a period of time be returned to Canadians or the Crown and assistance should be given to Canadians buying foreign-held property.

Mr. Blowatt said the group also wants all beaches opened to the publicnand all mining and logging in provincial parks stopped.

The group also would end forgivable loans to subsidiaries of foreign-based companies, create an Ontario development bank and give tax incentives to Ontario research and companies.

In a wide-ranging proposal on combatting pollution, the group would ban after next year fuel oils with sulphur content higher than .01 per cent, and stop the use of fossil fuels by the year 2020.

Use of phosphates would be banned by 1973, raw sewage dumping would end by 1975 and the use of fertilizers and manure spreading would be stopped next year.

Stanfield Meets Jobless in Montreal on Tuesday

MONTREAL (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's whirlwind tour of Montreal Tuesday gave him the opportunity to meet some of the city's jobless and see a group of unemployed persons trying to pull themselves up by the bootstraps.

Mr. Stanfield, beginning the eastern leg of his cross-country tour to investigate unemployment, began his meetings with the city's unemployed in the modern Canada Manpower centre and finished them in a dingy, converted warehouse in the low-income St. Henri district.

The national leader of the Progressive Conservatives also took part in an early-morning open-line program on radio station CKVL and met labor leaders in two closed-door meetings.

During the open-line program and in a pre-luncheon interview with reporters, Mr. Stanfield blasted the federal government for its economic policies and called the level of unemployment "a Canadian disaster."

Speaking mainly in French, the Opposition leader said he is particularly concerned with the "dramatic" increase in unemployment among persons under 25.

He reiterated his demand that the government abolish the three-per-cent surtax on personal incomes and reduce or eliminate the 11-per-cent tax on building materials.

Mr. Stanfield said the Liberal government in Ottawa must bear the blame for the high level of unemployment in Canada.

"The federal government is responsible because the rate of unemployment is mainly the result of its economic policy and the methods adopted by the government to fight inflation."

At the Maison du Chomeur, a co-operative run by unemployed people in the poor St. Henri district, he expressed admiration for the efforts of the area's jobless to improve their own situation.

He was greeted at the converted warehouse by 38-year-old Jean Pilon, who said the Opposition leader was welcomed as an individual rather than as a politician because the co-operative is non-political.

After viewing the workshops in which old clothes, furniture, appliances and toys are refurbished to be sold, Mr. Stanfield called the Maison du Chomeur "a great effort" and said he hopes "the initiative will recieve the support of the community."

He told workers in the co-operative they had accepted their responsibility "and I hope society will accept its."

Mr. Pilon, who told reporters he was imprisoned without charge for 10 days after invocation of the War Measures Act, said the Maison du Chomeur is not the important thing—"it's that the idea survive."

The end of Mr. Stanfield's visit, in the dingy confines of the Maison du Chomeur with its rough wood floors and brick walls, was a vivid contrast to the beginning of his tour in the downtown manpower centre.

There the Opposition leader chatted with persons applying for manpower's assistance in finding jobs.

Two recent immigrants, one from Brazil and the other from Haiti, told Mr. Stanfield they had been unable to find permanent jobs in Canada despite high qualifications.

Arnobio Rebeiro, 22, said that despite training as an accountant in Brazil he has had trouble finding work here "because I don't have Canadian experience."

A. Antoine, 28, said that although he was a qualified teacher and holder of Haitian law diploma he is willing to take manual work in Montreal because he can find nothing more suitable to his qualifications.

Seaway Toll Boost Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A government-commissioned report recommends a stiff, independent approach by Canada to ease the economic squeeze on the Canadian section of the St. Lawrence seaway.

The report, by D. W. Carr and Associates Ltd., recommends among other things a 25-per-cent toll increase by Canada over the next five years although this could involve breaking a tradition of seaway co-operation with the United States.

Present toll arrangements date back to 1959.

The recommendation follows a move by the U.S. earlier this month to lift financial pressures from the American section of the seaway as a means of eliminating the need for toll increases.

The Carr report, tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Transport Minister Don Jamieson, says the U.S. will likely strongly oppose Canadian efforts to raise tolls since Canada now pays a heavy share of seaway costs leaving the Americans in a relatively comfortable position.

Canada could, however, act unilaterally to increase charges in areas under Canadian jurisdiction.

Initial reaction to the report from the shipping industry was predictably opposed.

Lawson Kaake, vice-president of Upper Lakes Shipping, said in Toronto increased seaway tolls would probably inhibit shipping through the locks, especially grain and iron ore."

In Montreal J. W. McGiffin, president and chief executive officer of Canada Steamship Lines, said the suggestion was "shocking news."

"This will hurt the whole inland shipping industry," he said.

The report also recommended a financial re-structuring of the seaway.

This need not require complete write-offs of established capital obligations. It would, however, exempt the seaway from re-payments of capital investment unless revenues became sufficient for this.

Only those public capital investments which could be shown to be self-supporting could be assigned for recovery under the proposed re-structuring plan.

The recent American legislation forgives the U.S. seaway authority more than $22 million owed to the government in interest.

No further interest will be charged by the U.S. treasury on the $133.5 million U.S. seaway debt. Interest still is charged on the Canadian debt of about $400 million.

Canadian authorities are under added pressure to find additional sources of revenue because of salary demands now being put forward by 1,300 seaway workers in Canada, members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. The report did not deal with this issue.

The Canadians and Americans met in 1966 to discuss raising tolls but decided to leave them at the same levels, stipulating that either country could call a further meeting this year.

Mr. Jamieson said outside the Commons Tuesday there would not likely be a toll increase this year but he emphasized that Canada has the authority to raise its own tolls unilaterally.

Canada, the report says, provides about two-thirds of the over-all public investment in canals, locks and connecting channels. On the lakes and rivers above Lake Erie, the U.S. provided most of the investment but its use of those facilities also was predominant.

On the waterway below Lake Erie, the U.S. provided about 11 per cent of the public investment but had 50 per cent of the Canada-U.S. seaway traffic to Montreal and 3 per cent from Montreal to the Atlantic.

The report quotes statements from the transport department on the government's desire to recover the costs of operating transport systems from charges to users and other beneficiaries as far as possible.

But in 1969, the report said, only about one-third of Canada's annual expenditures for the St. Lawrence waterway were recovered.

Under existing conditions, Canada carried about six-sevenths of the deficits and five-sixths of the investment costs of the seaway although Canadians and Americans had about equal shares of traffic.

Break Comes in Ford of Canada Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — More than 400 salaried workers represented by the United Auto Workers reached a tentative agreement with Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. early today.

The 467 workers are to have a ratification meeting today and if they approve their new three-year contract, they can be back to work Thursday, said a company spokesman.

However, the strike by more than 13,000 hourly-rated auto workers will continue. Hourly and salaried workers bargain separately.

The tentative agreement between 301 workers represented by Local 240 in four Windsor plants and the 166 represented by Local 1324 in the national parts depot in Bramalea, Ont., is patterned after the agreement reached by the company with its non-union salaried employees in the United States and called for a 13-per-cent pay increase in the first year of the contract.

Details of the agreement were withheld until completion of today's ratification vote. Company sources said the wage settlement would be "Canadian." The pay hikes are expected to show adjustment for the difference between Canadian and U.S. cost-of-living increases.

The strike began Tuesday. Talks aimed at setting it were scheduled to resume this morning with intense bargaining aimed at a new three-year contract expected. Prospects of a shore strike remained good.

An hour after about 14,000 hourly and salaried union workers set up pickets Tuesday, Ford made a third economic offer which included a retroactive pay clause similar to the tentative settlement reached just hours before by the UAW at Chrysler Corp. and its subsidiary, Chrysler Canada Ltd.

Ford's second economic offer, issued Friday under a news blackout, did not include retroactivity. The United States Ford Motor Corp. reached agreement Dec. 8 with the UAW with a retroactivity clause. Retroactive pay was a key union demand with Big Three automakers which have settled.

After the firm made its third offer, a company spokesman in Oakville announced Ford of Canada would increase the price of its 1971 Ford passenger cars by $13—or an average of 3.6 per cent above 1970 prices with other increases figured in.

The spokesman said the increases came because of chages in competitive market conditions and higher costs—believed to include costs such as retroactive pay which a settlemet with the UAW would involve

Complex Web of Events Misled Airliner Probe

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — The federal inquiry into the July 5 Air Canada disaster here was misled by a complex string of events into believing First Officer Donald Rowland had flecks of paint on his hand from the doomed jet's spoiler lever, a coroner's inquest heard Tuesday.

Expert witnesses at the December inquiry who blamed First Officer Rowland for prematurely activating the spoilers, causing the crash, relied in part on the physical evidence of the yellow paint on his hand matching that on the spoiler lever.

But the inquest held by Ontario supervising coroner Dr. H. B. Cotnam, disclosed these major errors at the earlier inquiry into the crash which claimed 109 lives:

—The severed hands on which the paint was found were those of Captain Peter Hamilton, the pilot, not First Officer Rowland. There was no paint on the hands of others of the air crew.

—An Air Canada captain told the December inquiry that in the cockpit only the spoiler lever was painted yellow, but the inquest heard that paint identical to that found on the pilot's hands could have been picked up from at least 20 other pieces of equipment in the cockpit.

—The mistake was compounded by photocopying which resulted in a mix-up of the names of the pilot and first officer.

The investigators said Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Exchequer Court of Canada, who conducted the December inquiry has been told of the paint error which Dr. Cotnam Tuesday called "a very damning bit of evidence."

But evidence from the federal inquiry so far unrefuted by the inquest includes a voice tape from the plane's recorder which survived the crash. Captain Hamilton said "No, no, no!" and First Officer Rowland apologized after the time came for arming the spoilers, panels along the wings which brake the plane on landing.

Premature deployment of the spoilers caused the plane to drop like a stone and lose an engine during a landing attempt. The DC-8 from Montreal lost a wing and crashed three minutes later while trying to circle for another landing attempt at Toronto International Airport.

The inquest in this town 27 miles northwest of Toronto heard Tuesday:

—A provincial police officer told a doctor he noticed paint flecks on First Officer Rowland's hand while moving the severed hands of all the flight deck officers from a temporary morgue to a hospital.

—Another doctor involved in the human factors team investigation received this information verbally.

—Forensic specialists in their reports correctly noted the paint flecks were embedded in Captain Hamilton's hands.

—In photocopying the reports for passing along to the department team the names of the crew members were obliterated from the top of each report by the photocopier.

—On receiving the reports, the human-factors doctors believed the one that mentioned paint flecks dealt with the first officer rather than the captain, because of the earlier conversation with the hospital doctor.

The mistakes were passed by a battery of 17 expert witnesses who testified at the inquiry. These included transport department investigators, Air Canada officials, doctors and lawyers.

The coroner said Tuesday the mixup in names was discovered at the provincial level during preparations for the inquest which started Monday and may end today or Thursday.

QUESTION: Can you give us any information about Isle of Palms and Hilton Head Island in South Carolina? How can they be reached?

ANSWER: Isle of Palms is an ocean resort with one of the finest beaches in South Carolina, about 500 feet wide at low tide. It is 13 miles east of Charleston by Grace Memorial Bridge, U.S. 17 and State 703. Hilton Head Island is reached by U.S. 278 off U.S. 17, south of Charleston. Beginning in 1526, Spanish, French and then English colonists attempted to settle here. Not until the middle of the 18th century did the bickering between nations and the threat of Indian raids abate. Plantations sprouted and the economy prospered until the Civil War. On the Atlantic Ocean in the extreme southeastern corner of South Carolina, the spotlight is again on Hilton Head Island, this time as an all-year resort. The island has five championship 18-hole golf courses. Water sports, riding and hunting may be enjoyed. Much of the island is a wildlife preserve.

Did you know that between 1900 and 1933 more than 125 different makes of cars were produced in Canada? Or that as early as 1851, a Saint John, New Brunswick, carpenter built a three-wheeled wagon? Or that in 1909, Prince Edward Island banned motor cars? These are some of the fascinating, yet relatively unknown, facts revealed in the book "Canada on Wheels" by John de Bondt.

Subtitled "A Portfolio of Early Canadian Cars", this handsomely designed, 48-page book is a collection of illustrated car advertisements, supplemented by brief texts about the cars and their inventors. It's the nostalgic history of the Canadian-made cars — The Russell, McLaughlin, McKay, Maritime Singer, Regal, Dominion and Queen.

The author, a member of the Antique Automobile Club of Ottawa, describes the arrival of the horseless carriage to Canada and the hostile reception it received from horse riders. The law forbade motorists to drive "in a manner likely to frighten a horse," while the Ontario Motor League ran "schools for restive horses."

The Library Corner

By O. D.

Periodical publications are indexed to make it possible for you to locate that article you remember seeing; or to locate up-to-date material on current topics for which there is as yet little book material. The magazine world is an extensive one and finding exactly what you want from it without the help of indexes can be like looking for that needle in the haystack. The reference department of your Public Library has indexes to American and Canadian magazines. During the recent weeks these have helped people find information about how to build an ice boat; Solzenitsyn, the Russian author and Nobel prize winner; wine and wine making; Farley Mowat; poverty in Canada; the date of Saturday Evening Post's death; Negroes in sports; Charles Schulz, the creator of "Peanuts" Sheep and dreams; Warrendale, the special home for disturbed children; Jimi Hendrix; pollution; Fashion snowmobiling.

Back issues of many magazines are kept on file at your library. Without indexes you could not so easily make use of the countless pieces of information in periodicals. Some of the magazines subscribed to by your public library are: Business Week; Artscanada; Better Homes and Gardens; nal; Canadian Historical Review; Canadian Journal of Economics and Political science; Canadian Literature; Consumer Bulletin; Consumer Reports; High Fidelity Popular Mechanics; Scientific American.

Information comes in many forms. Even the format of the book, which is a chief source of information, can differ radically depending on the type of material it contains — perhaps its a directory of businesses, a dictionary of scientific terms, an atlas of historical events. books, the reference department helps to answer questions with files of pamphlets, newspaper clippings, government reports, research reports, maps and telephone and business directories.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Berean choir ensemble of Brockville were in charge of a musical at Westminster United Church on Sunday evening. The choir consisted of 25 singers, the choir leader and their pastor Rev. L. Haig. They were accompanied by a piano, two guitars and a bass fiddle. They sang a number of hymns and then mingled with the congregation shaking hands with all. Prior to the musical, the Brockville group were served supper by the Hi-C girls.

Bible study was held at the home of Mrs. Russell with a good attendance.

A film was shown at Holloway Street United Church on Tuesday evening by the ecumenical sisterhood of Mary of Dearmsteadt, Germany. The film was on the building of their chapel.

Unit one of the Westminster UCW met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. George Bilham in charge of the devotional period.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Clifford Millar, Miss Carolyn Millar and Debbie Brown attended a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Wilfred Doyle with Mrs. Dan Murphy as co-hostess to honor Miss Carole Irvin of Napanee who will be married in February.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Ulcer Surgery Sometimes Fails

Many ulcer patients have said to me: "I smoke, I drink, I like spicy foods. Why should I consent to months or years of restrictions in my way of life? Isn't it better to have an operation and get the whole thing over with?"

I have answered that although a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, a straight line to the operaing room isn't invariably the shortest way to recovery from an ulcer.

I am not denigrating the need for surgery in some patients. Ulcer complications like hemorrhage, perforation (and peritonitis), or a closed-off opening that prevents food getting through to the intes- for operation. But for the majority of patients with duodenal ulcer, most doctors agree that medical treatment should be given a "long try" before surgery is considered.

Although stomach surgery doesn't always end with complications, there is always the possibility that the "shortcut" to recovery is not always the easy way out of the difficulty. Here is a letter from one patient who preferred surgery rather than "slow" medical treatment:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I write this letter for Mr. Z., who is anxious to have his ulcer removed by surgery without trying medical treatment. I suggest he stick to medical management even if it takes years.

In September, 1967, I had a duodenal ulcer removed which took out over 50 per cent of my stomach. I never smoked or drank. Just worried too much.

After the surgery I kept on going downhill. No one could understand what was wrong; some thought it was simply a severe depression. I could not keep anything down. I had diarrhea for about three months after the operation. I developed hepatitis from the blood I received in surgery. I was in intensive care for weeks.

Doctors were puzzled because I couldn't keep things down. After I had lost much weight (I went from 120 pounds to 67 pounds) and also had lost most of my hair, doctors put me on a special diet which excluded oats, wheat, rye and barley. They call it a gluten free diet and I have to stay on it for the rest of my life.

But I thank God for those wonderful doctors in research who discovered my real trouble. If not for them I wouldn't be here today. Everyone calls me a walking miracle. The disease I have in addition to my ulcer trouble) is called sprue. They say I have always had it but it never gave me any trouble until after I had surgery.

A good many times I wished I had been patient enough to take medical treatment for my ulcer, and not surgery. Because we cannot always foresee results, I suggest to Mr. Z., that he give it a lot of thought. — Mrs. S.

Comment: This, of course, is a very unusual complication of ulcer surgery. However, any patient with ulcer in doubt about whether he should have medical or surgical treatment should not rely upon generalities. Before you make your decision, I suggest you ask for opinions from at least one gastroenterologist and one surgeon. I repeat: better not rush headlong into surgery just because you are impatient.

• • •

For Mrs. B.: I doubt that using "bust cream" is a surefire remedy for flat breasts.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have suffered on and off with kidney stones for eight years. Right now I'm having almost constant pain again. My doctor just pats me on the back and says it will go away. He has refused to refer me to a kidney specialist in consultation. — Mrs. F.

Comment: Insist on seeing a urologist. Now.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 21

Your birthday today: The unexpected is the norm for you in this promising year of diligent work. You will build new resources, increase earning capacity. A setback stimulates you to redevelop, conquer, or by-pass the hindrance. Emotional connections either become very meaningful or dwindle. Of today's natives, the women are quite sociable, co-operative, the men generally adverse to close social contact. Neither is likely to let anybody tell them what to do.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your judgment in buying tools, appliances, small objects proves sound. Offer reasons for people to help, and they will. Visit people who can do business with you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You make rather good deals now; settle promptly while these conditions last. Do something different for recreation, take along your mate or an old friend.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Establish a broad range of co-operation — get more people in the habit of working with you, share the feeling of effective activity. Spruce up your home a bit.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Young people attract and deserve your attention. Wearing your best clothes, a new style of grooming do marvels for your morale, may help you put over a better deal.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Make the most of your personal appearance. A brief rest (perhaps for meditation) in the middle of the day adds energy. Friends are off schedule but fun and lively.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Good news is on the way, some exciting changes of opinions. You can go into projects that seemed extreme not so long ago, and find it's nearly routine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You learn that affluent people are human beings with the same essential qualities as others. Go directly after what you really want, without worrying about side issues or pride.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Try to persuade people to see things your way. You have changes and rearrangements to make, some inconvenient at the moment but to your future advantage.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): If you listen carefully now, without making a fuss, you find an extra advantage from knowing something most others don't. Your favorite charity can make good use of your excess possessions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Lining up matters in the morning saves a great deal of inconvenience later. Conferences with friends brings you some helpful ideas. The evening is for study.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): A delicate balance tips in your favor now. Be tactful and graceful as you help it swing further. Pursue career advancement. Investment in working equipment pays off well.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Demand improvements where you feel you deserve them. Negotiations are favored now. Younger people provide temporary minor crises which later turn out humorously.

Point Anne Plant To Close by 1973

Postal Strike May Spread

LONDON (AP) — A threat of foreign support for striking British postal workers grew today in response to an appeal for foreign unions to cut communication links with Britain.

In Brussels, the general secretary of the Post, Telephone and Telegraph International, Stefan Nedzynski, said he had asked unions everywhere to support the walkout. The PTTI represents about 2.5 million workers in 82 countries.

Tom Jackson, general secretary of the 230,000-member Union of Postal Workers asked the PTTI on Wednesday night to urge unions in other countries to "cut Britain off."

Union representatives in the United States and Japan questioned the legality of a union ban on British communications.

Decision Announced By Canada Cement

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Management and union executives ~~today~~ began mutually exploring the impact of the Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd. decision to phase out its Point Anne, operations — a major contributor to Belleville - - area economy for three generations.

Talks between workers and company spokesmen were set for this afternoon — just 24 hours after Canada Cement told its labor force of 160 the Point Anne operation would wind up 70 years of production by late September 1973.

The operation will be replaced by a new cement plant the company is planning at Bath, near Kingston, where jobs will be provided for some retrained Point Anne workers.

Costs of both updating the Point Anne plant and measuring up to anti-pollution control demands were major factors in the shutdown decision, said the company.

The financial impact of the phase-out on the community economy has still to be assessed.

The plant, a seasonal operation, has a payroll "in excess" of $1 million a year, a company spokesman estimated today. Added to this is the monetary benefit of local goods purchased by the company.

The company also is a sizeable contributor to local taxes. Assessment on its plant facility alone equals about one-fifth of the total tax roll in Thurlow township, a township official said today.

The shutdown, while a closely-kept secret until yesterday's announcement, was not a complete surprise.

Community uncertainty over the plant's future first circulated with the announcement last July of plans for a technically - updated $49 million plant at Bath.

At that time, the company saw no shutdown at Point Anne in the "foreseeable" future.

However, the future of the Point Anne operation had been an "area of uncertainty" for its workers, Al Lloyd, president of the plant's Local 219, United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers Union, said last night.

Executive officers of Local 219 met in special session last night and, Mr. Lloyd said, a meeting of the general membership would be called next week to discuss the situation.

The company announcement said the "high cost of modernization and expenditures for efficient anti-pollution control would be uneconomical to make the plant competitive in today's market.

"Hence, the construction of a new cement plant at Bath . . . is anticipated which will replace the Point Anne production.

"Some of the employees will be retrained for the Bath plant," said the announcement. "The remainder will be offered retraining in other or similar skills through Canada Manpower . . ."

The company expected that a union - management committee would be formed to work with government officials to retrain and place employees in new vocations.

"As the phasing-out process will be over a 32-month period, depletion of the work force at the plant will be on a gradual scale," said the company. By such method, it is hoped that all employees will be relocated in other jobs at the end of the shutdown process."

Taylor Kennedy, Canada Cement president, noted the company had been a "major contributor" to the Belleville - area economy and said the loss to the community was "regrettable."

Leaving the area, he said, was not "an easy decision for me to make."

Reeve Horace Casey of Thurlow township, called the decision a "serious blow" to the economy of his municipality.

Such a move had been rumored for some time, said the reeve, but it was "quite a surprise when we learned it was official."

Neutral Indian Ocean Advocated by Ceylon

SINGAPORE (AP) — Ceylon warned Commonwealth leaders today that "cold war politics" could bring U.S. and Soviet intrusions into the states of the Indian Ocean region.

The warning was spelled out in a paper on Indian Ocean security submitted to the summit conference of 31 member-nations.

Ceylon presented its plan to 30 other Commonwealth leaders on the next-to-last day of the nine-day conference calling for neutralizing the Indian Ocean to keep it out of the sphere of the cold war between the superpowers.

Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike in particular sought an ocean that would be a nuclear-free zone guaranteed by the big powers.

In presenting her peace plan, Mrs Bandaranaike said Ceylon would not object "if Britain wishes to have a limited naval presence to patrol her trade routes as an act of vigilance. . . ."

She said:

"The substance of our position is that weapons attract weapons, and bases, whatever they may be called, will attract bases from the opposing parties."

For that reason, she said, Ceylon is opposed to the American-British communications centre being built on the island of Diego Garcia.

"Diego Garcia will be a territory under the control of one of the super powers, namely the United States of America," she said.

"I am aware that Diego Garcia has been referred to as a communications centre. But what guarantee, I ask, is there that such a communications centre will not be put to other purposes at a moment of crisis, by the country in control of it?" the prime minister asked.

As an alternative, she proposed that the ocean be declared a neutral, nuclear-free

Banda Tells Why He Backs Britain

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Africa's odd man out, Dr. Hastings Kamuzi Banda, president of Malawi, told reporters today why he supports Britain's proposed arms sales to South Africa and is against force to bring down the Pretoria government.

Waving his flywhisk to emphasis points, the 65-year-old doctor of medicine and lay preacher said:

"South Africa does not need any additional arms to keep the Africans down.

"Freedom fighters cannot win, neither can African states win because in my view there is not a single independent African state with an army, in fact not a group of African states with an army or group of armies to take on Rhodesia let alone South Africa."

Preventing British arms sales would unite the white southerners because of a sense of isolation and encourage harsher treatment of Africans within these countries, he said.

This would defeat his policy of trying to win the liberal elements of South Africa. "There is a movement in South Africa, a great movement of coming to terms with the Africans," he said.

Fighting a war did not just mean sending in a bunch of soldiers, it required a strong economy and vast industrial resources which no African country had, Dr. Banda said.

The president also rejected the idea of outside help from the Soviet Union or China to bring about a change of government and remove the policy of racism and apartheid.

"Outside liberators are liberators as long as they are fighting who they are fighting. Once they have finished, they themselves become rulers and masters," he said, illustrating his reasoning with copious historical references.

He called on his fellow Africans not to force Britain to choose between the blacks and white of Africa.

Soviet Spy Can Visit Homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government has agreed to allow a convicted Soviet spy, currently out on bail in the United States, to return to the Soviet Union for humanitarian and other reasons, the state department announced Wednesday.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey said Igor A. Ivanov, sentenced in 1964 to a 20-year jail term, is being granted permission to return to his homeland until such time as his presence back in the U.S. is required by court proceedings here.

Ivanov's father is reported ill, and the Soviet government has asked permission for Ivanov's return on a number of occasions in past years, McCloskey said.

A separate statement from the U.S. justice department said "the action was determined to be serving the best interests of the United States.

"There was no deal involved" for reciprocal return of an American from the Soviet Union to the United States, the state department spokesman said.

The justice department said the court order, in Newark, N.J., permitting Ivanov to return to the Soviet Union includes a stipulation signed by Ivanov that he will return to the United States when directed by the court.

Ivanov, arrested in 1963, has been out on $100,000 bail under terms barring him from going outside the New York City, Glen Cove Long Island and New Jersey area, McCloskey said.

Next-day Delivery Mail System Works

TORONTO (CP) — Hey, it works!

Although the post office's next-day delivery system doesn't officially go into effect here until Feb. 1, The Canadian Press gave it a try out Tuesday.

The system, which has been tested here for the last two months, guarantees delivery the next day in most Canadian cities for first-class mail deposited in a city box before 1 a.m.

Letters mailed here Tuesday before the deadline reached bureaus of the news-gathering co - operative Wednesday, from coast to coast. In all cases but one, at Winnipeg, the mail got through before noon local times.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Snowfall accumulations are expected to amount to one to three inches in most regions before the precipitation ends later today. Mild air spreading northward ahead of this system will raise temperatures into the mid to upper 30s near the lower Great Lakes today. Precipitation will likely change to rain in the south this afternoon as temperatures rise above the freezing mark. Friday will be cloudy and a little colder over most of the province.

Great Hunks of Land Are Sliding About Globe

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — The earth's crust is a dynamic, swirling, rapidly changing mass, great hunks of which are sliding about the globe.

Each year, the North and South American continents and Africa are moving an inch farther apart. The floor of the east-central Pacific Ocean moves northward an inch in the year.

Iron, manganese, other ores, are spread across vast areas of ocean bottom waiting to be mined if man can do it. Other areas of the ocean bottom, mostly near coastlines, are vast reservoirs of oil and gas also waiting to be tapped.

All this has emerged from the voyages of the Glomar Challenger, a deep-sea drilling vessel that has bored nearly 200 holes into the sediments of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, the Gulf of Mexico and the Mediterranean Sea over the last two years.

Dr. Melvin Peterson, investigator for the project and associate professor of oceanography at San Diego's Scripps Institution of Oceanography, says the most important contribution of the project so far has been proving that the earth's crush is broken into pieces, or plates.

"Before the Deep Sea Drilling Project, the idea of a plate was accepted by a small fraction of scientists," he said. "Now, the idea of plate tectonics and continental drift has been pushed over the top as an accepted fact and has become a working tool for exploration of the earth in an economic sense."

Other project findings have shown that:

—Most of the ocean bottoms are less than 200 million years old, compared with the earth's 4,500 million year age—meaning the ocean basins are much younger than the water in them and have not been permanent features of the earth as some geologists had thought.

—Undersea mountain ridges are slowly spreading apart, allowing molten material from the earth's interior to ooze up through the cracks to form new ocean floor.

Children for Adoption, Unwed Mothers Set County Record

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The number of children placed in adoption by the Family and Children's Services of Hastings county reached a record high in 1970.

The report of the CAS director Bruce Kerr, given to county council yesterday by committee chairman Charles Gordanier of Deloro, showed that 76 children had been placed in adoption last year by the county organization.

Mr. Kerr was unable to state the reasons for the upward surge of interest in adoption, but suggested extensive advertising programs authorized by the province of Ontario had had some effect.

At the same time Mr. Kerr said he would like to think that his own department's placement ethics had something to do with the increased number of adoptions.

Despite the increased number of adoptions, Mr. Kerr said CAS ended 1970 with 156 children in care — 23 more than at the beginning of the year.

Of the total number of children in care, Hastings county was financially responsible for 26 — a decrease of seven from the year previous.

The report noted that the role of the CAS receiving centre at 73 Highland Ave. had been changed to a group care home to meet the need for facilities to cope with emotionally disturbed children.

Several child care workers trained in the management of problem children had been engaged.

The results had been most encouraging, according to Mr. Kerr's report. A number of children spend Monday to Friday in the Beechgrove Children's Unit attached to the Kingston psychiatrist hospital and return to Belleville for the weekend.

Transportation is provided with a mini-bus and while the cost of operation is considerable, it is but a fraction of the cost of private institutional care.

At the end of December, the CAS had 99 children living with foster families scattered throughout the county.

In addition to this the local CAS is supervising another 20 children in foster homes who are wards of other societies, and children who had moved into this area with their foster families.

The report also noted that Hastings, as well as across the province and throughout Canada, the percentage of births out of wedlock is increasing. Last year 97 single girls sought the assistance of the local CAS and of this number 59 relinquished their babies for adoption.

In connection with births out of wedlock, Mr. Kerr's report said that a new dimension had been added to the CAS unmarried parent work which could be described as "an exercise in futility."

One hundred and four women and girls had been referred to the county CAS last year and in each case a declaration of paternity was taken and an attempt made to secure voluntary financial assistance.

But only six of the putative fathers volunteered help.

"The point is that the agency has no authority to do more than inquire of the man if he wishes to volunteer assistance," stated the report. "If he says no, then the unmarried mother must seek recourse through the court."

Mr. Kerr said that under present legislation it was the responsibility of the CAS to make this contact on behalf of the girl and he was prepared to honor the obligation.

But as the cost of providing the service in terms of man-hours and field staff was disproportionately high in relation to results achieved, the exercise borders on the ridiculous.

"Surely there must be a better way to utilize staff and spend public monies," Mr. Kerr said in his report.

The CAS report drew a comment from Reeve S. J. Carr of Monteagle township who asked if something further could not be done to encourage young unmarried mothers to return to school.

He said that when young girls leave school to have their babies they seldom if ever return to classes.

Reeve Carr asked if any consideration had been given to setting up some kind of home where the girls could continue their education.

There was no further discussion on the suggestion and the CAS director's report was adopted without comment.

Another Use for Rolls

A torchlight parade will highlight the Belleville Winter Carnival, Feb. 4 - 7. Last night, Mrs. Marion Wardell, Mrs. Audrey Thompson, Denis Doyle, Lyle Thompson and Mrs. Betty Doyle formed part of a crew of Jaycees constructing torches using fruit juice cans, a piece of ½-inch wood and rolls of toilet tissue for the parade. When the 100 torches are finished, they will be saturated in oil.

Administrator Hired For Retarded Hospital

PICTON (Staff) — Dr. Donald Zarfus, director of the retardation branch of the Ontario department of health, reported this week that an administrator has been hired for the hospital scheduled to open at the former Camp Picton within a few weeks. An announcement concerning this appointment will be made soon according to Dr. Zarfus.

He added that the department has missed its mid-January target date for the beginning of staff hiring but said that it should begin "fairly soon."

Although department personnel have made periodic visits to the hospital, planned for 600 patients, both children and adults, no employees have located in residence.

It is expected that the hospital for the retarded will employ approximately 400 to 450 persons from Picton and Prince Edward County, contingent on the availability of required manpower. Dr. Zarfus has stated that a trainee working with youngsters will receive "just over $5,000 a year".

The first patients are expected to arrive within a few weeks from the Rideau Regional Hospital School, Smith Falls. About 40 children are to be transferred in this group and are described as mildly and moderately retarded.

The Craig Unit, two buildings comprising the Craig Barracks will provide accommodations for the more seriously retarded next fall.

Renovations to Craig Barracks and a number of the 243 married quarters in the former army camp have been under way for some time.

Dr. Zarfus has remarked that he does not think the complex is likely to exceed its projected population figure of 600 patients. He pointed out that the present trend is toward 200-300 patient hospitals. Highly populated units such as the Rideau Regional Hospital School are not being copied in terms of patient accommodation.

The first children transferred to the Picton hospital complex will reside in homes once part of Camp Picton's married quarters. Efforts will be made to make each unit self sufficient in regard to meal preparations and a home-like atmosphere will be stressed.

Dr. Zarfus has said that severely retarded persons receiving medical and nursing care will continue to be housed at the Smiths Falls Hospital School where 2,200 patients now reside.

ARTHUR N. STEET
(Picton)

Funeral service will be conducted here tomorrow for Arthur N. Steet, prominent Picton newsman for more than 50 years.

Mr. Steet, who died Tuesday in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital in his 74th year following a brief illness, had retired recently from the staff of the Picton Gazette.

An experienced compositor, linotype operator and reporter, Mr. Steet gained his initial experience with the now defunct Picton Times. Employed by the late J. W. McLean, he became foreman of the printing shop and worked as a reporter for this bi-weekly paper until it stopped publication about 10 years ago.

Mr. Steet at this time joined the staff of the Picton Gazette, where he worked as a compositor and linotype and press operator.

He had retired only last month after celebrating half a century of work in the newspaper world.

An enthusiastic sportsman, Mr. Steet served for many years as secretary of the Prince Edward Rod and Gun Club, supplying the local paper with weekly reports of trap shooting events.

A lifelong resident of Picton, Mr. Steet was unmarried. He is survived by two sisters, Marion of Picton and (Bessie) Mrs. Thomas Lightall, RR4, Picton.

Rev. Robert Stewart will conduct services from the Hicks Funeral Home tomorrow afternoon. Entombment will be in Glenwood Cemetery vault.

Bearers are Maj. R. Young, Danny Greenfield, Harry Leavitt, Roy Wight, Duff Folcard and James Hughes.

MRS. GEORGE WILLARD

Funeral service for Mrs. Eliza Jane (Betty) Willard, formerly of Frankford was conducted by Rev. C. E. Staples on Friday, Jan. 15 at the Rowe Funeral Home, Frankford, at 1.30 p.m.

Born in Stormon County, she was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Thompson.

She died on Tuesday, Jan 12 at Hastings Manor in her 68th year.

She is survived by sisters Mrs. Lewis Hutt and Mrs Clara Whittaker, both of Ottawa. She was predeceased by her husband George Willard.

Bearers were C. Smith, R Davis, N. Caldwell, R. Howe J. Jamieson and Alex Roote

Interment was in Frankford Cemetery.

JEREMIAH (JERRY) HORRIGAN

Jeremiah (Jerry) Horrigan died Wednesday at Belleville General Hospital. Mr. Horrigan, in his 70th year was from Read and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Horrigan.

Mr. Horrigan is survived by his wife, the former Veronica Hunt who is still on the farm in Read where Mr. Horrigan has worked all his life. He is survived by two daughters Elaine and Irene and a son Danny who is living in Oshawa.

Mr. Horrigan is also survived by three sisters: Mrs. Margaret Enright, Mrs. Lena Brennan, Mrs. Rita Enright, and a brother Michael Horrigan.

He was a member of the Holy Name Society and was active in St. Charles' Church.

The body is resting at the O'Brien Funeral Home. Mass will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at St. Charles' Church. Interment will be in St. Charles' Cemetery.

MISS KATHLEEN T. LAFFAM
(Madoc)

The funeral of Miss Kathleen T. Laffam was held Wednesday, January 20 from the MacKenzie Funeral Home, Madoc, to the Sacred Heart of Mary Church. Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev P. Murphy.

Bearers were, William Lahey, Thomas Lindale, Leslie Blakely, Robert Woods, John Flemming Jr., and Anthony Willemsen.

Interment was in the Sacred Heart of Mary Cemetery.

Lee Grills At Hearing

Lee Grills MP, Hastings, is among members of the Commons standing committee on agriculture now holding hearings in Eastern Canada on legislation proposing a national farm products agency.

The committee sessions opened in Halifax this week. Other hearings will be held in Quebec City and Toronto.

Under discussion is a government bill which proposes a national agency for marketing farm products in Canada.

IN MEMORIAM

LOGUE — In loving memory of my dear husband William who passed away four years ago on the 21st of January, 1967.

Your presence I miss
Your memory I treasure,
But in my heart you will,
Live on forever.

—Sadly missed by wife Ida E. Logue.

PINE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Bruce Pine, who passed away Jan. 21, 1969.

The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved,
From memory pass away.

—Ever remembered by his wife Florence, daughter Doris, son Robert.

CARDS OF THANKS

Cement Plant to Close

Point Anne's extensive holdings in plant, land — used or held for quarrying limestone for use in its manufacturing process — docking facilities and a company village of about 35 houses, represented a hefty slice of township assessment.

In total, the company annually received about 50 township tax assessment notices, Thurlow clerk-treasurer Claire Horton estimated today.

Municipal tax paid by the plant last year totalled $149,600. The township's total tax roll is almost $760,000, said Mr. Horton.

Mayor Russell Scott said he was sorry to hear of the decision.

However, the gradual operational phaseout over 32 months was an opportunity to locate job alternatives for the plant's work force "in present industry or new industry in the Belleville area."

Point Anne workers have "excellent training" in a number of industrial specialties, he said.

He also pondered the possibilities of a new industry purchasing the Point Anne site which, with its docking facilities on the Bay of Quinte, held promise for industrial barge transportation.

Use of barges for movement of industrial goods — while widespread in the United States — has not been tried in Canada, said the mayor.

If such a project became a reality Point Anne could become a key point in industrial water transportation in the Trent-Rideau area, the mayor believed.

Also involved in the shut down is the future of the company townsite — Point Anne village, which, flanking the plant, has provided low-rental homes for company workers.

A company spokesman today said about 35 houses in the village are still used as residences.

The future of the village is one of the items still to be explored, said a company spokesman today.

The efect of yesterday's announcement on work contracts also is unknown.

The current contract with Local 219 runs out this summer, said Mr. Lloyd. However he had no comment on how negotiations will proceed in the light of the phaseout decision.

Top wage rate at Point Anne now is $3.98 an hour, he said.

Since it was built in 1903, the plant has operated almost continually. It was closed for three years during the 1930s depression, but since that time its installations have grown.

A second kiln was added in 1948 and a third in 1953. (More recently — in 1967 — the plant closed for two months).

Last year the company began seeking quotations on pollution control equipment. In July it announced the first control phase was slated for early this year at a cost of $1,200,000.

Canada Cement originated from two plants on the site — Belleville Portland Cement, built in 1903, and Lehigh Cement Company, built in 1907. The companies were merged in 1909, when the Canada Cement Company was created.

Aside from its industrial identity, the Point Anne community name became widely known in recent years as the hometown of hockey star Bobby Hull and his brother Dennis.

Potter's Party Proves Popular

Birthday parties sometimes produce more candles than people.

Not so last night for Dr. Richard Potter.

More than 200 people turned out as hosts for the Quinte MPP at a birthday dinner organized in his honor at Centennial Secondary School cafeteria.

The occasion evoked a succession of tributes that left Dr. Potter obviously moved.

The number of candles on a small, symbolic birthday cake did not reveal exactly which birthday year he was celebrating.

But, after blowing out the candles, the MPP himself volunteered the information.

He wanted to correct an impression about his age, Dr. Potter drily told his audience.

"It's really my 56th birthday — not my 54th," he said.

The MPP — noted for his straight - talking style of oratory since entering provincial politics by winning election in 1967 — made no political remarks save for one oblique reference.

In the ensuing three years since his election, he said, "I feel we're gradually accomplishing what we set out to. I hope we can accomplish more in the future."

Beer Bibbers Rejoice! No More Forms

Beer and ale drinkers will be rejoicing all over Ontario next Monday.

Brewer's Retail stores all across the province have concluded the second phase of making purchases easier for the consumer.

Gone are the yellow and brown order slips and gone are the pencils.

All the customer has to do now is ask for his or her favorite brand at the counter.

"The "write up" counters are still on the floors for those who have trouble in remembering what brand they want to purchase, "but these eventually might go," said a spokesman for a Brewer's Retail store here.

The first phase saw the removal of the requirement for signing the order forms.

"We can't tell how successful this is going to be," said the spokesman, "but most people prefer it; in fact, it was the people, themselves, who asked for the order forms to be removed."

"We'll have to wait for a heavy weekend of business" before testing the effectiveness.

Computer tabulations have replaced the manual forms for sale and inventory checks.

Marble Plaque Honors Donors

Community spirit and service was celebrated Feb. 16 at Gilead Community Hall when about 80 people gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Clare.

Highlight of the evening was the unveiling of a marble plaque commemorating the Clare's donation of land for the site of the community hall.

The plaque is inscribed with the words: In grateful thanks to Mr. Wilfred Clare and his wife Olive who donated this land-site to Gilead Community Aug. 6, 1959.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare were present for the unveiling of the plaque and the social evening that began with a pot-luck supper. Graydon Pound, president of the Community Club was in charge of the evening's events, and Rev. John Morrison of St. Mark's Church, Cannifton, gave the prayers.

Garnet Denyes represented the Thurlow council and extended the best wishes of the township.

Lee Grills, MP for Hastings, remarked on the fine community spirit displayed at Gilead at a time when it is dying in other centres.

Mr. Clare concluded the evening by extending his best wishes to the community and expressing the hope that the hall will help keep community spirit alive.

Mrs. Harold Howes was in charge of the program, Mrs. Earl Ross was pianist and Earl Treverton erected the plaque, donated by Campbell Monument Company, Belleville.

White Paper Is Debated

Finance minister Edgar Benson's White Paper on Taxation was debated at the meeting of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants.

Wilfred Wilkinson, CA, who operates his own firm in Trenton, discussed some of the problems created by the White Paper, particularly for small businesses and for individuals. He proposed other solutions for taxation and conducted a question and answer period.

R. A. Pattison, provincial president of the Society of Industrial Accountants will speak at the next meeting Feb. 15. His subject will be The RIA — Action Central. The meeting will be a special students' night.

A Chat Before the Talk

Noel Stockton (left) information officer of the Unemployment Insurance Commission regional office in Belleville, chats with Belleville Sales and Ad club president Bruce Lynch before speaking on wider topics to club members. Mr. Stockton was guest speaker at club's regular monthly meeting this week.

Construction Workers Are in Short Supply

In spite of high local unemployment levels the Quinte area may have a shortage of carpenters and laborers.

Area builders have difficulty in finding skilled carpenter tradesmen and full-time laborers, Quinte Home Builders were told at their monthly meeting last night.

However, Thomas Smith of Manpower said this morning that there are "some" unemployed carpenters listed with his department and unskilled laborers are also available for employment. He added that he would prefer not to give the number of those unemployed.

But at the Home Builders meeting, Mike Demark, a local builder, said he had a "terrible time" to find skilled tradesmen, particularly carpenters.

"I can hire young people around 20 years old, train them at my own expense, only to find them leaving my company when they have some skill to find employment in industry," he said. "The only other choice I have is to hire men between 60 and 70 years old who are skilled carpenters but, because of their age, cannot do a good day's work."

Cold weather is another problem with some employees.

Bill Sidor, a Trenton builder, said "when I came on the job one day when it was ten below, I had only three men show up and they were not producing."

Vic Card of Belleville, who is in the machine excavating business, could not get one of his men to operate the machine, so he ran it himself.

Mr. Card called on his employee at his home and was told "it's too cold to work". Mr. Card suggested that with welfare payments and unemployment benefits his machine operator was "just as well off keeping warm at home".

Commented Jack Hamil, manager of a concrete supplier, "Some laborers just don't know how to work — maybe some training could be provided to teach laborers to work."

The subject of special training was introduced by the evening's speaker, Paul King, dean of technology at Loyalist College.

He offered the Home Builders a seat on the advisory committee of the college. Randy Loewan, association president, said "We will jump at the opportunity".

A past president, Don Keller, suggested that the builders have a community responsibility to Loyalist.

"Maybe we could provide some on - the - job practical training for students in the house construction field," he said. "The college could instruct in technology and we could give the actual experience in the applicable field".

WET WINTER

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP) — Dominic Charlie, the Squamish Indian band weather forecaster, has predicted a long, wet winter for British Columbia's coastal area. Dominic, 86, said at his home on the Capilano reserve: "Gonna rain all the time and some thunderstorms. Maybe a little snow, too, but not much."

Ceylon Advocates Neutral Ocean

zone under the joint supervision of the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and France.

The Indian Ocean, closely linked with the South Africa question, has already figured largely in the conference, many of the 22 speakers having dealt fully during the arms discussions with aspects of maritime security in the area.

Britain and Australia have repeatedly expressed their concern, during the conference, about a Soviet naval presence in the region which both say threatens vital trade routes. At one point last week, while British Prime Minister Heath spoke on the subject, a 19,200-ton Soviet cruiser sailed by Singapore toward the Indian Ocean.

But many Commonwealth members, particularly the African members, feel the Soviet threat has been exaggerated. An eight-nation study group was established Wednesday to discuss and evaluate the safety of Indian Ocean trade routes.

Canada is a reluctant member of the study group which probably will meet in London and may take months to complete its work. Meanwhile, Britain is free to sell arms to South Africa at anytime.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who reluctantly accepted a call for Canadian membership but declined to accept the chairmanship, looked for broad terms of reference covering the entire situation in southern Africa.

"The immediate issue can only be understood if it is placed in a scenario on the future of Africa," he said.

"If to insure the security of the sea lanes we take steps against communism . . . (steps) which make Communist penetration of Africa certain, then we have not gained much."

He hoped that the committee would consider sale to Portugal of arms that could be used against black African guerrillas in its colonies of Mozambique and Angola.

He warned that unless the Commonwealth takes a long view of the problems of Africa it might be faced in the next decade with a "Vietnam or Middle East" situation on the continent.

Canada was a long way away but neither it nor any other country would be free from violence if racial war broke out in southern Africa.

He said he had argued against Canada becoming a member of the study committee but had eventually relented.

Trudeau said Canada's representative would be either External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp or Defence Minister Donald McDonald.

On another point, Trudeau addressed himself to Heath and said:

"Neither a treaty nor these political differences of the most extreme sort . . . are adequate reasons to jeopardize for our children the prospect of a world in which racial diversity is regarded as a cultural richness.

"Whatever obligations we owe to our electors, they cannot outweigh in importance that responsibility to succeeding generations."

He said Canada is unwilling to make any gesture of acceptance of apartheid.

Racial discrimination was perhaps the epitome of human indignity. Racism was destructive of perpetrator and victim alike and one of its consequences was violence.

Unemployment

We do not subscribe to the view that the Government is as insensitive to the problem of increasing unemployment as the Opposition would have us believe. The Opposition is full of sound and fury and it has offered some suggestions — but if these were really practical would the Government turn them down as swiftly as they have done in recent days?

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp for example rejected a suggestion of Prince Edward-Hastings MP George Hees calling for the appointment of a minister to oversee the activities of the six ministries involved in economics; Mr. Sharp said this had been tried in other countries and had failed.

Mr. Hees also failed to obtain unanimous consent to a motion calling on the government to convene a meeting of representatives of the provinces, municipalities, organized labor and industry to recommend measures for stimulating the economy.

Minister of Finance Benson, while rejecting another suggestion from Mr. Hees that he reduce income and business taxes (the minister said a reduction in income tax would cost more than a billion dollars), is standing stolidly behind fiscal measures designed to stimulate employment. The provinces, he told the Commons recently, have accepted Ottawa's offer of $150 million for provincial projects. Of this some $68 million will go to Quebec which he said "is ready to let tenders now and proceed with providing jobs out of this amount of money."

But beyond that, or beyond the overall $2 billion Mr. Benson says the Government has switched toward the alleviation of unemployment since last March, Canada is still left with its more than half-a-million unemployed.

No one would quarrel with Acting Prime Minister Sharp who in giving emphasis to the fiscal measures of Mr. Benson observed: "I really think this is a time for constructive measures to deal with the underlying causes of unemployment which are very complicated in North America." But let us have more of those constructive measures.

Significant in this regard was a recent report that sizeable numbers of immigrants from Germany, Italy and Holland are returning to their homelands, while fewer are coming here — and this because of unemployment here.

In this unfortunate situation that so many jobless find themselves, and assuming that the majority are both willing and able to work, it would be interesting to know how many might consider going overseas. Australia and New Zealand usually have plenty of job opportunities in a variety of fields, and in good climate. Moreover, we understand that both countries offer assisted passages, but this could be checked by the respective high commissions of the two countries in Ottawa. Similarly South Africa, its politics aside, has openings. This is the kind of initiative our young people in particular should be contemplating if they are unsure of finding work in Canada this year.

Pakistan Remembered

The story has been told before, but the transfer from CFB Trenton of 400,000 pounds of supplies for relief of the cyclone victims in Pakistan lost nothing in its being retold to Rotarians the other day by Frank Murray, manager of Radio Station CJBQ.

One was reminded of the awesome powers of nature and of the desperate poverty that exists in this fragmented land, divided as it is into two parts separated by 1,000 miles of Indian territory. There is a lack of communication between each part and hostility in the eastern part because it feels neglected. This is understandable when it is realized that some days elapsed before government officials in the west became fully aware of the extent of the disaster.

Here too are the strange sights of the east — the beggars, street barbers, shoemakers and the like — the primitive side by side with the modern, a ready acceptance of the inevitability of death, yet at the same time tremendous cheerfulness in the average citizen. And all under the hot sun and blue sky. A world away from Belleville, yet from this area and from other nations has converged this great program of relief. For the Canadian aircrews and passengers it meant lengthy hours of flying, lack of sleep and fatigue, but it demonstrated our countrymen's mettle in an hour of need overseas.

Vacation Shock for Parliamentarians

Constituents Take Dim View of Any MP Pay Raise

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — It looks very much as though the Honorable Members of the House of Commons — not to mention the Senators who do not have to care anyway — took their lumps when they were back home for the holidays.

And of course, they did not like it. Who would?

They have returned to Parliament Hill, most of them looking a little hung over. Not from too much celebration, mind you; but from too little.

Their return to hearth and home, they discovered to their dismay, was no cause for celebration by their constituents.

In fact, having just returned from Ottawa where a special federal government commission had recommended increases in their pay and allowances—which strangely and misleadingly looked more substantial than they really are—the Honorable Members seemed to have appeared to have been made less than welcome by many of their political friends and supporters.

Constituents, they found out all over again, are likely to be a rather surly and ungrateful lot.

No matter what good works an MP might have brought about, he assumes he will be confronted by his constituents who will shrug: "Yeah, sure, what you did was okay, but what are you doing for us now?"

But it was worse this time, much, much worse, to judge by the look on the long parliamentary faces.

For they had gone home, not having done anything particularly outstanding for their constituents — unless you consider that monthly 43-cent increase for old age pensioners something — but appearing to be in the position to do somewhat better for themselves.

To read the reaction they ran into, and it was not in fine print, but in big block letters, they very likely will not be doing it now until after the next election.

It was no greedy salary grab that the special federal commission had recommended for them, no steal.

The proposal, as you know, was to raise them from their current $12,000 salary plus that $6,000 tax-free expense allowance, first to $23,000, and then, after the next election, to $25,000.

All of it taxable.

And that was great.

For that $6,000 they have been getting tax-free was "off the top," at the "heavy" end of their parliamentary money, where, if it had been taxable, they would have lost a sizable hunk of it.

On the average, that $12,000 salary plus $6,000 tax-free expense allowance was worth pretty close to $23,000.

So now they would get it — said the commission — and they would be taxed on every dime of it.

Of course, there were to be expenses — all strictly accountable with receipts — and so, too, there should be.

Being an MP is neither an easy nor inexpensive job.

But the idea to tax them for every nickel of their recommended initial $23,000 and on the $25,000 to follow after they have gone to the polls was great.

It would have made them taxpayers again.

They would have known what it felt like when successive federal finance ministers raised those tax rates.

They would have learned to say "ouch" like all the rest of us.

And when it came to rubber-stamp those almost inevitable budget tax increases, they could have had second thoughts.

Might even, God bless them, the odd time in the years ahead with the very threat of their always possible but highly improbable veto, have persuaded the Finance Minister, in his own self-interest and protection of the Government's very life, to take it easy.

In the past, long before they got as much as $6,000 tax-free, they never felt the full weight of the taxation load.

So they seemed to think that those howls of painful protest from the taxpayers — even from their own constituents were the exaggerated self-pitying screams of so many adult crybabies.

Now they were to learn differently.

But it does not look like it is about to happen — not, at least until after the taxpayers and constituents have had another crack at them all in a general election.

Pity, too.

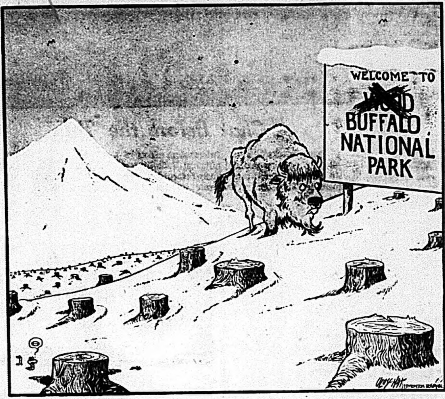
Because the Honorable Members were in real actual need of more money, and still are, more than ever.

But they scare easily.

And those bruises they suffered over the Christmas—New Year holiday - away - from - Ottawa still hurt.

Maybe in months to come they will get their courage up. But do not count on it.

And do count on them still not having to face up to what taxation really means, not as long as they enjoy that $6,000 tax-free special parliamentary privilege.



Public Asked to Help Curb Harassment Of Animals by Snowmobilers

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a result of representation made by the Ontario Humane Society to the Minister of Lands and Forest, it is now a criminal offence to cause unnecessary cruelty and suffering to animals and birds.

We appeal to people who witness snowmobiles being used to harass or kill wild life, to report to the nearest Ontario Provincial Police office the following information: registration number, color of the snowmobile, color of clothing worn by driver and facial description as well as time and place of incident.

More on Arena Heating

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

It is with a sense of remorse that I note the article in this evening's paper (Jan. 14) with regard to the Arena heating. Immediately I wonder if the elder hockey fans are to be relegated to the worst seats in the house at the arena. Also why should they be dictated to as to where they are to sit. This is a democracy, isn't it, or is it?? Apparently it isn't in the eyes of Mr. Williams when he is going to dictate where these older fans will sit. Would Mr. Williams like to be told where he is going to sit?

Mr. Williams seems to miss the whole point in regard to the arena heating. Would he be so kind as to reply to this letter through your paper and answer the following questions, which incidentally all the citizens of Belleville would like to have answered and not just the elderly. (1) Why was the heating installed in the arena in the first place if it is not to be used all the time? We taxpayers did not spend this money for the heating equipment to have it sit idle.

(2) Why would the heating affect the ice surface? It doesn't affect Maple Leaf Gardens ice or any of the other rinks, certainly not in the middle of winter.

(3) Why would the players have any say as to whether the heat is on or off? How come the pro players don't complain about the heat in the arenas they play in? The heat in these arenas is far hotter than the Belleville arena. Even with the heat on could you sit in the Belleville arena without a coat on? You can in the pro arenas, but they don't regulate the heat for the players. After all it is the fans who pay to get in the arena not the players.

(4) If the arena is modernized as noted in your paper a few days ago is it not possible that these new facilities will also be left idle, as the heating now has been? There is just no point in spending money of any kind on this arena if we are not going to use the facilities after putting them in.

(5) Is not the cause of the ice getting soft in certain spots due to improper maintenance of the freezing system? (This is indicated to me as the cause when asking about it from people who know.)

(6) Did City Council or the Heating Contractor ever think about controls for this heating system when it was installed, so the amount of current entering the heaters could be regulated? Apparently not.

Mr. Williams is entirely wrong when he says that most complaints have come from older fans. I'm sure the young fans (including myself) also are entitled to the enjoyment of the heat (we didn't install the heating just to look at it — or did we?). Once again we are not considering the younger set. We want the heat on in all the arena not just certain sections as Mr. Williams would do. I'm suggesting that the citizens of Belleville take a good long look at any new arena installations if they are going to get as little use as the new heating system has had. It would be a waste of money.

YOUNG HEAT FAN

Debt to Britain

Memories Short in Commonwealth

Kingston Whig-Standard

As one commentator put it recently of the Commonwealth: "Nobody needs it but the world." There are a few things about this strangely informal aggregation of independent nations which critics nowadays have either forgotten or never knew.

As the anti-British rhetoric arises over the very limited British arms commitment to South Africa the main truth about the Commonwealth needs to be reiterated: without Britain the Commonwealth would die.

Any suggestion that Canada could fill the gap is nonsense. Only Britain has the power to carry on in the role of a leader. She happens also to be the only member willing to use military force to protect threatened, outlying areas of the Commonwealth.

It is pretty discouraging to realize that nations such as Tanzania, Gambia and Kenya, now viciously attacking Britain, have forgotten that in January, 1964, British troops had to put down the mutiny of African soldiers in Kenya and Tanzania. The Royal Marine Commandos saved the Tanzanian President, Nyerere, and preserved his country from who knows what rout and bloodshed. In Kenya similar prompt action by British soldiers kept the mutiny from wiping out the government.

In the Far East during the early 1960s British forces protected Malaysia from the predatory intentions of Indonesia.

In Rhodesia, at the time of the declaration of independence, British intervention assured Zambia that her territory would not be invaded. During the Communist campaigns in Malaya from 1946 to 1958 it was the British, along with Australians and New Zealanders, who prevented disaster. Singapore and Hong Kong can be added to this list.

Traditionally, of course, Britain seldom gets credit for anything — a legacy of her days as an imperial colonial power. She never even gets a passing nod for the work and huge expenditures involved in bringing former colonies to full freedom — something no other nation on earth has ever done on anything like the scale.

When even some of the most important voices in the United States speak out in favor of the Commonwealth and, indeed even go so far as to insist that its importance is not to be exaggerated, it seems petty and stupid for the members of the family — or organization, or whatever it really is — to act as if Britain, which has always carried most of the weight were an enemy instead of an irreplaceable and powerful friend

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 21, 1971 . . .

The Axis counter-offensive in North Africa began 29 years ago today—in 1942—commanded by General Rommel and spearheaded by his Afrika Korps. Tobruk, the key city, fell June 21 and El Alamein, within Egypt's borders, was reached July 1, where Rommel paused for two months. His attack at El Alamein failed and was followed Oct. 23 by the British attack which led to the destruction of the Afrika Korps within seven months.

1954—The first atomic-powered submarine, Nautilus, was launched at Groton, Conn.

1950—Alger Hiss, former member of the United States state department, was convicted in New York of perjury.

1945—Japanese suicide planes bombed the U.S. aircraft carrier Ticonderoga, killing 144 and wounding 193.

1943—The Canadian defence department granted three months' leave to former coal miners in the armed services to relieve a fuel shortage.

1936—Edward VIII took the oath of allegiance and received a pledge of fealty from Parliament the day after the death of George V.

1910—A train wreck on the CPR line at Spanish River, Ont., on the north shore of Lake Huron killed 43 persons.

Is Private Business Being Subsidized In City's Advertisements?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I guess it doesn't pay to go out of business too soon!

It seems that there is a new policy at City Hall that permits the taxpayer to pay for advertisements for private enterprise.

During the last week, two advertisements have appeared in your paper, official-looking even to the City of Belleville coat of arms at the top of the ad, giving the list of prices to be charged by a private firm for garbage disposal.

I can understand an official announcement that after a certain date there will be a change in the garbage disposal situation in our city. But how our City Council feels justified in spending taxpayers' money to list the prices to be charged by a private business I will never understand.

Or is it that the City or some member or members of Council are in some way connected with the new private enterprise? If not, how about the City helping other private businesses with their advertising costs?

County Road Policy Brings Council Query

Why does the Belleville and Suburban Roads Commission take on additional road mileage when arteries already under its jurisdiction are badly in need of repairs and maintenance?

This was the question asked at county council yesterday by Thurlow township deputy reeve Borden Forsythe after the roads commission report had been given by member Fred Beckett.

In the report, given by Mr. Beckett in the absence of commission chairman Harry Morrow, it was noted that the former township road between Tucker's Woods and Highway 14 west of Foxboro had been taken over as an extension to the Wallbridge Road.

But Deputy Reeve Forsythe wondered why this had been done when the suburban road along the 4th concession of Thurlow township was badly in need of repairs.

Mr. Beckett, a 1970 appointee to the suburban roads commission, was unable to answer the question, noting the take-over had been made before he was a member of the commission.

For the benefit of new county council members, Mr. Beckett said the suburban roads commission had jurisdiction over certain arteries leading into Belleville.

He said the commission's funds were limited as to expenditures because the city's share of costs could not exceed one-half mill on its provincially equalized assessment.

The city's share this year would be $28,000 — the same as last year.

The city and county share equally in suburban road expenditures which are subsidized 50 per cent by the province for roadways and 80 per cent for bridges — the same as for county roads. The commission's 1971 budget has been set at $112,000.

Recapping last year's work, Mr. Beckett said the three-stage reconstruction of the Wallbridge - Loyalist Road between Highway 2 and the CN double tracks had been completed in 1970.

Design plans were going ahead for the proposed overpass over the CN double tracks on the Wallbridge Road but Mr. Beckett said there was little likelihood of any construction being started this year.

If construction was commenced, he said it may be necessary for the commission to approach council for a loan for this project only.

Other work carried out last year included the installation of crossing signals at the CN tracks on Thurlow's 4th concession suburban road at Corbyville. The signals were placed in operation in November.

Officers Elected

The Hastings County Black Chapter elected officers for 1971 recently at a meeting held in the Madoc Orange Hall.

Elected in order of prominence were Albert Nickle, Delbert Mumby, Allan Thompson, Durland Adams, William Glower, John Fox, Percy Blakely, Frank O'Rorke, Earl Wallace, Frank Blakely, Gordon Jones, Keith Clancey and Harry McAdam.

The committee is Allan Thompson, Stanley Moorcroft, Gordon Jones, Harry Love, Lorne Hagerman, James Groves and G. Adams.

County Council Committees Named

Hastings county council this year adopted a new policy for the naming of members to the various standing committees.

Instead of making the appointments during the caucus session when the new warden is elected, this year council named a nominating committee to propose a slate of appointees.

The nominating committee report was later approved in open council.

Committees are as follows, with the chairman first on the list:

Roads and Bridges — Russell Sills, Horace Casey, Jack Bush, Ray E. Shortt, Carman Gibson and Warden Kenneth Smith.

Homes for the Aged — Borden Forsythe, Merton Hamm, Albert Vader, Stanton Cassidy and the warden.

Finance, Property and Promotional — William Rose, Delmont Card, Cecil Woods, S. J. Carr, Ray Hannah, John Reynolds and the warden.

Municipal Reform — Calvin White, Thomas Burnside, Horace Casey, Mrs. A. G. Allen, S. J. Carr, Jack McKenzie, the warden and Carl E. Bateman county administrator.

ARDA — Leonard Walsh, Kenneth Fisk, Mac Douglas, Charles Gordanier, Murray Heath, Borden Forsythe and the warden.

Hastings County Planning Board — John Wilkes, Calvin White, Cecil Woods, George Lyons, Delmont Card, Gordon Wilman (Quinte) Mack Douglas, Robert Anderson (Quinte) and the warden.

Other appointees to joint committees with the city are as follows:

Hastings County Social Services — Mrs. A. G. Allen, Leonard Walsh and Clarence Graham.

Children's Aid Society — George Wood, Mrs. Audrey Sexsmith and Charles Gordanier.

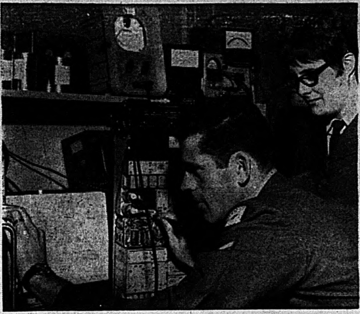
Board of Health — Jack Bush, Clarence Graham and the warden.

Board of Governors, Belleville General Hospital — Thomas Burnside, H. A. Hamilton, John N. Brown and the warden.

Belleville and District Employment Committee — Ross Sprackett, Russell Sills and Kenneth Fisk.

Emergency Measures Organization — Ray E. Shortt and the warden.

Management Committee Hastings County Museum — Albert Vader and Gordon Wilman.



Corporal Philias Chaput and the former Margaret Salter, previously of Belleville, Corporal Chaput's wife, are one of the many family teams that are a part of Air Defence Command. The Chaputs are stationed at CFB Cold Lake where he is in charge of telecommunications and she is a finance clerk. They are only one example of family teams from twin brothers to whole families.

Licence Deadline Getting Closer

PICTON (Staff) — A spokesman for the Picton licence bureau said yesterday that motorists have approximately five weeks before their "numbers are up". The purchase deadline for 1971 motor vehicle plates falls on Feb. 27.

The bureau clerk observed that 730 sets of plates have been sold from an estimated 4,000 which went on sale Dec. 1, 1970. A last minute rush "as usual" is expected this year as motorists line up to buy new plates before the February expiry date.

It was reported that more snowmobile plates have been sold this year than car and truck plates. A total of 870 snowmobiles have been licensed this winter.

Cost of licence plates for a four cylinder vehicle this year is $20, while six cylinder cars can be licensed for $27.50. Eight cylinder vehicles can be re-licensed for $35.

Farm Course Attracts More

Increased interest is being shown in the agricultural workers' course being offered through ARDA at the Kemptville College of Agricultural Technology.

Clayton Hall, ARDA councellor for the county, told Hastings County Council Wednesday that 15 students were taking the course this year as compared with 12 last year.

If additional students are interested, another 10-week course will be commenced during the latter part of March.

Mr. Hall said that of the 12 students taking the course last year, nine were employed on dairy farms in Ontario at wages ranging from $325 to $400 per month, plus house, hydro, heat and telephone.

Mr. Hall said there was no definite age limit for potential students and suggested that persons with a farm or rural background who are interested in this type of employment should investigate the possibilities.

In its role of land use and farm adjustment, Mr. Hall said the main objectives of the ARDA Act was (1) to assist in the establishment of viable farm units (2) to assist in the withdrawal from agriculture land of low agricultural capabilities, and (3) to release capital to farmers desiring to sell non-viable farms.

In Hastings, ARDA has purchased, or is in the process of purchasing approximately 50 farms or parcels of land which are being leased back to bona-fide farmers to assist in the development of viable farm operations.

Through these transactions, owners of land have been assisted by a cash sale and in many instances have been elderly people who are retiring.

British Postmen Ask Backing of Other Lands

LONDON (AP) — An appeal by striking British postal workers for foreign unions to cut communication links with Britain received only a few expressions of moral support today.

The day-old walkout—the first in the history of the post office—appeared to be freezing into a lengthy stalemate with the cabinet's decision not to intervene. All mail and cable services were halted, but almost 90 per cent of the country's telephones continued working on automatic systems.

In Canada, Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corp. suspended its telegraph services between Canada and Britain and Ireland because of the strike, and a similar suspension of mail services was implemented by the Canadian post office.

Tom Jackson, general secretary of the 230,000-member Union of Postal Workers, asked the Brussels-based Post, Telephone and Telegraph International Wednesday night to urge unions in other countries to "cut Britain off." The PTTI represents about 2.5 million workers in 82 countries.

Jackson later told reporters the PTTI had agreed to ask all members not to handle calls or cables from Britain. But union sources in France, Belgium, Denmark, Germany and Italy said early today they had heard nothing of a formal ban.

Fears that the pay dispute would be protracted were strengthened when the cabinet decided not to intervene between the UPW and the post office management.

The strikers are at a disadvantage because their union cannot afford strike pay.

Post office chiefs said the number of strike-breakers varied from 40 to 70 per cent throughout the country, mainly because staff employees couldn't afford not to turn up. The union, however, claimed 95 per cent solidarity.

Jackson held out no hope of a compromise between the union's demand for a 15-per-cent raise and the post office offer of eight per cent on basic rates ranging between £15 and £27 a week.

Private mail delivery services mushroomed.

One London entrepreneur reported he handled 5,000 letters Wednesday.

Despite the strike Britain's weekly multi-million-pound football pool operated as usual. Players had been supplied with three weeks of forms to fill in and send off before the strike began. If the walkout goes on for longer than that, messengers will deliver the forms door to door.

Profit Made Out of Housing

EDMONTON (CP) — Mayor Des Newman of Whitby, Ont. said Wednesday night that senior governments are making money from public housing projects.

The mayor told an executive meeting of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities that long-term mortgages made by the governments to municipalities for public housing sometimes produce a profit for the governments.

The mayor said he believes there have been instances in which this profit did not go back to the municipality.

Mental Health Care Rules to Be Set Out

TORONTO (CP) — Rules for the provision of subsidized mental-health care for children in special Ontario centres will be revealed when the province publishes regulations under the new Children's Mental Health Centres Act this week.

The act, passed by the legislature more than 13 months ago, is expected to be proclaimed and made law shortly. Government sources said Wednesday the delay resulted from difficulties in writing the regulations which make the law work.

The act will bring more than 20 private treatment centres for mentally and emotionally disturbed children under strict provincial licensing, a step necessary before the province can subsidize treatment so that none are denied care for financial reasons.

Already receiving subsidized care under old legislation and medical care insurance are about 250 children in provincially-operated regional centres, and about 100 in five psychiatric hospitals.

School Grants Issue Avoided By A. Lawrence

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Allan Lawrence, Ontario minister of mines, told a Hamilton audience Wednesday candidates for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party should not commit "political suicide" by taking a strong stand on separate school grants.

Mr. Lawrence said he supports the present government policy of refusing grants to separate schools beyond Grade 10.

"I was part of the government which decided that," he said.

Mr. Lawrence and the other four candidates were busy in a number of provincial centres during the day speaking to delegates to the PC leadership conference, Feb. 10-12 in Toronto.

Robert Welch, provincial secretary, was in Sarnia, Financial Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence was in Toronto, Education Minister William Davis split his day between in Pembroke and Ottawa and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough spent his time in Sudbury and Toronto.

The third of five all-candidates meetings will be held in Windsor today but only three of the five candidates are expected to attend

Mr. Davis will be in Ottawa and Mr. McKeough plans to spend the day in Lindsay and Toronto.

In Pembroke, Mr. Davis visited two schools in the area and held a brief news conference. He said if elected leader his two main objectives would be to fight pollution and maintain a healthy provincial economy.

Meanwhile, a sixth proclaimed candidate for the leadership race announced Wednesday he has changed his mind.

Victor Fulcher, 21, who announced in London this week he would enter the leadership race, said he will instead join other Young Conservatives in a tour of the province.

Mr. Fulcher, a nephew of Ontario Treasurer Charles McNaughton and president of the Young Conservatives in Huron riding, had said he planned to run as a youth candidate, stressing issues he feels interest young people.

Welch Says Party Must Take Stand

SARNIA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives must take a stand on grants to the separate school system before the next provincial election, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said Wednesday.

Mr. Welch, a candidate to succeed retiring Premier John Robarts, told a news conference that separate school supporters have submitted a brief to the government asking for increased grants.

"They are entitled to an answer," he said.

"Before the next election we have an obligation to let the people know how we stand on this issue and this is a decision which will have to be shared by the party and the cabinet."

At present, the province supports Roman Catholic schools only to the end of Grade 10. Separate school supporters want the aid extended to the end of Grade 13.

Nixon Commences Third Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, starting his third year in office, pledged Wednesday he will propose a bold, comprehensive and far-reaching domestic program for 1971.

A broad outline of Nixon's legislative package will be featured in the annual State of the Union adress to Congress, which will be broadcast live Friday night by major United States television and radio networks.

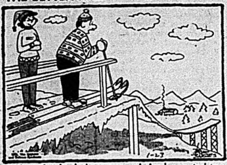
Nixon told key members of his White House staff that his message will be followed by specific legislative proposals he termed "unprecedented, certainly in the modern history of the Congress."

Ronal L. Ziegler, his press secretary said the president advocated "a revolutionary approach to government relevant to our times."

Asked to be more specific, Ziegler said Nixon was talking about "making government more resposive to the needs of people."

Since a disappointing Republican party showing in last November's congressional elections, Nixon has been revising policies and reappraising his stewardship. He has two years remaining in his elected term.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"I'm going back down now — I simply wanted to prove to you that I was brave enough to come up here in the first place."

Company Will Close

TORONTO (CP) — Six hours after prouction workers at Canadian Acme Screw and Gear Ltd. and Monroe Acme went on strike Wednesday the company announced it is "phasing out" its operations.

"Steps have already been taken in this regard," the company's general manager, Leonard Hamilton, said in a prepared statement.

Andrew Sutherland, International representative of the United Auto Workers, said he did not know if the statement was a bluff.

He said the company asked for a meeting at 9 a.m. today and union officials would analyse the situation after the meeting.

The 375 production workers in UAW Local 984 went on strike at noon Wednesday immediately after they rejected the company's demand for a two-year wage freeze.

The company said Acme and its sister plant, Monroe Acme, have lost orders for transmissions and other auto parts and could remain open only if the workers settled for a wage freeze.

Smiths Falls Baby Survives Without Blood

KINGSTON (CP) — An infant girl whose death was predicted by doctors after her mother refused to allow her to have blood transfusions last April is described by her mother as "fit as a fiddle" and weighing 23 pounds.

Eunice, then two days old, was taken from hospital here by her mother April 2. Doctors said the baby would likely die from a blood disease, unless the transfusions were given.

The girl's mother is Lynn DeWaal of Smiths Falls. A Jehovah's Witness, her religion does not allow blood transfusions.

She said in an interview Tuesday:

"She's as fit as a fiddle and we haven't had a problem with her. She's never even had a tummy ache."

Mrs. DeWaal, the baby and another child, David, now live with Mrs. DeWaal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hoffman of Smiths Falls. They were visiting friends here.

Mrs. DeWaal said that after the girl was taken from the hospital, she was examined by a doctor and qualified nurse.

"The child has not been seen recently by a doctor but that is simply because we haven't needed one," said Mrs. DeWaal.

Contract Okayed

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — More than 400 salaried workers ratified a new contract with Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. Wednesday night, as non-economic issues appeared to stand in the way of settling a strike by more than 13,000 hourly workers which started Tuesday.

The contract covering 467 salaried employees at Windsor and Bramalea, Ont., represented by the United Auto Workers, gives the workers wage parity with salaried employees in the United States.

PAPER LAUNCHED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Source, a twice-monthly newspaper printed in both English and Arabic, has been launched in Vancouver. A. E. Murad, its chief editor says the paper was started to give the Arab viewpoint in the Middle East dispute "a fair shake."

Albert College Plans Special Weekend

A 'Life and Work' weekend with a three-fold purpose is planned for Albert College students this coming weekend.

The purposes are: to give the College students an opportunity to learn about the community and those who work in it; to touch on the guidance aspect of the future careers they may choose and to focus on character building.

The weekend will be interspersed with music and fun.

Activities and events are being planned with a view to getting students to reach out beyond themselves in their thinking.

Beginning Friday morning, there will be no regular classes for the day. In the morning, the students will break up into three groups to visit Loyalist College, The Ontario School for the Deaf and CFB Trenton.

In the afternoon, there will be speakers from business, government and the Canadian Forces Base, Trenton. One of the speakers will be Myles Tillotson of the Department of Immigration.

Later there will be a panel of students from Bermuda, Trinidad, Ontario and Quebec, discussing responsibilities of citizenship.

On Friday evening, the public is invited to a band concert in Ackerman Hall by the Wexford Collegiate Institute Concert Band of Scarborough which proved to be a popular attraction locally last year.

On Saturday evening, students will sit down to a 300 calorie meal for which they will pay 25 cents as a reminder of the plight of hungry children in many parts of the world. The proceeds will be turned over to CARE.

A dance is planned for Saturday evening at which refreshments will be served and the staff will act as disc jockeys for the dancing music.

On Sunday afternoon, Douglas Williams, a third year theology student from Toronto who is a science graduate of Brock University will speak to the students on citizenship. This will be followed by student group discussions.

The events for the weekend have been planned to involve the entire student body of the College.

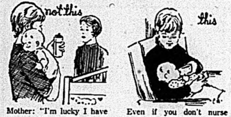
RYLSTONE WI

The Rylstone WI held their fifth euchre party of the winter season in the WI hall on Saturday evening, January 16 with ten tables in play. The prize winners were Mrs. Ronald Brown, Mrs. Raymond Stewart and Donald Kerr. Randy Spencer and Howard Anderson tied for the men's high prize and Mr. Anderson won the tie. The hostesses were Mrs. Eldon Anderson and Mrs. Raymond Stewart. The next party will be held at the WI hall on Saturday, January 30.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I'm lucky I have such a good baby. I'm always so rushed at meal time. I just prop his bottle and he takes it without a murmur."

Even if you don't nurse your baby, hold him while he takes his bottle. Smile at him and talk to him tenderly as you cuddle him.

A tiny baby feels secure and loved when he's cradled in his mother's arms. This is as important to his well-being as food.

WEDDING

PATTERSON—THOMPSON

Thomasburg United Church was the scene of the December 31 wedding of Marilyn Jane Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth M. Thompson of RR 2, Roslin and of John David Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Patterson of Tweed. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. E. Munro who was assisted by Rev. Bigby. The organist was Miss Mearle Morton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of white chiffon with a lace overlay. The fitted bodice featured a scalloped neckline and long full sleeves of matching lace which were scalloped at the wrists. Her floor-length lace-trimmed veil fell from a headdress of white roses and lily of the valley. She carried a cascade bouquet of red sweetheart roses.

Miss Carol Thompson, the bride's sister who was the maid of honor was in a floor-length cherry red-velvet dress with a white chiffon bodice and sleeves. A white velvet bow with long streamers accented the empire waistline. Her headdress was of white velvet trimmed with pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of white 'mums and red carnations.

Dressed identically to the maid of honor and carrying the same type of bouquet was Miss Rhonda Vanderwater who was the bridesmaid.

The best man was Robert Chilcott and the ushers were Gary Shaw and Mike Heeney.

At the reception held in Thomasburg United Church, the guests were greeted by the bride's mother who was in a two-piece ensemble of rose lace with brown accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and white 'mums. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother whose two-piece beige knit dress was set off by brown and beige accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums and yellow roses.

For the wedding trip to Thunder Bay the bride left in a long-sleeved dress of brown and winter white with a matching winter white vest. Her corsage was of yellow roses. Upon return the couple will reside at 315 Charles St., Belleville.

B and P Women's Club Holds Civic Night

A panel discussion on "Women and Civic Life" highlighted the program at the monthly meeting of the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club held at the Sun Valley Motor Inn on Monday evening.

Past president Dorothy Ellis gave a resume of each of the panelists' background and in turn introduced each one. Those taking part were: Alderman Robin Jeffrey (a member of the B and P Club), Alderman Jean Smith, and Miriam Graham a member of the Hastings County School Board, and moderator of the panel Marion McFaul, 2nd vice-president who conducted the Civic Night meeting.

Dealing on the question of the Women's Liberation movement, Mrs. Jeffrey felt that even though she was not in total agreement [illegible] beliefs, did feel that it was serving a [illegible] in promoting equal rights for women and she compared it with the few militant women suffragettes, who through their efforts gave women the right to vote.

Mrs Smith in referring to the Royal Commission on the Status of Women report was not in full agreement especially regarding child care proposals as she felt, unless necessary, a mother should remain home with small children.

As in most cases today, the cost of education always crops up and Mrs. Miriam Graham who is well acquainted with this subject felt that even though costs had to be cut she hoped that this would not be reduced, especially at the public and secondary school level.

However it was unanimously voiced by the three panelists that women should participate in public life and that discrimination was much less apparent now than in the past. All agreed that their desire to enter public life stemmed from childhood environment.

President Jeane Stephenson expressed thanks to those taking part and presented each with a gift on behalf of the members.

A short business meeting took place during which time a new member Sally Simpkins was installed with membership chairman Gloria McNeil and president Stephenson taking part.

Club Activities

STIRLING HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Mrs. Maurice Clancy read the report of the nominating committee and conducted the election of officers at the January 18 meeting of the Stirling Horticultural Society held at Institute centre with an attendance of 27 people. The officers elected were Mrs. Floyd Armstrong, president; Mrs. Raymond McConnell, vice-president; Mrs. Ted Reynolds secretary; Mrs. Grant Hubble treasurer; Mrs. P. Bronson, card secretary; Mrs. Harry Waite, trillium secretary; Mrs. Carmen Nix, bus secretary. The directors will be the same as in 1970.

For the program Mrs. Ray Rose gave a very interesting travelogue of Mexico where she had accompanied her husband on a trip last November. She showed a number of slides and also displayed a large array of souvenirs, travel folders and post cards.

Earlier, the correspondence was read by Mrs. Ted Reynolds and the financial report was given by Mrs. Grant Hubble. The auditor's report followed. It was announced that the next meeting will be held at the centre on the afternoon of Feb. 15. The nine meetings in the year will be divided between the Institute centre and the two church parlors, St. Paul's and St. Andrew's. The society will sponsor a bus trip to the Toronto flower show at the Royal museum in March.

The focal point of interest in the hall was a large pyramid of pine cones. Lunch was served buffet style and a social hour was enjoyed.

Horticulturists Elect Officers

The members of the Belleville Horticultural Society were treated to an interesting and varied program at their annual meeting held at Tabernacle United Church.

Guest speaker for the evening was John Follen, teacher at Loyalist College whose hobby is the growing of fuchsias. He showed many slides of these beautiful plants and told of their fascinating history.

He surprised his audience by showing these colorful plants growing outside in his garden during the summer months. They are considered strictly a house plant by most people. He showed a great many varieties including the spectacular standard fuchias resembling miniature flowering trees.

Those who attended Rose Festival '70 last year at Centennial Secondary School will probably recall that they stole the spotlight with a magnificent display.

The annual election of officers for the year took place at this meeting. Mrs. Audrey Brethour, Mrs. Jean Smith, Mr Harry Rose and Mr. J. McLeod were chosen as new directors.

The president expressed the appreciation of the society to retiring directors Mrs. Pauline Buchanan, Mrs. Clifford Barber, Mr. Roy Valleau, Bob Patterson, Enos David and to Frank Becker retiring as secretary-treasurer. Cecil Becker becomes 2nd vice-president replacing Mr. Allan Gardiner who will serve as a director this year.

The members were shown slides of the trillium award winning homes for 1970 and some of the other activities during the year were captured on film.

The evening was brought to a close with the drawing of door prizes after which refreshments were served.

ANAF Ladies' Auxiliary Lists New Executive

Monday evening was nomination, election and installation night held in the Tartan Lounge of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit clubrooms.

The newly elected president of Unit 201, J. Browning, and 1st vice-president W. J. Ford accepted the invitation to conduct the ceremonies. It was Cde. Browning's first assignment in his official position. Cde. Bill Ford assisted.

After the necessary business was performed, the males were invited to take over their duties. It was a spirited and hotly contested election and the Unit president gained confidence as the meeting progressed.

The following members were successful in being elected: president, Gladys Fitzgerald; 1st vice, Alice Storms; 2nd vice, June Newlands; treasurer, Bessie Buckley; secretary, Mabel Galbraith; four executive members: Marg Campbell, Edna Hobbs, Mary Fairborn and Etta Boblash.

Past president Terry Curnock thanked the members for their co-operation during her term of office. She congratulated the new executive and hoped they would have a successful year with the same fine assistance that had been given her. The new president Gladys Fitzgerald, thanked the members for their confidence in her and promised to do all in her power to carry on in the best traditions of the Auxiliary. She thanked president J. Browning and 1st vice-president W. J. Ford for their invaluable assistance.

The meeting adjourned and lunch was served.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. Bernice Reid, 41 Bridge Street W. is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

• • •

Prior to her wedding Mrs. John Patterson (nee Marilyn Thompson) was honored at a plastic ware shower held at the home of Miss Jean Aylesworth. A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Miss Rhonda Vanderwater and another one was held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Thompson with Mrs. Bruce Woodbeck as hostess. A gift was presented by the staff of Lorne McDougall Insurance where the bride-to-be was employed.

Sister City

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) — One of the assignments handed the Expo '70 concert band from the Okanagan Summer School of the Arts when it made a two-week trip to Japan in August was the presentation of documents to officials of Kofu, naming the Japanese city a sister city of this Okanagan Valley community. The band also played 14 concerts at Expo.

Quinte Medical Secretaries Enjoy Views of Japan

Quinte Medical Secretaries' January meeting was held last Wednesday evening and chaired by the president, Mrs. Diana Maxwell. The members were reminded to support North York's Clinic Day on Jan. 30 and the St. John Ambulance lectures on Feb. 11. It was proposed that QMSA could hold a clinic day and plans are now well under way for March 13. Convention this year will be held in the Skyline Hotel in Toronto on May 18 and 19, and will be available to OMSA members only. The OMSA general correspondence course is being offered in September.

The group is still collecting grocery store register tapes and wish to thank all those shoppers who donated their tapes. Many tapes are needed yet to aid in buying more equipment for patient use in the hospital.

Guest speaker for the evening, Harold Seldon, who was introduced by Jackie Vivian, took the members on an imaginary trip to Japan.

The plane was met by Miss Emiko Shimizu, a charming young Japanese tour guide. When arriving at a Japanese inn or home, the guest must remove his shoes before entering and soon after arrival is expected to bathe. Almost everyone in Japan — even a poor worker or a rural peasant — takes a daily bath. The deep Japanese bath, incidentally, is a purely Japanese development different from anything in the rest of Asia or the West.

A short flight to Osaka, the second largest city in Japan, passed over the Expo site. While on the ground, so to speak, one could mount a moving sidewalk with bannister and watch Expo going by.

Those on tour visited Kyoto, the cultural and religious centre of Japan and the ultimate in ornate design of the shrines and temples is seen, and at a roadside stand out in front, free printed prayers are available on request. Emi aptly explained the legends and beliefs and the ritual aspect of this Japanese emphasis on cleanliness in home, inn, or temple, where one removes footgear. The great bronze Buddha, Daibutsu, in meditation, in the city of Kamakura is the largest in the world. One shrine was equipped with a burgler alarm, that, when it went off, sounded like many birds singing. A visit through the Japanese gardens showed the Bonsai or dwarf trees in full bloom. Growing these dwarf plants is an art much like sculpture or painting. Some trees were as old as 285 years and had been attended by five generations. A short bus ride through the countryside passed rice paddies being attended by women all neatly uniformly dressed and off in the distance, one could see Mount Fuji, the Japanese sacred mountain, in full majestic splendor, a quiescent volcano of 12,395 feet with its white cap of snow.

Japan has much to be proud of as one could see from the Tokyo tower a spotlessly clean rebuilt city and one could not help notice the well mannered children all dressed in uniform.

Enroute home the passengers visited Hong Kong, Singapore and Bangkok.

Mr. Seldon was thanked by Mae Cathcart.

Luncheon was served by Doreen Ware and Diana Maxwell. This week the secretaries are welcoming Loyalist college medical secretary students for some on-the-job training.

The next QMSA meeting will be held Feb. 10, at 8 p.m. in Education Hall when Chief D. Crosbie will be guest speaker.

Ann Landers

Jobless Berated By Welfare Employee

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How about a word of encouragement for us unemployed folks? There are a lot of us these days and we need a lift.

ANN LANDERS

I have been a widow for 12 years. I worked full time to support my child. In addition to my job I went to school at night so I could qualify for a better-paying position. All the years I worked I never drew a dime of unemployment compensation nor did I ask anyone for help.

The last company I worked for was shut down several weeks ago. I had to go on unemployment or starve. There just aren't any jobs to be had in this town and I was up against it. It's bad enough to be on welfare, but the insults I have to take when I go downtown to collect my check makes starving to death an attractive alternative.

The first question the woman at the unemployment office asked me was, "Did you lower your starting wage?" Then she gave me a speech about how much the state of California paid out last month because of people like me. Finally she shrieked, "It's going to get a lot worse out here in California — what with all you hillbillies coming here thinking you can live on oranges. You're not bad looking. Why don't you get married?" I didn't reply to her inane question and turned walked away. She then shouted so everyone in the place could hear, "I hope you take my advice and say yes to the next guy who asks because if you get laid off again you won't have any fund to fall back on."

Are welfare recipients treated so crassly everywhere, or just in California? —FED UP IN FULLERTON.

DEAR FED FULL: I'm sure there are some very pleasant people in the Unemployment Offices in California, but you just happened to pick a lemon, — and in the land of oranges yet. I apologize in behalf of the decent folks out there. And please forgive the clod. It might have been something she ate.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All year my husband and I look forward to our annual vacation in March. Since 1960 we have been alternating between Arizona and Florida. Last night we had some friends to dinner. The man asked, "Where will you be going THIS year?" My husband replied, "Phoenix," Then he went on to tell about how wonderful the weather is out there, the friendly people and so on. The woman suddenly interrupted him with, "Sold! We're going with you." Before we knew it they were making plans to join us.

My husband is furious. He says he will cancel the trip if necessary but we are NOT going to be accompanied by anyone.

How do we get out of it graciously? — TWO BUMPS ON A LOG.

DEAR BUMPS: Phone your friends and tell them your plans have changed and you might not go to Phoenix after all. (This is true. Your husband said he'd cancel the trip rather than be accompanied.) Make it clear that they can't count on you as traveling companions. You might even consider going to Florida instead if you want to save the friendship. If the friendship doesn't mean anything, go to Phoenix as planned.

A New Party Dessert

By MAR YMOORE

Every time I complete a new party dessert and Betty types it on to a stencil I feel as if I have just deposited a thousand dollars in the bank.

This one has an added big dividend: it was made for our New Years dinner dessert by my grandson Davey. You see I had one of those colds when you cough and sneeze at the same time and cannot quite reach the tissue box. He quietly worked in the kitchen and when he needed advice would carry the potful of filling to my bedroom to see if all was well. Need I add what a comfort he is?

To single out one of the four children is unfair for the three others pitched in and vacuumed and shovelled snow and ran errands endlessly.

DAVEY'S ORANGE DELIGHT (make 24 hours in advance; serves 12)

1 pkge. angel food cake mix
Filling and Frosting:
1 cup sugar
4 tbsps. corn starch
2 tbsps. grated fresh orange rind
½ tsp. salt
1 cup orange juice
2 egg yolks
1½ tbsps. lemon juice
¼ cup butter
½ pt. chilled whipping (32 percent) cream

Make the angel cake in 10" tube pan according to package directions and cool on cake rack.

Make the Orange Filling by mixing together in heavy pot, all of the filling ingredients except butter and whipping cream and cook stirring until thick. Remove from heat and stir in butter and cool to room temperature.

Cut cake in half crosswise to make two layers. Place one layer on fancy large cake plate. Whip cream until stiff and fold smoothly into cooled Orange Filling. Use about ¼ of it to spread on bottom layer. Put top layer over. Use remaining cream Orange Filling to frost sides and top generously. Garnish top rim with circle of halved maraschino cherries. Cover with large clean dishpan and store in cool place overnight or 24 hrs.

Clip this party dessert recipe now and file it under "Desserts — Party". It will help me if you do. Then I will not have to send out dozens of surplus copies of this treasure.

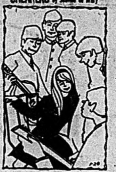
SNEAKERS by Jeanne & Mary



Surrounded by boys? Lucky you. But don't regale others with your conquests. They really don't care to hear about them — especially if they're not so good at conquering themselves.

Young Pusher

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Deputies have arrested a 12-year-old girl on a warrant charging that she sold drugs to an undercover policeman, the Salt Lake County sheriff's office says. The girl was one of a number of persons rounded up in a massive drug raid recently.

Successful Living

Old Flame Rekindles A Fire

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Before marriage I fell head over heels in love with a boy who drifted away from me. I chased after him and I think this made him run even harder.

He is married now, but when we see each other in groups he flirts with me without his wife knowing it. This gets me all rattled because I am still attracted by him.

I wouldn't want to hurt my husband for the world, because he is very loving and he would be heartbroken if he knew how I felt. What am I to do? — Still Haunted.

Dear Haunted: You play with fire when you fan an old flame! From where he sits he is safe now. You can't chase after him and he enjoys seeing you get rattled. Or that's my guess.

Look at it this way: Your infatuation is a temporary thing, an exciting quickening of the pulse. The love that exists in a good marriage has more solid and reliable feeling in it, and it gets more heartwarming all the time.

Focus on that, and devote your best thinking time to seeing how you can make life something special for your husband and children.

Dear Doris: Our church is having its 150th birthday and we would like to have a large bazaar. Could you send me some information on bazaars that were held about 100 or 150 years ago?

Did they have apron tables, candy tables, bazaar items, etc.? — Century And A Half.

Dear Century And A Half:

In Una Abrahamson's book, "God Bless Our HOME," I read the following:

"From the 1840's there is mention of ladies from the local church having a display table (at the fall fair) and selling 'pretty toys'. Possibly the first charity bazaar was that given under the leadership of Lady Colborne, wife of the Lieutenant - Governor of Upper Canada in 1830.

"She introduced this old British money - making custom to York to raise money for her favorite charity — clothing the poor. Her friends and assistants used the substantial proceeds to purchase quantities of red flannel to make undergarments for the less fortunate."

A couple of paragraphs later mention a "Harvest Home" celebration at which time "local women placed some of their finest baking in the display".

I'm willing to bet that it didn't take long for those enterprising ladies to expand their wares from pretty toys and home baking to handwork of many kinds.

Perhaps you might celebrate your church's 150th birthday with an old-time "Country Store", with the ladies in pioneer costume.

Confidential to Disgusted: You are no more hypnotized than I am. If you find yourself responding to people enough to look deep into their eyes and into their hearts, you are doing better than most of us. Far too many humans are afraid of closeness and for their own safety prefer to offer coldness and hate, and to thus add to the loneliness in the world.

For that moment that eyes meet, emotions of both are touched. Keep on reaching out for people; and let your warmth touch your women friends too.

Could Be Traumatic

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli authorities are considering children in settlements near Jordan's border will have to continue spending their nights in underground shelters as they have for the last two years, despite a letup in guerrilla attacks. Government psychiatrists say if the children are permitted to sleep above ground and then have to go back to the shelters the result could be traumatic.

Living Costs Down

The consumer price index dropped half a point last month to 129.8 from 130.3 in November. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics said declining food prices led to the drop. It was the first November-to-December drop in the overall index in more than a decade. (CP Newsmap)

Consumer Advocates See Food Prices Turning Up

TORONTO (CP) — Consumer advocates believe they see some changes in discount policies instituted by major supermarket chains in some eastern market areas.

One says prices already are "beginning to inch back up."

It appears that Dominion Stores Ltd., which began the price war, gained an initial success in its goal to bring more shoppers into the stores.

Company executives will not discuss the situation, however, and the impact will not be known until new earnings reports are issued.

Dominion announced its "deep discount" policy in early November and Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. quickly followed. Price-cutting was primarily at stores in major Ontario cities, Montreal and Halifax.

The move by Dominion was a reaction to the success of Steinberg's Ltd., which began its "miracle pricing" program two years ago.

In the first few frantic days of supermarket price cutting the new entries spied on each other to match prices. Some items had three or four different prices stamped on them before being sold.

The companies involved in the price war operate almost exclusively in the eastern provinces. Dominion has about 400 stores, Loblaw about 250 in the eastern provinces, Steinberg's about 180, and The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. about 220. There are about 300 IGA stores, which are locally owned but have group buying power through Oshawa Wholesale Ltd.

Canada Safeway Ltd. is the predominant food store chain in the West. Companies associated with Loblaw also operate in the West.

A member of the Ottawa branch of the Consumers Association of Canada, which is surveying supermarket pricing, says she believes prices are on the way back up.

"I'm sure the price war is not going to go on much longer. They're going to be caught in a squeeze between their customers and their shareholders."

Leon Weinstein, director of consumer affairs for Loblaw Companies, says the chains have sent up "trial balloons" to test consumer reaction to higher prices on certain items.

Mr. Weinstein says "cherry-picking" is common: Shoppers are going to several supermarkets to buy specials and compare prices.

The study of price movements in the Ottawa area is not completed but the committee notes some prices have gone up while others have been moved up and down several times.

Stores appeared to be changing low-price leader policies, a member of the Ottawa group says.

Prior to the price war perishable items such as fruits, vegetables and meats had been the main advertised price leaders.

In recent weeks staples, such as flour and sugar, have been used as advertised low-price leaders.

Dominion gained in the share of customers in November when it began a concentrated advertising campaign to announce price reductions.

Graduate students at the University of Toronto school of business are conducting monthly surveys of shoppers. The November survey—the latest completed—showed Dominion had a 47-per-cent increase in share of shoppers in Toronto. Steinberg's stores were down 27 per cent and Loblaws stayed even.

The survey asked where people made their last grocery purchase but did not attempt to determine if shoppers were spreading purchases between stores. Consequently the results may not mean Dominion sales were up by 47 per cent.

The survey concluded that store loyalty was "probably at an all-time low in the Toronto market" during November.

Craig Waldron, administrative manager for Mac's Milk Ltd., says their stores located in shopping plazas next to Dominion stores had increases in volume after the price war began. More people came into the shopping plazas and the Mac's Milk share went up as the total went up.

Mac's Milk stores specialize in dairy products and convenience items, including some groceries, and provide late evening and Sunday service.

Executives of Loblaws and Steinberg's say they have made no change in services offered since the price war began but Loblaws concedes it was forced to make some staff reductions. Dominion officials will not comment.

Arnold Steinberg, executive vice-president for administration and finance for Steinberg's, said their discount policy was adopted two years ago when the company decided that "by reducing prices we would be able to . . . raise volume."

The company's latest financial report—for the quarter ended Oct. 17—showed an increase of 23 per cent in sales volume compared with the same quarter in the previous year. Net income was up 45 per cent.

Dominion had a decline of seven per cent in net earnings while sales were up nine per cent during the 26-week period ended Sept. 19 compared with the same period in the 1969 fiscal year.

Loblaw Groceteria Co. Ltd. had a 15-per-cent drop in net income while sales were up 1.4 per cent during the 28-week period ended Oct. 10, as against the comparable period the previous year.

Ombudsman Gets 95 Complaints

QUEBEC (CP)—Provincial ombudsman Louis Marceau said Wednesday he has received 95 complaints resulting from the invocation of the War Measures Act during last October's kidnapping crisis.

"I could not deal with some of the complaints," said Mr. Marceau in an interview, "because they questioned the invocation of the War Measures Act."

"Many questioned the validity of the law, which is something for the courts to decide, not me."

The War Measures Act was imposed Oct. 16 by the federal government at the request of the Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa and Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau following two Montreal-area political kidnappings by Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists.

Mr Marceau says that he and his staff have spent many hours in police offices, looking at files and searching for explanations of the reason and the method some raids were carried out. He said police have been co-operative.

Mr. Marceau said he plans to submit a final report on the 95 complaints to Justice Minister Jerome Choquette "by the end of February."

"The investigation has to be careful," said Mr. Marceau. "It must be determined whether people were mistreated and that the police surpassed the powers given them under the War Measures Act."

Mr. Marceau said the final report "will give a general summation of all the complaints and will outline each case in particular."

He added that most of the 95 complaints received could be divided into three categories:

—Damage caused to personal property during police raids;

—Unjust conditions of detention;

—Personal injury suffered by people arrested, then not detained and against whom no charges were laid.

FLQ Trial Opens

MONTREAL (CP)—A 20-year-old native of Manitoba who described himself as an actor testified Wednesday that he and three companions visited junior colleges in Quebec last October to distribute copies of a "manifesto" of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Crown witness Gilles Cormier, arrested Oct. 24, said he and his friends discussed "urban guerrilla" tactics in "the political context of Quebec," but denied they planned to take any revolutionary action.

Cormier, from St. Boniface, Man., was testifying at the trial of Come Leblanc, facing three charges that connect him with the outlawed FLQ.

The trial continues today before a Court of Queen's Bench jury.

Prosecutor Gabriel Lapoinze said the Crown would try to prove that Leblanc and three other persons formed a cell of the FLQ.

Leblanc is charged specifically with being a member of the FLQ, with advocating or promoting its aims and with communicating statements on its behalf.

Each of the charges is punishable by a maximum of five years in prison or a $5,000 fine or both.

Cormier said he met three or four times a week last fall with a "study group" that included his brother Raymond, 23, and Jean Boisjoli, 21, both teachers originally from St. Boniface, and Leblanc, 23, an unemployed Montreal laborer.

Among other things, they compiled a list of Montreal gunshops so that each could visit a few, Cormier said. But he said they had nothing specific in mind.

In mid-October, the group visited junior colleges in the central Quebec cities of Shawinigan and Trois-Rivieres where they distributed copies of the manifesto and another document calling for a general strike by students in support of the FLQ's aims.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Space Not Properly Used

Thoughts at Large:

The popular interpretation of great thinkers and discoverers has always been wrong: not one person in a thousand uses Darwin's "survival of the fittest" idea in the way he meant it, which had nothing to do with justifying aggression or acquisitiveness.

• • •

There's plenty of space in the U.S., but we don't utilize it sensibly: 100 million people, about half the population, are concentrated in 200 urban areas which would fit neatly into Lake Michigan.

• • •

Gambling has nothing to do with "avarice"; indeed, the avaricious man hoards; he does not bet; the gambler's drive is toward self-destruction, not toward gain, just as the alcoholic's drive is suicidal, not sensory.

• • •

Of all the emotions, pride is the most dependent upon an external referent: for pride in the right thing can give a man infinite dignity, while pride in the wrong thing only makes him insufferably ridiculous.

• • •

Wherever a nation can speak of its "masses," such a term designates its own failure to civilize its people; for the masses cannot even be intelligently patriotic, but only fearful, suspicious and superstitious.

• • •

The interesting difference between defective sight and defective hearing was neatly put by Nietzsche, when he observed: "The man who sees little always sees less than there is to see; the man who hears badly always hears something more than there is to hear."

• • •

Most of the trouble between couples occurs because the man won't express what he feels, and the woman won't refrain from expressing what she feels; if the traditional roles could be reversed for an hour or two, they both might learn something.

Speaking of the sexes, it's a safe generalization that a woman shows her age before breakfast, a man shows his after dinner.

• • •

There are verbal "placebos" as well as pharmaceutical ones; as Pirandello put it: "Isn't everyone consoled when faced with a trouble or fact he doesn't understand, by a word, some simple word, which tells us nothing and yet calms us?"

• • •

Does anyone know why "Uncle Sam" wears a top hat, when nothing is less indigenous to the American character or tradition?

• • •

The "liberalism" of one century is the accepted "conservatism" of the next; but the reverse is never true.

• • •

"Dawn" is the word for sun-up that is used by people who never have to get up at that time.

Lions Launch Preliminaries for Working Out Jackson Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — Russ Jackson and British Columbia Lions are expected, at last, to get together for a talk.

Ottawa coach Jack Gotta Wednesday said in an interview he expects the Lions' management to get permission today to talk with the former Rough Riders quarterback.

In a telephone conversation with B.C coach Eagle Keys, Gotta said it was decided that either Keys or B.C. excutive manager Jackie Parker will speak today with either David Loeb, Ottawa owner, or general-manager Frank Clair.

Jackson retired from the Ottawa team after the 1969 season and the Lions must receive Ottawa permission before approaching him to break his retirement.

Reports are that the Lions are prepared to pay Jackson as much as $100,000 to play. One Lions official is quoted as saying this figure has not been decided upon.

But even if the Lions convince Jackson he should play for them, Gotta made clear, they will have to give Ottawa some substantial talent for his services.

Originally the Rough Riders were asking for halfback Jim Young as part of a package from the Lions for Jackson, still Ottawa property.

That suggestion is believed to have fallen through.

But Gotta said Wednesday:

". . . I want to make it clear I don't intend to wind up looking like a chump no matter what Russ decides.

"I don't want to stand in the way of Russ furthering his education plans and his chance of returning to football, but I made it clear to Eagle that we won't relinquish rights to Russ for a whole lot of garbage."

Gotta also would like the matter cleared up in a hurry. The U.S. professional football draft takes place at the end of next week and Gotta wants to know where he stands by then.

"If we're going to get some talent from the Lions in exchange for Jackson, it will affect our thinking when we start signing American players after the draft."

Not Enough Seats?

TORONTO (CP) — Commissioner Jake Gaudaur outlined the problems Wednesday in the wake of a Halifax application for a Canadian Football League franchise.

A Halifax group, headed by Calgary businessmen, spoke in terms of an 18,000-seat stadium, Gaudaur said. He told them it would take an average attendance of nearly 22,000 to break even.

"We are always interested in people who are anxious to field new teams for us," the commissioner said.

"But I also considered it only fair to outline some of the problems involved.

"For example, every road game for a Halifax team would involve a long and costly trip.

"On the other hand, they've done a study down there which seems to show that there are more people within a 100-mile radius of Halifax than in the same area around Regina. And everybody knows that Regina has a very successful CFL franchise."

Gaudaur said the group proposes to make formal application at the CFL semi-annual meeting in June.

Stanley Loeppky, a 41-year-old Calgary chartered accountant, is the prime mover in the project.

He said he and his associates "feel that the area has enough population and football interest to make the team successful."

McKenzie Over Surgery

BOSTON (AP) — Right winger John McKenzie of Boston Bruins was reported progressing well today at Massachusetts General Hospital recuperating from shoulder surgery.

The hustling National Hockey League all-star suffered a separation of his left shoulder Sunday night against Toronto Maple Leafs at Boston Garden. The Bruins won the game 9-1.

The injury forced McKenzie to miss Tuesday night's all-star game here. He is expected to be out of action four to five weeks.

Canucks Dunked

Leafs' Boomer Baun Now Perfect Playmaker

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bobby Baun set off the fireworks for Toronto Maple Leafs Wednesday night as they blasted Vancouver Canucks to a 5-1 National Hockey League defeat.

Baun, the gentleman farmer and collector of hats better known for belting the opposition, engineered four Toronto Maple Leaf goals, including the winner by Jim Harrison midway in the game.

In other games, Rod Gilbert's two third-period goals, his second of the game and 14th of the season with just 19 seconds to play, pulled New York Rangers into a 3-3 tie with Philadelphia Flyers while Pittsburgh Penguins scored three times without a reply in the third period for a 4-2 win over California Golden Seals.

For Baun, known throughout the NHL as the Boomer because of his ability to drape attacking forwards over or into the boards with his truculent style, Wednesday night's offensive effort was one of his finest in 14 big league seasons.

The Harrison goal snapped a 1-1 tie. Then Baun went to work in the final period, setting up scoring plays by Paul Henderson, Ron Ellis and Dave Keon.

The Lanigan, Sask. native, who owns a cattle farm at Claremont, Ont., just outside Toronto, began the current campaign in an unsettled climate at Detroit after informing Red Wing management this was his last season.

While expressing his personal liking for the then-new coach, Ned Harkness, he made no bones about his dissatisfaction with the training camp.

BOBBY BAUN

His hockey future was further clouded when the Red Wings placed him on waivers and Buffalo Sabres claimed him, shipping him off immediately to St. Louis Blues in exchange for two players—Jean-Guy Talbot and Larry Keenan.

The picture remained clouded, and Baun remained dormant, until Toronto finally came to his rescue by sending winger Brit Selby to the Blues in a straight deal.

Now that he's back in Toronto, where he started his pro hockey career in 1956, Baun may have second thoughts about quitting. He has given the rookie-laden Toronto defence some stability and his over-all play has improved with the change of scenery.

The last-ditch effort by Gilbert enabled the Rangers to extend their unbeaten string on home ice to 21 games, a club record, before a full house of 17,250.

Ties are fashionable in the Ranger-Flyer relationship.

Philadelphia ended a frustrating streak of seven ties in their first meeting this season with a 3-1 victory. It was the last time they had seen each other until Wednesday night.

"We got off not playing well," said Emile Francis, Rangers general manager and coach, something of an understatement in view of Philadelphia's three-goal lead, two by Guy Gendron, in the second period.

Ratelle Helps Self As Well as Rangers

Jean Ratelle led New York Rangers to a 3-3 draw ith Philadelphia Flyers Wednesday night, assisting on all of the Ranger counters.

The three assists raised Ratelle's season point total to 48, giving him sole possession of ninth spot in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Mountain Made for Winter Games

SKASKATOON (CP) — The mountain is in place, accommodations are set and except for a few loose ends the city is ready for the Canada Winter Games which open Feb. 12 and close nine days later.

When the Games were awarded in April, 1969, city officials had to find something to ski on in the Prairie flatland and somewhere to house more than 2,000 competitors.

More than 700,000 cubic feet of earth was used to create Blackstrap Mountain which has a 300-foot vertical drop and an average slope of 26 degrees.

Blackstrap is 25 miles south of Saskatoon. At the end of the ski run is a new $60,000 lodge. The frozen surface of Blackstrap Lake will provide parking for 10,000 cars.

Besides skiing, other sports at the Games are hockey, curling, figure skating, speed skating, basketball, volleyball, badminton, synchronized swimming, gymnastics, boxing, wrestling, fencing, table tennis, judo and weightlifting.

The accommodation for athletes and coaches is in a three-storey empty department store. Games organizers have arranged to house female athletes in trailers on the ground floor while tents and cubicles will house the male athletes on upper floors.

The store also will house a 16-bed hospital staffed by volunteer doctors and nurses.

Spain Loses Sledder

CERVINIA, Italy (AP) — Luis Lopez Solanes, brakeman of Spain's No. 1 bobsled, was killed today when his bob went off the track during trials for the World bobsled championships in this Italian Alpine resort.

The Spainard, who competed in a team with driver Eugenio Baturone, suffered fatal internal wounds in hitting a tree after the bob flew off the Blue Lake track for 50 metres.

A spokesman for the Aosta Hospital where Lopez Solanes was taken, said the 27-year-old resident of Huesca died in the ambulance while being taken from Cervinia to Aosta.

The Spanish sled flew off on the final U-shape curve an was completely wrecked.

Baturone also was taken to the hospital. Doctors said they suspected he has fractured his pelvis.

Lopez Solanes was Spain's reserve brakema. He ran with Baturone because the regular brakeman Guillermo Rosal, was suffering from a cold.

It was Lopez Solanes' first run in Cervinia. The Spainard was a rookie in his first year of bobsledding.

Ballot Broader

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Wednesday that the ballot for the 1971 all-star team has been redesigned to include more players at each position.

Last year when the all-star voting was returned to the fans for the first time since 1956, each ballot contained six nominations for each of the four infield and catching positions and 18 for the three outfields berths.

The 1971 ballot will have eight nominations for each of the infield and catching positions and 24 for the three outfield spots.

Kuhn also said the nominating committee will be expanded to 144 from 24 and will include members of the news media.

The 1971 all-star game is scheduled for Tuesday night, July 13, at Detroit.

Her Style Crimped

Cathy Lee Irwin, 18, of Toronto, a top-rated skater, was at the Canadian figure skating championships in Winnipeg Tuesday, but on crutches. She was sidelined for six weeks after an accident last week. Extending sympathy are skaters Yetti Steinbrecker of Edmonton, left, and Karel Latham of Vancouver, centre. (CP Wirephoto)

Sports on All Fronts

CALGARY (CP) — Maury van Vliet, president of the Canadian Inter-Collegiate Athletic Union, has criticized Hockey Canada and Health Minister John Munro. "Who else but Hockey Canada could spend $300,000 a year to figure out a way to beat the Russians, Czechs and Swedes in world hockey and then not ice a team?"

LEOLA, Ark. (AP) — "He couldn't miss," said Benny Fuller's coach after Benny scored 102 points for the Arkansas School for the Deaf's basketball team Tuesday night. Fuller scored 38 points in the fourth quarter, but his game total fell short of the state record of 108 points set in 1955. Six-foot-two Fuller, a senior, is averaging more than 50 points a game this season. His 102-point effort pushed his team to a 133-58 victory over Leola.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Chris Boring scored his 1,000th harness-racing victory Wednesday night, behind Pangle in the featured $1,800 pace at Windsor Raceway. The 29-year-old trainer-driver from Adrian, Mich., now is one of approximately 60 reinsmen in harness-racing history to hit the 1,000 mark.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sports entrepreneur Jack Kent Cooke and his partners in promoting the upcoming heavyweight championship fight between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier are being sued for $45 million by a group that claims it was cut out of the promotion rights. Calvin V. Porter and Morrise Davis, both lawyers, and construction executive Howard Ferguson filed the suit Wednesday in Superior Court here.

Ontario Skaters Mining Share of Winnipeg Medals

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ontario skaters added two more gold medals to their list of achievements during the second day of competition at the Canadian Figure Skating Championships Wednesday.

Kim Wylie, a 14-year-old Galt, Ont., girl maintained her lead from the compulsory figures through the free-skating to capture the novice women's title.

The central Ontario junior women's champion compiled 514.8 points from the two sections of the event and beat out Vancouver's Barbara Terpenning. Miss Wylie now will move into the junior level in future Canadian championships.

The top five placings from compulsory figures remained unchanged after the free skating with Cynthia Zachar of Oakville, Ont., Barbara McBride of Edmonton and Patricia Woods of Vancouver following the two leaders.

Lee Armstrong of Chatham gave Ontario its third gold medal when he held off the free-skating challenge of Kevin Robertson of Toronto to win the novice men's event.

Marie and Bernard Souche of Toronto won the novice pairs title Tuesday night.

Miss Wylie, daughter of Willie Wylie, former Western Hockey League player with Vancouver Canucks, receovered from a fall during the free-skating and won the gold medal.

She stumbled near the completion of an attempted double axel and sat nervously on the sideline while Miss Terpenning took the ice.

However, the Vancouver girl suffered the same fate when she faltered while attempting a double axel.

"It was close," Miss Wylie said afterward, but the points and judges, placings gave her a decisive victory.

Armstrong, 15, tumbled during a series of jumps but performed with near perfection through the remainder of his free-skating program to grab the novice men's title.

Moments before Armstrong took the ice, Robertson had dazzled the crowd with a free-skating exhibition that was the best seen during the first two days.

He was awarded the highest marks from the judges, but it wasn't enough to overcome Armstrong's 20-point lead from compulsory figures.

In the junior women's compulsory figures completed earlier in the day, Julie Black of Point Edward, Ont., took a solid lead over Karel Latham of Vancouver. The Ontario girl compiled 453.2 points compared with 446.8 for Miss Latham.

Spencer Not Standing Still

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spencer Haywood's battle in the federal courts continues at a standstill, but he's not standing still on the basketball court.

While the legal hassle continued over his jump from the American Basketball Association to the National, Haywood fired in 23 points and grabbed 18 rebounds to lead Seattle SuperSonics over Atlanta Hawks 112-108 in the NBA Wednesday night.

Haywood was playing only hours after the U.S. Court of Appeals sat in San Francisco and the court took his case under advisement. Haywood, the former University of Detroit star, quit a $1.9 million contract with Denver of the ABA earlier this year, sparking the legal arguments.

Atlanta became the 11th straight opponent to protest a Seattle game because of the appearance of Haywood, who is not recognized by the NBA as an official player.

Elsewhere in the NBA Wednesday night, Milwaukee Bucks whipped Baltimore Bullets 120-116; Buffalo Braves ripped Portland Trailblazers 126-106; Chicago Bulldozers tripped New York Knicks 109-103; Boston Celtics tamed San Diego Rockets 142-112 and Cincinnati Royals defeated Phoenix Suns 126-114.

Haywood went the full 48 minutes for the first time in the NBA as he sparked an early Seattle lead. Then reserve Barry Clemens and player-coach Lennie Wilkens combined for 21 last-quarter points to stop Atlanta's comeback try.

Lew Alcindor scored 39 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to lead Milwaukee over Baltimore, the 10th straight victory for the Bucks.

Atlanta Optimistic

ATLANTA (CP—AP) — Thomas G. Cousins, board chairman of a group which will build a new coliseum here, said Wednesday he believes Atlanta will receive a National Hockey League franchise when the league expands.

Cousins, co-owner of Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association and board chairman of Cousins Properties which will build the coliseum, said in an interview "there is no doubt in my mind" that the NHL will move here.

"There are a number of people who have expressed interest to the NHL," he said. "A hockey team would be good for Atlanta and the coliseum. I feel certain there will be a commitment for a team before the building is completed."

Atlanta made a bid for an NHL team last summer.

Garrett Tops in Goal

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Robert Lalonde of Montreal Junior Canadiens has a two-point lead over Toronto Marlboros' Dave Gardner in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring.

Lalonde, with 44 goals, has 85 points in 36 games. Gardner has 83 points in 37 games. He has scored 39 goals.

John Garrett of Peterborough Petes continues to hold the lead among goalkeepers with a 3.26 average, followed by Michel Larocque of Ottawa 67s at 3.42.

Steve Durbano of Toronto Marlboros is the league penalty leader with 230 minutes.

Big Rebounds Not Always Off Rim

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The most important "rebounds" made by the Loyalist Lancer basketball team this year aren't those pulled off the opposition's blackboard, but rather bouncing back from losses to the more established entries in the Ontario Collegiate Athletic Association's eastern division.

MIKE DOLLACK

Playing against such established entries as Mohawk College of Hamilton, St. Lawrence College of Kingston and Ottawa's Algonquin College the Lancers have lost six of seven games so far this season, their first in inter - collegiate competition.

"The hardest part of coaching," confesses Loyalist head man Mike Dollack, "is to keep them from getting down on themselves after a lopsided loss. They have to remember that some of these colleges were playing have terrific teams. Mohawk for instance, beat the University of Guelph in an exhibition game this year."

Dollack, a physical education graduate from Queen's University, played intra-mural basketball while attending there as well as inter-scholastic ball in high school.

A major setback to the team is a lack of depth. "We just don't have the experienced substitutes to come in if we run into foul trouble. Some of these boys didn't even play varsity basketball in high school. They're improving, but it's going to take awhile," admits Dollack.

The starting lineup includes centre Blair Culham, forwards Rick Webster and Mike Parker with Dale Lingard and either Bill McKay or Don Carson as guards.

"We've improved a great deal since the start of the season", says the coach. "These guys can put the ball in the basket now, the only problem is convincing THEM."

The team plays a pattern type offence, lacking the type of personnel for an effective fast-break attack.

"We try to adjust, defensively, to the opposition," Doblack expains. "We'll start out in a zone and if that doesn't work then we'll switch to man-to-man. Against certain opponents we'll even use combinations such as a "box-and-one" if we feel it will work best against their personnel."

While the team may not be setting the league on fire in it's initial efforts, their novice coach feels that it is laying the groundwork for a sound basketball program at the college.

"We should have an interim gym next season which will allow us to practice every day and now that people graduating from high school recognize that we have a basketball program we hope to build a contending team in the future."

Guard Don Carson of the ~~Loyalist~~ Lancers attempts to drive around teammate Mike Parker in a practice session of the Ontario Collegiate Athletic Association team at Centennial Secondary School. NHL Old-timers Coming To Help City Hockey Fortunes

Old - timers hockey games have a head start on most sport fund-raisers.

For one thing, supporters of such projects get a sound spectator's return on their investment. They're also a haven for autograph-hunters.

Another of the celebrity-bill occasions has been planned for Belleville Friday, Feb. 26, this time with the official National Hockey League Old-Timers the star attractions.

The game, pitting the Toronto - based Old - timers against as many former Belleville McFarlands as can be mustered and other city veterans of the hockey wars, is a joint project of the Belleville Fairways Junior B entry and the city's OMHA all-star teams.

Admission prices will be lower than usual for similar exhibitions. All children will be admitted for 50 cents, while adults can purchase advance tickets for $1 or take their chances at the box office for $1.25. Advance ticket-buyers will get a free 25-cent chance on a wristwatch, giving them a total 50-cent bonus.

Tickets may be purchased from Fairway players or management, or city minor all-star team personnel.

The Old - Timers lineup includes familiar hockey names of other eras like Harry Watson, a member of five Toronto Stanley Cup teams; Sid Smith, who played on two Leaf Cup winners and was twice on all - star and Lady Byng Trophy winner; Ivan Irwin, who in his 1953-58 heydays with the Rangers enjoyed the distinction of being the lone native American in the National Hockey League; and Danny Lewicki, a slick performer with Toronto and New York in the Fifties.

A particularly familiar face on the Old-Timers' blueline will be that of Bob Goldham. Goldham played on five Stanley Cup winners in a 15-year career with Toronto, Chicago, and Detroit, and is seen every week as a commentator on the CBC's Hockey Night in Canada.

Meantime, former McFarland Floyd Crawford has been assigned the task of reuniting some of his scattered former teammates who brought Canada the world hockey championship 12 years ago.

One former "Mac" who may have to switch allegiances is "Ike" Hildebrand. Hildebrand, currently coaching Orillia Terriers of the OHA Senior A league, played with New York and Chicago Black Hawks and is listed on the NHL Old-Timers' roster.

Mo-Hawks Count on Crescents

They've got their sights set on higher places, but Belleville Mo-Hawks could virtually assure themselves of at least the lowest senior hockey playoff rung this weekend:

That insurance rests on a two - game eastern Ontario swing by seventh-place Owen Sound Crescents, who play the fifth-place Mo-Hawks in a 9 p.m. Friday game, and move on to tackle sixth-place Kingston Saturday.

"This is a pretty well make-or-break weekend for them," agreed Mo-Hawk coach Dave Jones. "If we beat them tomorrow night, we're 10 points up on them and they'd only have ten games to play."

A win would also vault the Mo-Hawks over Oakville Oaks into fourth rung on the eight-team OHA Senior A ladder.

The Oaks have 29 points, Belleville 28, Kingston 25, and Owen Sound 20, all in 29 games.

Following Friday's 30th game in their schedule of 40, the Mo-Hawks get a lay-off until a Sunday, Jan. 31 home meeting with Barrie Flyers.

Two worries plague club management at this crucial stage of the season.

The first is the status of leading club scorer Doug Senior, who suffered two cracked back vertebrae in a goalpost collision in Oakville Sunday.

Senior, who had 14 goals and 17 assists in his first 28 games, sat out Tuesday night's 3 - 1 win over Kingston, his first lineup absence all season.

"We can't be sure when Doug can get skating again until the swelling goes down around the injury," coach Jones informed.

The other Mo-Hawk concern is game attendance, or lack of same. Dwindling crowds reached a new low Tuesday when only 253 paid admissions were recorded.

Belleville has a fifth-place senior hockey team with seventh - place supporters.

Inquest Hears How Victims Identified

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A five-man coroner's jury today heard summations of evidence into the crash of an Air Canada jetliner which killed all 109 persons aboard last July 5.

The jury, which next will consider its verdict, had previously been instructed not to investigate the cause of the crash, which was the subject of a federal inquiry completed last month.

Expert witnesses at the inquiry blamed First Officer Donald Rowland for the crash. They said evidence of a voice tape from the plane's recorder indicated he inadvertently activated the giant plane's spoiler lever, causing brake flaps to operate prematurely during a landing attempt.

Wednesday, the inquest, under Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner, heard details of how all but 20 of the crash victims were identified through personal effects, dentures, jewelry, pathological research and fingerprints.

The elongated DC-8-63 jet was bound for Los Angeles from Montreal with a short stop at Toronto.

It was learned that Janine Chapdelaine of Santa Monica, Calif., carried $25,000 in cash on to the jetliner after buying $45,000 worth of insurance at Montreal's Dorval Airport shortly before take-off.

Provincial police found the $25,000 the day after the crash by sifting through the wreckage. The money came from sale of family property.

The family was in the process of moving from Montreal to Santa Monica. The $25,000 has since been handed over to Mr. Chapdelaine, who was also named beneficiary in his wife's airport insurance policy.

Two sets of safety deposit box keys, also found with the money in a cosmetics bag, were traced to Montreal and this led to the identification of Mrs. Chapdelaine.

Mrs. Chapdelaine was one of three persons who took out insurance from the airport machines and then boarded Flight 621. The other two, John McTaig of North Vancouver, B.C., and Istvan Simon of North Hollywood, Calif., bought $130,000 and $105,000 worth of insurance respectively.

The inquest was told by Dr. James Purves, president of the recently-formed Canadian Society for Forensic Odontology, that 44 of the crash victims were identified through dental evidence.

He recommended that up-to-date dental records be kept on all crew members as well as fingerprints to make identification of crash victims easier.

TO STUDY RECORDS

TORONTO (CP) — A city committee will study meteorological records to see whether landlords should provide 68 degrees fahrenheit heat a month sooner than Oct. 1 and a month later than June 1 as now is required by municipal bylaw. Alderman Horace Brown, Toronto board of health chairman, told the board "our winters are getting colder."

Teachers Want Time To Write

FERGUS, Ont. (CP) — A branch of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation has recommended that teachers be given time away from their regular duties to write textbooks.

A resolution to that effect was passe Tuesday at the annual meeting of the federation's District 39 branch, representing teachers at secondary schools in Guelph, Erin, Mount Forest, Palmerston, Fergus and Arthur.

The resolution urged the federation's executive to ask the department of education to take steps so teachers could be released from regular duties to prepare such books.

Subsidy for Northern Power Company Urged by Nielsen

OTTAWA (CP) — Losses incurred by a government-operated power company in northern Canada should be picked up by all Canadian taxpayers, not only those in Whitehorse, the Commons was told Wednesday.

"These plants should be supported and it should be government policy that they be supported by the taxpayers of Canada as a whole," Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) said during second-reading debate on amendments to the Northern Canada Power Commission Act.

Mr Nielsen was objecting to a proposal that NCPC, which generates 75 per cent of all of the electrical power in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, be allowed to establish regional rates for its consumers.

Under the present law, each of the 22 generating plants must be self-sustaining. Thus power rates vary from just over one cent a kilowatt hour in big centres such as Yellowknife and Whitehorse to 15 cents a kilowatt hour in smaller Arctic settlements.

Mr Nielsen said he feared the new policy would mean that Whitehorse residents alone would pay higher power rates to make up losses in other parts of the North.

The Whitehorse lawyer also accused the government of trying to drive private power companies from the territories.

Although the goverment agency was established in 1948 to provide power where private investors were unable or uwilling to go, it was gradually forcing its way into profit-making areas.

Mr. Nielsen cited the case of the power supply for the Anvil mine near Whitehorse. As part of the government aid to help it get established, Ottawa had insisted that Northern Canada Power be given the power contract.

Private companies wanted to bid on the contract but this was refused, Mr. Nielsen said.

He added that Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien had gone to Europe to try to get foreign capital for the North. Yet when capital was freely available for power projects, the offers were being rejected in favor of the government agency.

Mr. Nielsen's motion to have the principle of the bill referred to the Commons was taken under advisement by Deputy Speaker Russell Honey. If passed, it would in effect kill the bill.

Judd Buchanan, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Chretien, said the aim of the bill is to allow the government power agency to adopt a more flexible approach in meeting growing northern power needs.

It now required cabinet approval for engineering and other studies. This would be increased to $250,000.

Of the proposed new rates, he said the commission is operated in the public interest and wants to bring benefits of low-interest borrowing and profit-free power to northerners.

"It is only logical that costs be averaged within regions and that there be some latitude to average costs throughout the system without excessive subsidies to high-cost regions at the expense of low-cost areas," he said

Bud Orange (L—Northwest Territories) asked that an independent commission assess power needs in the North. The government also should review its policy of supplying power in the territories to government agencies cheaper than the rates

Rod Thomson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) defended the growth of the government power agency in the North.

It could provide power in remote areas much faster than profit-seeking companies. With lower operating costs, it also could charge cheaper rates.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said the government presence should be diminishing in the territories as they moved toward self-rule.

The power bill would give Ottawa added power and have "a discouraging and negative effect" on northern development, he said.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) called for clear guidelines for extension of power in the North. There had been too little planning up to now

Paul McCartney's Lawyer Says Beatles' Books 'Lamentable'

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney opened Tuesday his legal fight to dissolve the Beatles' business partnership, and his lawyer said the pop group who led the field for so long may not have enough left to pay their taxes.

Lawyer David Hirst, demanding dissolution of the partnership and a receiver to go over the books told the High Court that McCartney had been denied accounts for four years and when they finally arrived they proved "lamentable."

"The latest accounts suggest there probably is not enough in the kitty to meet even the individual Beatles' income tax and surtax liability, let alone the company's corporation tax," Mr. Hirst asserted.

The quartet which revolutionized the world of pop have been reputed to be worth about $100 million with royalties still pouring in.

The three other Beatles—John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr—and Apple Corps Ltd., the Beatles' company, are the defendants in the suit. But Allan Klein, their American manager, was Mr. Hirst's principal target.

Mr. Klein became the group's manager after the death in 1967 of Brian Epstein, discoverer of the Liverpool quartet.

Mr. Hirst charged that preliminary draft accounts of the partnership's records delivered to McCartney Monday night "reveal a grave state of affairs."

In New York, a spokesman issued a statement from Mr. Klein saying that he wanted "to categorically deny that the Beatles' finances are in 'an appalling state'."

Mr. Klein's statement said the partnership "is solvent and has more than sufficient net current assets to meet all income tax and surtax liabilities on this income to the four individual partners."

The spokesman said Mr. Klein pointed out that neither he nor Abkco Industries Inc., the business management firm for Apple Corps which Mr. Klein heads, were "parties to the action" in London.

Henry Fonda Wasted as Nice-guy Police Officer

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry Fonda returned to television Wednesday night in a new comedy series on ABC called The Smith Family.

Fonda is a consummate actor. He is an enduring leading man because he has a style and grace that enables him to transcend his material and bestow upon it an integrity not always inherent in the script.

That, alas, is the case here. We've seen it all before.

It is as if Fred MacMurray or Brian Keith or John Forsythe was away from My Three Sons or Family Affair or To Rome with Love and Fonda was filling in. It doesn't matter which one, all are 30-minute tranquillizers. The only difference is that Fonda plays a police detective whose family becomes involved in his cases.

The show is out of the same shop that created the other three, Don Fedderson Production.

There is nothing in The Smith Family to get upset about.

Fonda is such a gentle, understanding and thoughtful parent that real life fathers should take lessons. The kids behave like angels, even under the most trying circumstances. The mother, played by Janet Blair, resists every temptation to meddle and set everything aright in the manner of matriarchial comedies of the past.

On the other hand, there is nothing here that really lifts the spirit. Of course, it massages our illusions and fantasies and hopes. Deep down, we know we're really like the Smiths, even if we don't live that way.

There is nothing wrong with handing people a little comfort and solace. The wish is that this show had been done with more style, more insight, more wit, more guts, and had more meat and bones to it.

Fonda was last seen in a series in The Deputy some years back and his show is the first among a flock of series which will feature movie stars signed earlier this year. The others are scheduled to debut in the fall.

Earlier in the night, CBS explored the world of the penguin at Cape Crozier in the Antarctic. It was a part of the Adventure series and the marvellous photography was by Dr. William Sladen, a Johns Hopkins University ecologist.

The fascinating thing about it was that the penguins acted more like real people than any of the Smith Family. They faced danger, they squabbled, they mated, they divorced, they played in the snow and they hunted for food. They also achieved dignity and peace.

Crosby Good as Doctor

NEW YORK (AP) — The bedside manners of Drs. Bing Crosby and Robert Young were seen at tandem Tuesday night on ABC.

On the warmth of his role, Robert Young won hands down, playing the kind of family doctor in Marcus Welby M.D., that we all wish we had.

Crosby, on the other hand, played his first dramatic role on television in a macabre tale of a small town doctor who practised selective pruning on the townspeople as diligently as he weeded his garden.

The Movie of the Week, Dr. Cook's Garden, was adapted from the 1967 Broadway play by Ira Levin, author of Rosemary's Baby.

Crosby's bedside manner is warm as toast at first, as he ministers to the needs of the sick, spurning rest and vacation. It turns chilly when his protege returns to town with his new medical degree and discovers that the doctor has been killing patients he considered undesirable for the town.

Crosby's acting ability was first rate, carrying him believably through the nuances of the role. He was in turn dedicated, proud, scoffing, pleading and finally vicious, determined to kill his protege by poison if he could and with a garden hoe if need be.

QIT Selected for Festival

The Quinte Island Theatre has been selected to perform in the National Arts Centre in Ottawa at the 1971 National Festival, it was announced this morning.

The Prince Edward County group is one of 22 theatrical groups from across Canada chosen by the Dominion Drama Festival, National Festival 1971 Committee.

The invitation is an indication that the group has gained outside attention in its theatrical efforts.

The play to be presented is Gift of the Drum, a children's play written by Canadian author Dorothy-Jane Goulding of Toronto.

Names of successful applicants for Theatre Canada '71, the non-competitive replacement for the Dominion Drama Festival finals, were released in Ottawa Wednesday.

The groups were chosen from more than 70 applicants to take part in the six-day program beginning May 17 at the National Arts Centre.

Jeanne Sabourin, chairman of the selection committee, said at a news conference in Ottawa that the final selections were chosen as a cross-country representation of all types of theatre being performed in Canada today.

Fifteen of the plays are by Canadian authors.

Other cities and communities represented in the festival are Simcoe, Toronto, Cornwall and Sault Ste. Marie.

Showbusiness Shorts

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Paul Newman and his wife, Joanne Woodward, were the movies' top box office draws last year, a poll by Box Office, a film trade publication, says.

Results of the voting by exhibitors, consumer film groups, newspaper radio and television reporters were announced Wednesday.

Miss Woodward was named the top actress in the same poll last year. Newman regained the No. 1 position after being replaced the year before by John Wayne, who finished second this time.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Diana Ross, 26, former lead singer for The Supremes, and Robert Ellis Silberstein, 25, a Los Angeles businessman, were married Wednesday. It was the first marriage for both.

Miss Ross sang last with The Supremes at the Frontier Hotel here Jan. 15, 1970. She has since worked as a single in nightclubs and on television.

Councillors Entertained

Inaugural meeting time is "eating out" time for members of Hastings county council and this year was no exception.

Late Tuesday afternoon council members and county officials were guests of newly elected Warden Kenneth Smith at a reception held at the county administration building.

Then Wednesday, A. E. Wilson and Company Ltd., the firm the county has placed its liability insurance with since the mid-twenties, through its agent Frank Cruise, was host for councillors and department heads to luncheon at the Sun Luck Gardens.

And at the conclusion of the inaugural session Wednesday evening, The Canadian-Imperial Bank of Commerce was host for a reception and dinner at the Hotel Quinte for council members.

DANGEROUS IDOLS

LONDON (CP) — Young persons are being lured into crime and the use of drugs through their hero-worship of some movie idols and screen villains, says Police Commissioner Sir John Waldron of London. Waldron cited drug use by a number of stars and at least one film about burglary as examples of dangers posed for youth by movieland and its personalities.

THEATRE FEATURE TIMES

AT THE PARK — In Color — Showing for a limited time a program of humor and excitement. The humor is provided by Sammy Davis Jr. and Peter Lawford in "One More Time". The excitement and action is in "Hornets' Nest" starring Rock Hudson. This evening one complete show only commencing at 7.30. Friday and Saturday show time 6.30. Sat. Mat. 1.00. Adult Entertainment.

AT THE BELLE — Alan Arkin stars in Mike Nichols film "Catch 22" with Jon Voight and Orson Welles, and quite simply, one of the best American films to be seen this year. Restricted to persons 18 years and over. Evenings at 7.00 and 9.10. Also at the Centre in Trenton.

Belleville, Ont.

LIVE IN THE COUNTRY

Modernized 9 room brick home with barn and 3½ acres for you and your horse to roam on. Just 12 miles from Belleville and far enough from 401 to have quiet. $19,500.

PRICE REDUCED!

Two storey 107 year old stone house with two fireplaces and open ceiling beams in the kitchen. 125 acres of land with barns, a creek and maple bush. Only $20,500. with terms.

EAST END

I like this one, it is a bungalow with 3 bedrooms but you have the feeling you can move around, a large basement to go to work in and a 7% mortgage to keep the payments down. Let's have a look. $23,900.

DESERONTO

We have several choice building lots as well as commercial and industrial sites available at rock bottom prices. Call for details.

1. Why not enjoy air conditioning in your car and pay for it only in the summer? Leasing makes it easy . . . 30c per day or $9.00 monthly.
2. Why not lease a new car every six months or once a year and save on repairs? Leasing makes it easy.
3. Why not save on income tax and lease for business driving?

CLOTHING SHIPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A total of 50,837 individual articles of children's clothing worth $71,795 were shipped from British Columbia to Red Cross warehouses in troubled parts of the world in 1969, reports S. R. Hayden, chairman of the B.C.-Yukon division of the organization.

Lemieux Fails To Win Right To Defend Pair

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Court of Appeal refused Wednesday to issue an order for the release of lawyer Robert Lemieux so that he could represent five persons accused in connection with Quebec terrorism last October.

Mr Lemieux, 29, had presented a petition last Friday to Chief Justice Lucien Tremblay and Justices Paul Casey and G. Miller Hyde.

The lawyer, in jail since his arrest Oct. 16 under the War Measures Act, was seeking to represent Paul and Jacques Rose, accused of non-capital murder in the Oct. 17 slaying of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, as well as Jean Boisjoli and brothers Gilles and Raymond Cormier, all charged with seditious conspiracy and membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Mr. Lemieux himself is charged with seditious conspiracy and a request for bail was refused last week by Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet.

Since the lawyer is being detained pending his trial, he cannot be released from custody to appear in court without a court order.

Cambodian Force Recaptures Pass

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodian troops recaptured the Pich Nil pass today and planted their flag over the napalm-scarred skeleton of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's mountaintop chalet.

About 1,300 infantrymen spearheaded the fastest Cambodian advance in more than a week after being stalled for four days by Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces entrenched in the Elephant Mountains on either side of Highway 4.

The winding mountain pass was considered the last Communist stronghold separating the two prongs of a 15,000-man Cambodian-South Vietnamese pincer operation to reopen Phnom Penh's only overland supply route from the sea.

An estimated 2,000 Communists who had withstood four days of intensive American air strikes retreated before the Cambodian advance with virtually no resistance, leaving the rotting bodies of suicide squads who remained in the bunkers to fight to the death.

Most of them had been killed by U.S. helicopter gunships and Cambodian ground fire in the preceding 24 hours.

The Saigon government said force of South Vietnamese marines had entered the pass and was only three miles from Cambodian forces at the other end.

A South Vietnamese spokesman said this three miles of the seven-mile pass was the only stretch of Phnom Penh's highway to the sea still not under control of the South Vietnamese and their Cambodian allies.

The pass is midway along Highway 4, the 115-mile road that connects the Canadian capital and Kompong Som, the country's only deepwater port.

Authorities in Phnom Penh reported 51 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops had been killed, while Cambodian casualties were seven killed and 61 wounded.

North Vietnamese troops have controlled Highway 4 since last Nov. 21, cutting Phnom Penh off from its seaport and creating shortages of gas, fuel oil and other imports in the capital.

The South Vietnamese and American commands also announced a 24-hour ceasefire in South Vietnam for the Tet festival of the lunar new year beginning at 6 a.m. Saigon time next Tuesday. The Viet Cong have announced a four-day ceasefire for the holiday, beginning at 1 a.m. next Tuesday.

The ceasefires do not apply to Cambodia and Laos, where most of the action now is.

Trudeau Outlines Bureaucracy Control

SINGAPORE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has circulated among other Commonwealth leaders here a paper containing his ideas on how elected governments and parliaments can keep control over administrative bureaucracies.

This is the Canadian item on the agenda but it is not expected now that there will be a time for a debate on it. Trudeau still hopes to introduce the subject at least before the conference ends Friday.

When it became clear that time was a problem, Trudeau simply handed out copies of his paper to the other heads of government.

The paper says at one point "It is well known that while bureaucracies have great inertia to political direction they have a certain irresistible momentum and direction of their own choosing. To overcome the inertia and to redirect the momentum requires all the energy a government has and frequently this is not enough."

Trudeau suggests vigorous development of constitutional law —he is a constitutional lawyer —and better administrative practices as two means to force government bureaucracies to shape up.

Unemployed in B. C. Plan Demonstration

VICTORIA (CP) — The second session of the 29th British Columbia legislature opens today and representatives of the 70,000 unemployed in the province will make their discontent clear with a mass demonstration organized by the B.C. Federation of Labor to coincide with the opening.

Both the Opposition New Democratic Party and the Liberals are expected to launch attacks on the Social Credit government for failure to stimulate employment during the past year, and for the current slump in the B.C. economy.

Standing in the house is: Social Credit 38, New Democratic Party 12, Liberals 5.

Under the welfare heading, provincial policies will come in for critical analysis as Opposition members plead the cause of municipalities burdened by spiralling welfare costs.

Some hint of the government's legislative proposals will come in the speech from the throne read by Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson.

In particular, the speech may throw out hints on whether Premier W. A. C. Bennett plans any tax increases in his budget to be brought down Feb. 5—a move that has been predicted by NDP and Liberal leaders alike.

However, the premier's earlier warnings of tax changes in the offing have been followed by a more cheerful forecast of the general economic situation, so he could claim credit for holding the tax line.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Sick Birds Threat To Owners' Health

Our parakeet Binky died a few years ago. We had called the veterinarian; how distressed we were to see the formerly vivacious little fellow sit quietly on his perch. No more saucy, teasing antics as we neared his cage.

Only a pet-lover can understand the feeling of loss and helplessness when a lovable animal or bird gets sick, lingers and dies. But owners are often unaware that when the pet gets sick he may threaten their own health. For example, consider the following letter:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We bought a cute little parakeet about a month ago. Within a week it was flying all over the house. My mother went daffy about him. She would hold out her thumb and he would fly to it. Then she would kiss his beak as though he were a little baby.

My father and I used to warn her that he might make her sick, but she didn't seem to care. For about a week the bird didn't act right. He was quiet. He didn't fly to Mother. She couldn't understand it.

We knew the answer in about 10 days. My mother came down with pneumonia. Our doctor, who is right on the ball, said it was due to psittacosis. Mother was pretty sick for about a week, but antibiotics helped cure her. My only reason for writing is to warn parakeet lovers to be aware that the cute little fellows can innocently infect those who love them most. — Miss D.

Comment: I have often been asked, "Shall we get rid of our parakeet?" Or, "We're thinking of getting a parakeet. Is it dangerous?"

My usual reply is that there's no more valid reason for not having a healthy parakeet than there is for not having healthy dogs or cats around the house. However, as Miss D. suggests, ordinary caution and awareness is essential when one takes on the responsibility of keeping any pet.

Consider psittacosis, for instance. It is a relatively rare disease, caused by a virus, and transmitted by actual contact with the bird or its cage. (Incidentally, parakeets are not alone in occasionally causing the infection in humans. Parrots, lovebirds, canaries, chickens, ducks and other fowl may also harbor the infection.

The incubation period of the disease is from seven to 14 days.

Psittacosis is usually milder in children. In adults who develop pneumonia the symptoms begin with headache, fever, loss of appetite, chills and cough.

Strict isolation is important both at home and in the hospital. Although antibiotics are ineffective against most virus infections, such treatment seems to help those who come down with psittacosis.

To repeat: if you'd like a parakeet, parrot or lovebird, be sure to buy from a reputable dealer. He will not sell you a sick bird. Once the bird becomes a family member, it deserves special care. Keep the cage clean, keep your hands clean, and seek advice from a veterinarian if there is any suspicion at all that the bird is ill.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have heard that if one takes vinegar with the noon meal it will help one lose weight. What I'm interested in is how much vinegar to take. — Mrs. J.

Comment: You should be more interested in how much less you should eat than how much vinegar you should swallow. Just because you have "heard" it somewhere, doesn't prove that vinegar is effective in weight reduction. Unless vinegar in some way cuts down o your appetite, I know of no reason why it should answer your problem.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 22

Your birthday today: The pursuit of several dream-like goals characterizes your coming year. Dozens of incidents bring varied results, from minor disappointments to triumph. You are likely to wind up in a position that doesn't yet exist; you may even take part in creating the spot. So build to suit your own unique personality. Among today's natives, the women attract favorable attention; the men prefer unusual specialized work, care little whether they get attention, favorable or otherwise.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The idea you had last night now pays well with a little effort. Mobilize your resources for an effort to build. Recent ventures come to a head, cash in where you can.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Clear the decks for a busy weekend; leave no loose ends. Interviews, conferences about sharing work lead to simpler ways of getting things done.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Seek improvements in your working place. A search for references turns up something interesting and helpful. Household conferences can quickly settle arrangements there.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): You wake up with answers to longstanding puzzles in the back of your mind. It's a generally peaceful day in which you find co-operation. Stay busy.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): New projects pop up and you must declare yourself in or out on short notice. Put in applications. Community affairs include excitement, perhaps a demand that you take part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You have a favorable climate for your ventures, possible sideline specialties, new equipment. Unrealistic suggestions surround you, some entailing extensive discussion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Plunge right in, ask for what you'd like to have in your career. Try to improve your opportunity, on the basis of your recent achievements. A surprise is in the offing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Express yourself clearly. Your intuition guides you to the main issues; get them settled today. Do something symbolic for your loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Previously planned activities may be changed as intuition and new information reveal a better path. Seek medical advice. Evening brings coincidence, anything can happen.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your friends wear the laurels now, with fresh triumph and good humor. People are more attentive to you today, and what you say attracts lasting, beneficial relationships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): With extra effort, move your pet projects forward. Your ability and your theories are under test. Be ready for travel, as it may fit into this strenuous day.

Newfoundland Hit by New Gale

ST. JOHN'S, Nfl. (CP) — All but emergency vehicles were barred from using city streets until noon today as work crews cleaned up in the wake of a winter storm.

The storm, which left about 12 inches of snow, smashed across southeastern Newfoundland Wednesday and early today accompanied by winds gusting to 60 miles an hour.

The storm cause a number of power failures, choked thoroughfares with drifting snow, stranded motorists, stalled transportation and strained city snow-clearing crews to the limit.

The storm struck less than three days after an intense weather system which crossed the Avalon Peninsula last weekend left about 22 inches of snow and drifts up to 15 feet deep.

Canada Likely to Tell U.S. It Wants to Alter Seaway Tolls

WASHINGTON (CP) — Transport Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday it is "highly likely" Canada will inform the United States of "our desire to re-negotiate" the scale of St. Lawrence seaway tolls.

He was commenting after an informal luncheon chat with Transportation Secretary John Volpe, who only a few months ago reiterated the U.S. hope that a tolls increase can be avoided.

In the background was the Carr report tabled Tuesday in the Commons by Jamieson which urged a 25-per-cent increase in seaway tolls over a five-year period.

Another consideration was the U.S. move in October to head off a tolls increase by legislatively forgiving the U.S. seaway body a debt of more than $22 million owed the U.S. treasury in interest.

Volpe said then that it was his hope an increase, which he termed detrimental to growth of the U.S. Midwest and the national economy as a whole, could thus be avoided. President Nixon signed the legislation Oct. 21.

Volpe and Jamieson were head-table guests at the 50th anniversary luncheon meeting here Wednesday of the highway research board, at which Jamieson was main speaker.

Volpe, who laughed and chatted with Jamieson during the luncheon, declined later to comment on the grounds he had not read the report done for the Canadian government by D. William Carr and Associates.

Jamieson, meeting briefly with the press before flying back to Ottawa, said he foresees no change in the tolls level this year—but perhaps by early 1972.

He noted that the government has not yet had formal representations from various interested parties, including the shipping industry which is bound to oppose an increase.

However, he said that under the Carr recommendations "even if we did put an increase into effect this year it would represent only about $500,000."

Under the U.S.-Canada agreement creating the 10-year-old seaway, either country may request renegotiation of the tolls and other aspects of the agreement. If no request is made the agreement goes on unchanged.

Jamieson also said that since the U.S. investment in the seaway is far smaller than is Canada's, the U.S. is more "manoeuvrable" in devising solutions to fiscal problems—such as the decision to forgive the U.S. St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp. more than $22 million in interest debt.

Steel Firms Alter Methods

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Anti-pollution laws are spurring the United States steel industry to accelerate its conversion from open hearths to oxygen furnaces, and unemployment is expected to accelerate with it.

The switch from the dirty open hearth to the more efficient basic oxygen furnace, called BOF, was begun six years ago. It has been stepped up in recent months as state and local pollution control regulations have been pressed on steelmakers.

It takes about half as much manpower to operate a BOF as it does to run an open hearth furnace. A BOF can produce steel in an hour, while it takes an open hearth eight hours.

All this means that it will continue to take fewer men to make more steel.

The U.S. steel industry is facing the possibility of a strike in August and stockpiling will create a temporary boom in the industry.

Work will be good and production for the first eight months of 1971 will be extremely high.

The United Steelworkers union says it took 461,800 production and maintenance men to produce a total of 99.3 million tons of ingot steel in 1960. In 1969, it took only 428,000 production and maintenance men to turn out 141.3 million tons of ingot steel.

The American Iron and Steel Institute says that of the more than 131 million tons of steel produced in the U.S. last year, 63 million tons came from basic oxygen furnaces, while 48 million tons came from open hearths. The rest came from electric furnaces.

One industry source is predicting that by 1980, 66 per cent of the steel produced in the U.S. will come from BOFs, 28 per cent from electric furnaces and only a scant six per cent from open hearths.

Fined for 'Pot'

TORONTO (CP) — Edward Joseph Walsh, chief of security at Rochdale College was fined $400 Wednesday for possession of marijuana.

In passing sentence, Judge Maurice Charles asked whether people filling such responsible jobs were not investigated before being hired.

Payloads Increased For Trucks

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has approved rules governing the trucking industry which it says will permit most truckers to increase their payloads.

The regulations, approved under the Highway Traffic Act, were announced Wednesday in a speech by Transport Minister Irwin Haskett to the Automotive Transport Association.

They include:

—Publication of a "trucker's bible" which will provide operators with a reference for checking the loading capacity of their vehicles.

—Abolition of the need for truckers to register the weight of trailers and their loads.

—Application of a $2 annual fee for registering trailers, including those used for snowmobiles, boats and commercial vehicles.

—Imposition of a new fee schedule for gross-weight registration of power units.

The new fees will range from $35 for a pickup truck to $2,007 for a tractor with two trailers at the maximum weight, Mr. Haskett said.

He said the regulations should stimulate the development of container carriers.

Snowmobile Safety Program Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A safety education program would reduce snowmobile accidents sooner than new mechanical regulations announced by the federal government, a spokesman for a major manufacturer said Wednesday.

Ed Murphy, sales manager for the snowmobile division of Outboard Marine Corp., in Peterborough, said most snowmobiles are capable of stopping within the minimums set out under the new regulations.

Machines built after April 1 must be equipped with brakes that will stop them within 40 feet when they are travelling 20 m.p.h. on packed snow and being ridden by a 175-pound driver.

Mr. Murphy suggested the education program be conducted by manufacturers through dealer outlets.

Bill Jackson, general manager of Bombardier Ontario Ltd., Barrie, said the new regulations came in time to give his firm a chance to "get down to the drawing board" before they become mandatory.

A second set of regulations come into effect Feb. 1, 1972, to require all snowmobiles to be equipped with headlights and tail-lights, hand-grips for passengers and shielding of all movable parts.

Jerry Kirkwood, president of the London Snowmobilers Association, said he agrees a safety education program would reduce accidents sooner than mechanical regulations.

"It's not practical though to expect dealers to undertake the program. The dealers I know are too much involved in selling and service."

Anglican Dean Under Arrest

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The Anglican dean of Johannesburg, Very Rev. Gonville A. Ffrench-Beytagh, was detained by South African security police Wednesday night. Police spokesmen would not comment.

Rt. Rev. Leslie Stradling, Anglican Bishop of Johannesburg, said security police searched Dean Ffrench-Beytagh's office and then took him away. He could give no reason for the action.

The detention follows a series of government moves against clergymen of different denominations, but was the first action involving a churchman of such high rank.

Canon H. F. C. Thorpe, head of the Anglican missions department, challenged the government to a full and open discussion of deportation orders and passport withdrawals ordered against eight clergymen, five of them Anglicans.

About 50 persons attended a special late-night mass in Johannesburg's St. Mary's Cathedral to pray for the dean.

Afterward, Miss L. Clayton, the dean's secretary, told reporters police called at her apartment next to the cathedral Wednesday evening, showed her a warrant to search her office and took her to the cathedral's administrative section.

She said she found Dean Ffrench-Beytagh seated at a desk there and security officers searching his office. He apparently was taken away for questioning soon afterward.

Bacteria Count High In Barrie Bay Water

BARRIE (CP) — Tests last August after an alleged dumping of sewage by the city into Kempenfeldt Bay showed bacteria counts of more than 30 times what is considered a safe level for swimming.

Robert Doubt, chief public health inspector for Simcoe County, testified Wednesday that water samples taken Aug. 7 from the location near the point of the alleged dumping had fecal coliform bacteria counts of more than 8,000.

He said the health unit considers counts of 100 or less as safe for swimming.

The Aug. 7 reading compares to a zero reading in a test taken at the same location two months earlier, and a count of two taken 10 days later.

Leonard W. Blakemore, a city consulting engineer, told the court that for a 31-hour period Aug. 5 and 6 sewage entering a pumping station was diverted into two bypass pipes that lead directly into the bay, while repairs were being made to the pumping station and to the city's sewage treatment plant.

The trial of the city on a charge of illegally discharging sewage into the bay on Lake Simcoe continues today.

Commonwealth Gets Membership Creed

Trudeau Flies To Indonesia

JAKARTA (AP) — Prime Minister Trudeau flew to Jakarta today to begin a four-day state visit to Indonesia that will include talks with President Suharto and other leaders and an air dash to central Java, the nation's cultural centre.

The prime minister arrived at Jakarta's Kemayoran Airport at 6 p.m., some two hours behind schedule, because of an extended meeting of the Commonwealth summit conference in Singapore.

The buoyant Trudeau, smiling and dressed in a dark blue suit, ran down the steps of his Canadian air force Boeing 707 to meet his host, President Suharto, following the 1½-hour flight that crossed the equator into the Southern Hemisphere.

Foreign Minister Adam Malik, other Indonesian leaders, a large group of diplomats and others were on hand to greet Trudeau.

Suharto and Trudeau stood side by side on a raised platform as their national anthems were played and a 19-gun salute boomed out in Trudeau's honor.

The visit of Trudeau, the first Canadian prime minister to come to Indonesia, was seen here as a sign of growing trade and cultural relations between the two countries as well as a chance for Suharto to impress the Canadian leader with Indonesia's economic progress.

Canada, which established ambassadorial relations with Indonesia in 1953, last year became a member of the nine-nation Intergovermental group for Indonesia, which is helping this nation of 120 million persons pull itself out of its economic difficulties.

Canada itself has given approximately $7 million to Indonesia since 1950, mainly in the form of food and technical help.

Canadian exports to Idonesia in 1969 amounted to almost $3 million. Imports from Indonesia were less than $300,000.

For the current fiscal year, Canada is providing Indonesia with a $3.7 million grant, a sharp increase from its previous assistance.

Grant Cut Is Opposed

TORONTO (CP) — A recommendation by Ontario's Committee of University Affairs that graduate study grants be reduced was attacked Thursday by the province's university presidents and graduate school deans.

At a closed meeting of a CUA subcommittee with the Committee of presidents of Universities in Ontario, the presidents said the proposed reduction would likely reduce the number of graduates in the coming years and increase tuition fees.

Dr. E. E. Stewart, secretary of the CUA and deputy minister of university affairs, said his committee has made a recommendation that grants for Ontario graduate fellowships be reduced to $3.5 million from the current $5 million.

Canada's Draft Brings Accord

SINGAPORE (CP) — Thirty-one Commonwealth leaders accepted today a new declaration of principles — to be known as the Singapore Declaration — setting out their opposition to racial and other forms of discrimination.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who delayed his departure for a state visit to Indonesia today, provided the compromise amendment that made the declaration acceptable to all.

The document was distributed by Commonwealth Secretariat officials after heads of government agreed on the terms during hours of sharp, often heated debate on passages that would bind member nations to refuse any assistance that might bolster governments, like South Africa, practicing racial discrimination.

Prime Ministers Edward Heath of Britain and John Gorton of Australia were the main opponents of this commitment.

They relented, however, when the Canadian compromise inserted words which left the question of aid to individual interpretation.

Zambia first proposed the declaration which included a controversial clause calling on all members of the Commonwealth not to aid countries practising racial discrimination—in other words, South Africa. Britain strongly objected to this because it would be a denial of its own legitimate interests to sell arms to South Africa.

At the windup of the nine-day summit talks that saw the Commonwealth teetering on the brink of breakup, the 31 nations pledged to deny to racist regimes all aid which in their judgment "directly contributes to the pursuit of this evil policy."

The Commonwealth leaders said:

"We recognize racial prejudice as a dangerous sickness threatening the healthy development of the human race and racial discrimination as an umitigated evil of society.

"Each of us will vigorously combat this evil within our own nation.

"No country will afford to regimes which practise racial discrimination assistance which in its own judgment directly contributes to the pursuit or consolidation of this evil policy."

Prime Minister Trudeau, working hard behind the scenes, came up with the compromise acceptable to Britain and Australia, and it included the key words, "in its own judgment."

Six nations offered additions or amendments to the Zambian original draft. It was a Canadian one which finally proved acceptable to the 31 heads of delegation.

Asked whether his amendment prevented a deadlock, Trudeau told reporters, "You are looking for heroes again. I'm not a hero, just another individual."

The new wording of the declaration was worked out during a coffee break today between the most interested leaders, sitting in a group around Trudeau—acting as conciliator.

Among the leaders were Heath, Kaunda, Presidet Milton Obote of Uganda and Australian Prime Minister John Gorton.

The 696-word declaration listed five principles which Commowealth members hold in common:

—Belief in peace and order for the prosperity and security of mankind.

—Liberty of the individual and equal rights regardless of race, color, creed or political belief.

—Recognition that racial prejudice is a dangerous sickness and racial discrimination is an unmitigated evil and opposition to colonial domination and racial oppression.

—Belief that wide disparities of wealth now existing between different sections of mankind are too great to be tolerated and aim for their progressive removal.

—Belief in international co-operation as an essential to remove the causes of war and to promote justice and tolerance.

Ordeal in Drain

Mrs. Geraldine Delgado is helped up a manhole from a Los Angeles storm drain in which she and her husband, James, wandered for 12 hours in impenetrable darkness. Their ordeal began when Mrs. Delgado entered a cave-like entrance to the storm drains in the belief her 6-year-old son had wandered inside. Her husband found the boy above ground, then went looking for his wife. He found her after a dozen turns but they couldn't find their way out. They were rescued three miles away when a housewife raking leaves heard them yelling and called police.

Davis Opposed

Catholic High School Grants Would 'Fragment' System

OTTAWA (CP) — Government aid to Roman Catholic high schools would "fragment" the Ontario school system, Education Minister William Davis said Thursday night.

Mr. Davis, a contender for the leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, told Ottawa-area Conservatives "no one is going to provoke me into saying that the present government policy of non-support will change."

The education department now gives grants to Catholic schools only up to Grade 10.

Pressed by a questioner for a statement on whether he would extend this aid if elected Conservative leader, Mr. Davis said as of the moment "the answer is no and that's it."

In December, Mr. Davis said he hoped extended aid to Catholic high schools would not be a leadership campaign issue.

Thursday, he told delegates that such extended aid would lead to similar demands for money from anyone who wished to set up a private school, thus fragmenting the Ontario system.

U.S. to Keep SAC Base

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp reassured agitated Newfoundland MPs Thursday that the U.S. Air Force is not going to abandon its Strategic Air Command base at Goose Bay, Labrador.

Washington sources concurred with Mr. Sharp's Commons description of reduction in forces at the base as a "thinning out" of personnel.

Mercury-laden Fish Have Been Eaten for Years

TORONTO (CP) — Natural sources of mercury in lakes and rivers suggest people were eating mercury in fish long before such bodies of water were contamiated by industrial wastes, a report issued Thursday by the Ontario department of lands and forests suggests.

In a covering statement to a report on mercury in Ontario fish, Rene Brunelle, lands and forests minister, said much of the recent checking of fish samples has been from "waters receiving no industrial mercury."

Until the last year or so, no one had really been looking for mercury in Ontario fish and only recently have laboratories been able to handle masses of tests to the fine levels needed to discover and measure less than one part per million of mercury.

Irate Victoria Crowd Jeers Legislators

VICTORIA (CP) — Jeers and obsenities impinged on pomp and circumstances at the opening of the second session of the 29th British Columbia legislature Thursday as a rowdy crowd of 1,500 unemployed expressed their displeasure.

"We want jobs," and "down with Bennett" were among the milder chants as Lt.-Gov. John R. Nicholson formally inspected the guard of honor. A rotten orange hurled by an angry demonstrator sailed past Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The demonstration was organized by the British Columbia Federation of Labor to highlight the plight of the jobless and needy in the province.

Before the day was out, windows in the legislature had been smashed and one guard, George MacKay, 59, was slightly injured in a scuffle with demonstrators.

About 150 persons entered the buildings and created a disturbance during reading of the throne speech by the lieutenant-governor, before police reinforcements eased them out. No arrests were made.

Someone set off a fire alarm on the third floor of the buildings, bringing out the city fire department.

Three bomb threats also were telephoned to the buildings, prompting police searches.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Temperatures are expected to climb to near 30 across southern Ontario again this afternoon, ranging downward through the 20s in central sections of the province into the teens over the north. Another weather system moving out of the Prairies will produce a light snowfall over Northern Ontario today and, in the south tonight and early Saturday. With the passage of this disturbance colder air will move back into all regions for Sunday.

Gas, Radiation Or Loco Weed?

Another Flock of Sheep Is Wiped Out in Utah

GARRISON, Utah (CP) — More than 1,250 sheep have died mysteriously on a remote range in western Utah 150 miles from a grazing area where thousands of the animals were killed by army nerve gas in 1968.

Guesses on the cause included another nerve gas mishap, radioactive dust thrown up by a nuclear test last month and the effects of a noxious plant known as loco weed. Laboratory tests continued through the night at Utah State University.

A herder said the sheep toppled and died Thursday with blood pouring from their noses. Many of the survivors in a herd of 2,400 appeared to be dying.

The Atomic Energy Commission and the army both denied responsibility.

It was nerve gas from an aerial test at the army's top-secret Dugway Proving Ground that caused the 1968 kill of 6,400 sheep at Skull Valley. The army at first denied that nerve gas was the lethal [illegible] but later admitted the aerial test was [illegible] blame.

Gov. Calvin L. Rampton said initial reports by state investigators indicated "the sheep died of something they ate."

"I think it is unlikely the deaths are linked to the AEC, but you can't rule out the possibility," Rampton said. "It is unlikely the sheep would have died in one night if the cause was radiation."

Rampton also said he didn't think chemical or biological warfare testing at Dugway could have been responsible because prevailing winds have been blowing the wrong way for several days.

Garrison also is about 150 miles from the AEC's nuclear test site at Mercury, Nev. The AEC said only minute traces of radiation had been found at Garrison after a radiation leak from a test Dec. 18.

Loco weed, also known as halogeton, is widely found on western ranges. It can be lethal to grazing animals because of its high concentration of oxalate, a substance which prevents the normal coagulation of the blood.

The shepherd said loco weed grows on the range, but that the sheep had not been eating it.

Debate on Snowmobiles Set for Next Tuesday

Snowmobiles are a menace to man and his environment and should be banned.

Supporters of this attitude will have a chance to air their views next Tuesday night at Park Dale School when a full scale debate on the topic is scheduled.

Snowmobile fans will also be represented at the meeting, set for 7 p.m. Ray Worrell will lead the pro-snow machine group in a debate with Dr. Diether Paschken, a Canada Agriculture research scientist.

Supporting Dr. Peschken in his contention that the snowmobile is wrecking the environment and upsetting the balance of nature will be Moira Secondary School teacher Herschel Riley.

Moderators of the debate will be the listeners themselves, and the winners will be decided by totalling marks on score sheets and tabulating the results.

The audience will be asked to participate in a question and answer period.

The debate climaxes a weekend of snowmobile study undertaken by teachers attending the integrated studies course at Sir Winston Churchill School.

They are learning how to use a theme and integrate all teaching around that theme to spur children on to more intensified learning.

The practical demonstration on how to use the snowmobile theme in the classroom was prompted by two considerations.

It is a popular subject with children and provides ample opportunity to weave language study, arithmetic and other formal subjects into the theme.

It also gives teachers an opportunity to slip a little snowmobile safety training into the course of study — a necessity now, with reports filtering back to the schools about primary grade tykes being allowed to drive the family snow machine.

Saturday, the teachers on the course will attend a snowmobile clinic that will include safety instruction by OPP officers and mechanical demonstrations of the way the machine works.

Monday night they will take part in a work session, trading ideas on how to use their snowmobile knowledge in the classroom.

Tuesday they will go before the public, by sponsoring the open debate.

Discussion is expected to be heated. Ray Worrell, an ardent snowmobile enthusiast, is manager and secretary-treasurer of the newly formed association, Snowmobilers Protecting Others' Rights Together (SPORT).

Dr. Peschken, a scientist specializing in the relation of organisms to their environment, is an outspoken opponent of snowmobiling as a sport.

Oshawa Gunning For University

The city of Oshawa, overshot by the Ontario government when community colleges were established in Belleville and Peterborough, is gunning for bigger game.

It's after a university, and a specialized one at that, with emphasis on transportation engineering and medical science.

The proposal is still in the talk stage, with action not expected for some years. But the Central Ontario Joint Planning Board in Oshawa is gathering up approval in principle from organizations and municipalities in its district.

Northumberland Durham board of education has promised support at "the appropriate time".

The university proposal is part of a regional plan report prepared last fall by the area planning board. Establishment of a university advisory committee is currently being considered.

The board is concerned with "heavy and increasing concentration of economic, educational and cultural activity" in metropolitan Toronto. It notes the slow development of such activities in the Oshawa area.

A university would fill a visible gap in the community, increase employment, and widen the job choices for area workers, the report says.

Because Oshawa is a car manufacturing centre, the reports suggests that a new university in the area should specialize in transportation engineering and establish an institute of transportation technology and research.

Planners also suggest a regional medical science centre, including a medical school, regional hospital and medical research centre.

In agreeing to approve the scheme in principle when the time is ripe, the combined counties board of education said final approval should be withheld until existing universities reach near-capacity enrolment.

Good business procedure dictates that a new university should not be created until present universities reach the point where they cannot handle the number of students applying to the faculties in which the Oshawa institution would specialize, it said.

Gardening Course

Bob Keith, the CBC's Ontario Gardener, will deliver a series of five lectures on horticulture at Loyalist College, starting Feb. 22.

The two-hour Monday-night talks will cover the entire range of gardening, says a college announcement.

The number of registrations is limited to 60 with a $10 fee.

Mr Keith has been broadcasting his popular radio series for 27 years.

Tenant List Grows For Quinte Mall

The new $7-million Quinte Mall being constructed in North Belleville by Cambridge Leaseholds Ltd. could be completely rented before it even opens it doors.

Douglas Grant, local realtor who handled the sale of the 24.5 acre property to the development company, said this week that 80 per cent of the 40 stores in the plaza are already rented and that Cambridge expected space will be 90 per cent taken inside of a month.

Major tenants in the modern covered mall are Simpsons Sears, with 90,000 square feet of space and a Steinburg Miracle Food Mart with 50,000 feet. Total floor space in the mall will be 240,000 square feet.

Response by local merchants for rental space is expected to be good.

Plaza tenants will include two banks, an ancillary food store and eventually a dual movie theatre. There will be parking for 1,700 cars.

Mr. Grant said developers are still shooting for a 1971 fall opening.

When fully operational, the new plaza will have an estimated 300 full-time employees with another 200 part time workers. The annual payroll is expected to be in the area of $2 million.

In mid-October last year two young men arrived in Belleville to start a Canadian way of life.

Since then, life has been a succession of new experiences — including the more stark facts of Canadian life.

Among other things, Tsering Dorjee Wangkhang and Jampa Dorjee Drongotsang now have first-hand knowledge of economic recession.

Both 25, they were Canada's first Tibetan immigrants to arrive under a federal government refugee program. They started their new lives with jobs — plant employees of Bata Shoe at Batawa — and became part of the Canadian work force.

Now, they're part of that work force which has been idled by a cooled winter economy.

Tsering and Jampa have encountered another fact of Canadian life — the seasonal layoff.

They had been working two months and were still in the midst of basic adjustments to their new life style when the layoff hit.

At first they were confused, taken aback.

"We didn't know what a layoff was," says Jampa. "We thought first that our work wasn't satisfactory."

However, the intricacies of the situation were hurriedly outlined to them by James Staveley, the Belleville Canada Manpower information officer. Mr. Staveley, who in his dual post of immigration settlement officer, has become an official shepherd to new immigrants in the Quinte district, explained such things as seasonal economic declines and union seniority rules.

Tsering and Jampa quickly grasped the details and readily accepted the situation — a typical response since they came to Canada, says Mr. Staveley.

"He told us as soon as more business came along we would be back (at Bata)," said Tsering, "and we didn't feel so bad."

The layoff hasn't changed their minds about Canada as an attractive place to live.

"We're happy to stay here for the rest of our lives," says Tsering.

In fact, first on their list of priorities once they settle in to their new lives, is to bring their families to live with them.

Both men have brothers and sisters in India, where they fled in 1959 after the Chinese invasion of Tibet.

After that, Tsering for one says he'd like to buy a car.

Both men, boarding at a local home found by Mr Staveley, are easily adapting to their new environment, says the Manpower official.

"I'd say they are fitting in very well. They're quite realistic about what happens to them and they appreciate everything you do for them."

Both Jampa and Tsering have made numerous friends during their three months in the Quinte area — at the college, at Bata and through the Quinte International Club, a local social organization for various nationalities in the area.

"We're very happy here," says Tsering. We've not been treated like this since we left Tibet. And we're 100 per cent sure that any of our people who come here will also be happy."

As newcomers, every experience is an education — they even avidly watch television commercials.

The commercials, says Tsering, inform them about the everyday products used by Canadians and their functions.

Mr. Stavely expects they will shortly be recalled to work at Bata.

In the meantime, Jampa and Tsering are not wasting time in furthering their adjustment to their new country.

On their arrival they worked the night shift at Bata and — being immediate newcomers — had little else to do.

Mr. Stavely had them enrolled in a Manpower retraining program at Loyalist College for English, typing and bookkeeping.

While waiting for a work recall they are continuing their studies, cared for by funds under the government's Tibetan refugee program.

CN Engineers Impatient Over Contract Delay

A strong protest movement among Montreal train engineers aimed at ending long-drawn contract talks, is not expected to spread to their Belleville union comrades.

Montreal - area engineers Thursday blasted their union's constitution and warned they will strike next month unless agreement is reached on a new contract.

In Belleville, Carman Guest, chairman of Division 189, Brotherhood of Locomotive engineers, said similar reactions are not anticipated from the 100 engineers in the Belleville area.

However, if contract talks dragged on, Canadian National conceivably could be faced with a strike throughout its entire Central Region—from Montreal to Hornepayne.

Mr. Guest said negotiation now are on a national basis. Under the union's constitution members do not vote on the results of national negotiations. However, negotiators keep in touch wih the feeling of the general membership through local union chairmen.

At a study session in Montreal, the train engineers demanded the right to ratify labor contracts.

"This is the only damn union I have ever heard of that doesn't allow its members a say in their own contract," shouted one irate engineer.

Between 200 and 300 of the engineers who drive trains booked off sick to attend the meeting, but the CNR said its trains continued to run almost normally. A company spokesman said 210 of 340 men scheduled to work had booked off but other estimates said about 300 of 500 members were off.

A railway spokesman said four local commuter trains were cancelled as a result of the shortage of engineers.

The union, which has been without a contract since last April 30, is demanding a 20 percent wage increase in a one-year contract.

Jack Davies, union chairman for the railway's Great Lakes and St. Lawrence region said the study session was held "to show the CNR that it's time to get down to some serious negotiating."

He said the engineers will meet with the conciliation board in Ottawa Feb. 8. He added that the board, set up in Ottawa last October after six months of unproductive talks, is expected to submit a report by the middle of February.

"We are sticking to our original demands," Mr. Davis said.

"If we don't like the report, then we'll strike seven days later."

Operations were normal Thursday in the rest of the country.

Engineers for CP Rail were not involved. They belong to a different local of the union, but a spokesman for the brotherhood said the CP Rail employees will support any decisions made by the CNR engineers.

Fair Directors Want Snow Races

Directors of the Quinte Exhibition will re-submit a request to the Belleville Parks Board for permission to conduct snowmobile races at the city fairgrounds during February.

Fair president John R. Bush appeared before the parks board at its inaugural meeting last night with a request to hold races at the fair grounds on February 20-21 but the matter was tabled for further information about safety safeguards.

Today Mr. Bush said the fair board would renew its request.

"We have to know right away," said the fair board president.

In other business, the parks board recommended that the city manager be requested to investigate the purchase of a small tract of land south of the CPR tracks from Clarence S. Bird for use as bayfront parkland.

The property at the western city limits has an area of approximately one-third of an acre.

The board also voted to negotiate with Morley F. Smith for renewal for another year of its lease of the College Street building used as parks board headquarters.

No action was taken on a tender for the lease of canteen facilities at Zwick's Island Centennial Park, at the Alemite Field and at Exhibition Park.

The board voted to provide $200 in its 1971 budget to assist in the purchase of rock dust for the fairgrounds race track.

Alderman Paul Russell was renamed chairman of the parks board for another term with board member Robert Phillips as vice chairman.

Hilton Opposes Water Switchover

TRENTON (Staff) — New Public Utilities Commissioner Charles Hilton told yesterday's PUC meeting that they should think twice about participating with other regional municipalities in a water pipeline from Lake Ontario projected by the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Mr. Hilton contended that the Trent River is a satisfactory source of water for the town and that "the cost to the ratepayer would be twice as much" if Trenton were piping in water from Lake Ontario.

"I do not think water from Lake Ontario would be better anyway," he said, citing an article in the Globe and Mail January 15, 1971 that stated water in the lower Great Lakes is "harmful to the health and property" of both Canadians and Americans.

IN MEMORIAM

BENTLEY, Mr. Jewell — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away January 22nd, 1968.

Three years have passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
God took him home — it was His will,
Within our hearts he liveth still.

—Sadly missed by wife Clara, daughter Margaret and sons Tom and Harold.

VADER — In loving memory of our dear little daughter, Wanda Elizabeth who passed away January 22, 1965, age three months old.

In a quiet graveyard,
Where the gentle breezes blow,
Lies one we loved dearly,
We lost six years ago.

—Remembered by Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank my friends for flowers, cards and visits while a patient in Belleville General Hospital. A special thanks to Dr. Henry Bateman and Dr. Miles, nurses and all of the staff on 7th floor for their care.

Harold Thrasher.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to all my friends, relatives and neighbors who so thoughtfully sent cards, letters, gifts, while a patient in Belleville General Hospital. I would like to thank the Doctors and to all the nurses and staff who took care of me on 5th floor. Thanks to the Rev. Parson, Foxboro.

Annie Searles.

We wish to thank the Gilead Community for the lovely marble plaque which was placed in Gilead Community Hall for our giving of the land site in 1950 on which the hall was built. Our appreciation to the folks who came and for the pot-luck supper. Special mention to Mrs. Dorothy Howes for her effort in making it such an enjoyable time. We are proud of our building but much credit is due to the men who gave so much of their time and talents and worked faithfully to build it and to the ladies for catering to banquets, bazaars etc. to raise the money. We hope it will stand for many years as a symbol of unity in the community.

Wilfred and Olive Clare.

May I express a sincere thanks to my relatives and friends for their visits, flowers, cards and treats while I was a patient in Belleville General Hospital. A special thanks to nurses in the Extended Care Unit, to Dr. Peter Scott and Dr. Derry, also to Rev. Poulter and Rev. Sedgwick for their visits.

Mrs. Nelly Irwin.

Subdivision Agreement Stalled Again by PUC

TRENTON (Staff) — The town's subdivision agreement with Dufferin Developments was delayed again yesterday afternoon when the Public Utilities Commission refused to sign it.

J. D. Templeman, counsel for Dufferin Developments, told the commission during the meeting that the 1967 subdivision policy of the town provided that extension of services to new subdivisions be on the basis of 50 per cent being paid by the developer, 50 per cent by the town.

"If that was a legal document there have been many changes in it . . . I have two subdivision agreements over there (at the mayor's office that are different" Mayor Duncan McDonald, an ex officio PUC commissioner said.

An example of a revised subdivision agreement cited later by the mayor was one signed 17 July 1968 with Scaletta Realty.

Former mayor D. James MacDonald, now PUC chairman, took the position that "the original agreement was so tight, changes had to be made". He maintained, however, that in revised agreements the basics were the same.

"I was quite prepared to sign this today" Mayor McDonald said but stated that he had come to the conclusiin, in view of Mr. Templeman's statements, that the PUC needed legal advice before proceeding on the matter. Commissioners decided they were unprepared to sign with Dufferin.

At noon, town council was called into its second special meeting in a week to deal with the Dufferin agreement. Last Thursday councillor Ted Parker had called council into session because Mayor McDonald had refused to sign the subdividers' pact passed by council the previous Monday.

Councillor Parker, empowered to sign the agreement because of the mayor's refusal, told yesterday's special session that he had met with the principals of Dufferin to sign the agreement but found two matters demanded council's attention.

Rather than sign the pact with contentious points outstanding, he decided another special meeting of council should be called to resolve them.

Dufferin representatives told Councillor Parker that the charge to be levied by the town for engineering fees was exorbitant. By the agreement, a fee amounting to 3 per cent of the total engineering costs for the subdivision, about $6,000, would be paid to the town.

In the past, this charge has included benefits to the subdivider but now the fee goes largely to pay for supervision of the development by the town engineering department to insure that servicing installations are conducted properly. Dufferin feels the cost is high because the town is beneficary.

Town engineer Arthur Campbell recommended that the fee be reduced to 1½ per cent of engineering costs. Council accepted this.

The other matter dealt with by council yesterday was a cost sharing procedure for sewer installation along a 300 ft. portion of Tripp Boulevard, not in the draft plan of the subdivision.

Dufferin had been requested by the department of highways to alter the intersection of the street with Highway 2 near Trenton High School because it would have been hazardous as originally planned (meeting the highway at a right angle on a hilltop).

The subdivider met the DHO request by sweeping Tripp Boulevard 300 ft. to meet Highway 2 at a less dangerous angle. Council had to decide how services along this roadway would be paid for.

It was resolved that Dufferin pay for the services and on completion of the job, half the cost would be paid by the town. The town will recover the money from residents connecting into the sewer along Tripp Boulevard.

Mayor McDonald had suggested the developer pay 100 per cent of the service and that the town act as agent for the developer in recovering 50 per cent of the cost.

Children Injured

A boy is in Belleville General Hospital this morning after being struck by a car yesterday afternoon on West Bridge Street.

A mishap that sent Douglas Mitchell, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Mitchell of 164 Sidney Street, to hospital with a concussion was one of two similar incidents yesterday.

According to Deputy Chief Harold Reid of the Belleville City Police, a Belleville girl was also shaken up earlier in the afternoon when she was struck by a car.

Driver of the car which struck the Mitchell boy was Ralph Fleming, of RR5, Madoc, who was driving west on Bridge Street when the boy ran into the path of his car. The mishap occurred at 4:05 p.m.

Earlier yesterday, at 12:05, Donna Green, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Green of 48½ Bridge Street East, was struck by a car driven by John P. Hall of 32 Pine Street.

According to police, the girl was running north on William Street when she suddenly veered into the path of Mr. Hall's vehicle which was also travelling north.

She was shaken up in the incident.

Glenora Research Station To Assess Lamprey Killer

PICTON (Staff) — Glenora Fisheries Research Station biologist W. J. Christie said yesterday that he and co-workers will take part in assessing results of a program to chemically control lamprey eels in Lake Ontario.

Mr. Christie explained that chemical treatment of nearby waters by the department of forestry and fisheries is expected to begin in May. Staff members of the Glenora research station will monitor various species of fish over a period of several years in an effort to discover the effects of the chemical control program.

A chemical known by the abbreviated name TFM will be used in a drive to control the lamprey. It is a member of a class of compounds called fluorinated nitrophenol and one of approximately 1,000 compounds tested several years ago by the United States Commercial Fisheries Laboratory, Hammond Bay.

As a result of testing, Mr. Christie noted that "two ,or three" chemicals were found suitable for control of the lamprey eel. He described TFM as a selectively toxic chemical on the basis of concentration.

The biologist, suggested that three parts per million could be used to kill larval lamprey in a stream; the chemical could become toxic to fish if 15 parts per million were used. There must be careful monitoring for low density concentration.

Mr. Christie observed that 22 streams on the north shore of the lake will be chemically treated this spring. The stream among these nearest Prince Edward County is the salmon River. The Glenora Fisheries Research Station has a system for monitoring fish abundance which will be used in conjunction with information from commercial fishermen to measure program results.

Summer Job Problem Tackled

Would you like to have to find over a thousand dollars this summer before you could continue your job? Or maybe spend three months of the year when you could not be productive?

Co-ordinated by The United Community Services, a joint meeting was held amalgamating all the civic services to combat this annual problem and to find some form of solution.

Represented were members of the board of education, Canada Manpower, the Belleville Police Department, the Belleville Recreation Committee and the Social Services of Hastings County.

Understanding that there is no over-night solution, these people have set about the task of covering every area of the students' needs in the summer, and trying to come up with an answer.

James Staveley of Canada Manpower expressed his opinion that this summer, with current business trends, it would be necessary for students to canvass the retail, farm and tourist industries. As always it will be important that available positions will be given to "bread-winners" first and to students next.

The student centre at the Manpower station, as in the past, will be staffed with students and it will continue to operate this summer.

Mr. Staveley feels that even greater success will be found this summer with a more thorough list of the students requiring jobs.

In this light, with the help of Dave Smith of the Board of Education a full survey will be taken of all the schools in the area to decide what kind of figures the various organizations will have to be dealing with, when it comes to the point of handling these people.

Lorne Williams, representing the Recreation Centre, expressed his opinion that there will be numerous students unemployed by choice and that extended park services would be needed.

This could have a double effect, he commented.

When there is a need for more services there is also a need for more to serve, therefore resulting in more jobs for more people.

Various projects were considered in the hope that the future problem would not be extensive.

With the help of each of the separate organizations provision for employment and recreation are feasible.

Further meetings will be held to work out plans discussed yesterday.

Another Symbol Needed

New Department of Transport snowmobile symbols indicating where the power toboggans can or cannot be used, are okay where the answer is either yes or no.

But what do you use for a symbol where snowmobile use is permitted but subject to certain restrictions?

That is the question members of the city board of parks manogement would like answered.

The snowmobile symbols approved by the department of transport show the picture of a machine inside a circle. If the snow machines are barred from streets or parks a wide diagonal band across the snowmobile picture is added.

But under the city's new snowmobile bylaw certain parks allow restricted use of snowmobiles.

At yesterday's parks board meeting, members voted to ask the transport department what kind of a sign is applicable in such cases.

Ministers' Excuse Called 'Hogwash'

Cabinet solidarity as a reason for not being specific on policy issues in the Ontario Progressive Conservative Party leadership race was called "hogwash" on CBC television program last night by Dr. Richard Potter.

The Quinte MPP pondered if a "similar excuse" could be used by a party leader during a general election to duck issues the public would want answered.

The MPP's remarks — on the CBC's Weekday public affairs program — came as Quinte - area Conservative delegates to next month's leadership convention prepared to meet Saturday in Belleville with Education Minister William Davis.

Mr. Davis will talk to delegates tomorrow at the Sun Valley Motor Inn — following by a week a similar event staged by Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

All declared leadership candidates to date are cabinet ministers and the issue of cabinet solidarity has been given as a reason for not airing differences of policy opinions.

But, said Dr. Potter, the issue now is not the cabinet but the party leadership.

Any man who considers himself good enough to be leader and premier should be willing to outline his policies publicly.

Obviously, he would appoint cabinet ministers capable of carrying out such policies, and if confident of his own leadership, should have no problems getting support from the party caucus, Dr. Potter concluded.

County Milk Producers Upgrading Marketing

Milk production continues to be the major agricultural industry in Hastings county — but along with the times it is changing rapidly.

Hastings County agricultural representative Douglas Tipper, in a report to county council this week, said the trend is to fewer producers, but without any significant over-all drop in milk production.

The big difference, he said, was in the end use of milk production with each year seeing more producers taking advantage of the graduated entry plan to get into Group I pool and thus receive the highest possible return for their milk.

Mr. Tipper said that last year 42 additional producers entered the Group I pool.

Also last year, there were an additional 24 bulk shippers making the change from cans with a further group planning to make the change in 1971.

"This seems to be a normal step," Mr. Tipper's report read, "from can shipper to bulk shipper and finally to Group 1 pool.

The number of county dairymen qualifying for quality milk production certificates is on the increase. Mr. Tipper quoted Ross Miller, Milk Commission area field man, as reporting that in 1968 there were 40 certificates issued; in 1969 there were 57 with last year's total expected to be about 75.

But changes were also continuing on the manufacturing side.

With centralized payments and direction of milk by the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, the producer interest in a particular cheese factory or other plant has been served as far as being a patron is concerned.

"Cheese factories as such, then become individual business even though they may remain farmer - owned."

As such they have to be managed in such a way that allows them not only to survive but also to make progress.

This requirement, according to Mr. Tipper will result in further amalgamation of cheese plants.

He said the county could easily be down to eight cheese factories in 1971 from the 12 that operated last year.

However, with minor capital cost adjustments the actual production should not change materially.

Turning to field crops, the agricultural representative said the growing of grain corn and barley has continued to show a gratifying increase. There was no doubt of the county's ability to increase production of these grains but orderly marketing could be a stumbling block. Ontario still imports large quantities of grain corn and Mr. Tipper suggested this should be the marketing target at which to shoot.

Junior Farmers Elect Executive

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County junior farmers have elected their executive for 1971. Provincial director is Daryl Osterhout, past president, Ronald Ruston, president Denis Gale and vice-president Joyce Wood. News editor is Dixie Motley and secretary Brian Montgomery. Senior Citizens Can Fish Free

Senior citizens of Hastings county will be entitled to free fishing licences under new department of lands and forests legislation.

Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings, told county councillors yesterday that the free angling licences are available to all male residents 65 years of age and over.

Licences may be obtained at any department of lands and forests office upon personal application and proof of age. Papers suitable as proof of age include birth certificate, baptismal certificate, military discharge papers, insurance records, pension and superannuation records or cheques, naturalization papers and court orders specifying date of birth and passports.

In the Tweed Lands and Forests district the free licences may be obtained at Tweed, Bancroft, Dacre, Plevna, Palmer Rapids, White Lake, Napanee or Kingston.

Indians Meet

A reading of the deliberations of the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians which met on the Tyendinaga Reserve last week confirms that relations between the Indian population and the government are no better than ever.

The association, which includes the Mohawk band at Tyendinaga, fears that the government may be planning to give effect to proposals in its controversial White Paper on Indian Affairs without waiting for alternative policies from the Indians themselves.

George Manuel, National Indian Brotherhood president, complains that white governments have had 400 years of policy-making experience in Canada, while the Indians have had a "measly two years." We are sure the irony of this will not be lost either on the Indians or on Ottawa's "dreaming, paternalistic civil servants," to quote Mr. Manuel. For have not the Indians been on this continent for ages past, and long, long before the coming of the white man?

But we know that temperamentally and ideologically the white man and the Indian are poles apart. Indian society traditionally has been close to nature, the land, and family solidarity. And while the white man seeks to preserve family life too, he is also materialist which the Indian is not.

Whatever the differences, however, the interests of better understanding between Indians and whites, as well as between Indian spokesmen and Ottawa will not be served by the kind of hard line talk heard at Tyendinaga.

We agree with Mr. Manuel that closer relationships between Indian groups are vital, to help develop confidence and cohesion. We agree also with Chief Hill of the Mohawks in this area that the Indians need more time to evolve alternatives. Both solidarity and the alternatives, however, should not be allowed to die on the vine. Indians and the government people in Ottawa should hammer this thing out once and for all, and preferably in a less hostile atmosphere than appeared evident from the Tyendinaga deliberations. The Indians, for their part, need strong leadership and unity of purpose if they are to obtain the objectives which they feel will best serve their people in this day and age.

The Political Art

In the current Conservative leadership race in Ontario it is plain to see that candidates are looking over their shoulders, not only at each other but at the spectre of inroads being made by the other parties amid talk of political change.

In Belleville last week we had Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, one of those bidding to succeed Premier Robarts, saying: "If the Conservative party does not anticipate and respond to . . . issues then someone else is going to do it for us."

The minister followed this up with: "And I don't particularly relish the thought . . . of having the response, or the reaction to that kind of an issue made by a government headed by (NDP leader) Stephen Lewis."

Now that reminds us of a comment by the late President Kennedy, following his narrow victory over (now the president) Richard Nixon. In the pre-election television debate Mr. Nixon conceded at one point that he agreed with his opponent on some matter (just what it was we do not recall), which prompted Mr. Kennedy to remark later that you should not give your opponent an advantage to which he is not entitled — as Nixon had done.

But if Mr. McKeough is seeing socialist shadows in the wings, the NDP has its worries too — over the federal party's over-reaction to the War Measures Act for instance. This drew from Stephen Lewis, who is the NDP's provincial leader, the comment recently that while it might swing some votes to Robert Nixon's Liberals he felt his provincial party could stand on its own feet and not be unduly affected by the federal party's line.

Be that as it may, we think candidates and rival party members all have a lesson to learn in the subtleties of politics, along the lines of what the late Mr. Kennedy had to say.

Readers are reminded once again that pseudonyms, or pen names, on letters in themselves do not constitute sufficient identification .While pseudonyms may be used for publicaton purposes, letters must also bear the handwritten signature and address of the sender. In this regard, the writer of a letter on the subject of separate school education is asked to identify himself.

Commonwealth Still Together

Study Group Temporarily Defuses Arms Issue

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hopes for cooling off the torrid Commonwealth dispute about possible sale of British arms to South Africa are riding on a new eight-country committee appointed to study the security of the south Atlantic and Indian oceans.

The need for protection against the alleged threat of growing Soviet naval power in the two maritime areas is a prime argument used by the British government to justify its case for selling arms to the South African Navy despite South Africa's apartheid policies.

But at the Singapore conference of Commonwealth leaders the contention did nothing to lessen the opposition of militant black African governments towards the projected arms sale.

"Appointing a committee" is a classic way out of seemingly impossible political dilemmas.

The study group set up at Singapore, which includes Canada, is to report its findings as soon as possible. British Prime Minister Heath is said to feel that it would be reasonable to expect this to happen within six months.

On all sides, caution is being loudly expressed about the new committee's significance.

Asked whether it is supposed to be a face-saver for the antagonists in the arms controversy, Prime Minister Trudeau replied in the negative.

For his part, Heath insisted that Britain does not consider itself bound to defer a decision on the arms sales until the new group files its report.

The militant Africans say they don't consider the committee's formation a significant concession by the British.

Yet all this apparent downgrading of the committee's importance may itself prove a useful preparation for its work, in that no effort is being made to raise hopes about it to dramatic heights.

Much depends on the calibre of the officials the member countries choose to represent them on the committee.

The member states themselves are a mixture of African, Asian and white Commonwealth nations.

But an important fact about this choice is that Zambia, Uganda and Tanzania—the three African countries most vocal in the anti-arms cause—are not represented in the study group.

Britain is on the committee, however and so are some prominent champions of conciliation in the dispute, notably Nigeria as well as Canada.

The conciliation efforts have been aimed primarily at preventing the arms dispute from ripping the Commonwealth to pieces.

From the outset, this has been the main concern of that expert peacemaker from Canada, Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith.

Whatever the reservations expressed about the study committee, its establishment does appear to, have averted—at least for the time being—angry walkouts from the Commonwealth by the black African states most directly involved in the arms argument.

Teens Complain of Rude Service in Restaurants

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

We are teenagers. Maybe that is why we are not treated as humans, deserving of the courtesy that every adult receives. To the restaurants of Belleville it seems we are considered second-class citizens. The only restaurant that treats us with any courtesy is the one at the Plaza.

One incident was at a downtown restaurant. We had not been in there for more than 15 minutes when a waitress demanded our table for some adults. Besides this we had been treated as dogs coming in for the bones. Even so, we left without a complaint. While getting our money out to pay, the waitress screamed at us to hurry. We have asked ourselves if a adult would be treated in this manner but find it hard to believe this could be true.

This is not the first time this has happened to us. It seems that every time we go into a restaurant we have to put up with rude waitresses, poor service and lack of courtesy. We pay just like adults and should receive the same treatment. We must admit we are more than a little fed-up. We have overheard other teenagers complaining about the same thing, but maybe they did not do anything about it.

Temporary Lay-off Scheme

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to propose a new concept regarding Unemployment and Unemployment Insurance: when lay-offs are necessary, rather than laying off the newest personnel, grant senior personnel one day off per week with full pay through the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Naturally such an arrangement would not be a cure-all, especially in localities of chronic unemployment, but in fields where slow periods and rush periods occur such an arrangement would give employers a reservoir of trained personnel for peak periods and spare many employees the worry and hardships of lay-offs.

"I've waited nigh upon six years for this day, and it was well worth coming 3,500 miles for". With those words, Lord Tweedsmuir renewed acquaintances with members of the Regiment, a unit he commanded in Sicily during 1943. The tall, thin almost gaunt peer spent his time in Belleville at the Armories and at a dinner at the Queen's Hotel. After the dinner, Lord Tweedsmuir was given a golden key to the city by Mayor Potter. In accepting it the former commander said, "I shall always remember Belleville for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and I thank you, Mr. Mayor, for this remembrance".

The decision to cancel the regular enrolment of cadets at Royal Military College until after the war will suspend temporarily one of Canada's traditional educational institutions. A first step in the establishment of the RMC was an act passed in 1874, authorizing a military college "in one of the garrison towns of Upper Canada". In the first flurry of public disfavor after RMC was opened, reports were circulated that cadets had personal servants, expensive food, luxurious quarters. Records proved that the facts were much different. Cadets in those early days, as now, were on strict allowances, drill and study hours. They had to clean their own quarters, make their own beds.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Jan. 22, 1971 . . .

Russian troops fired on a peaceful march of workmen in St. Petersburg 66 years ago today—in 1905—and killed about 1,000. It was "Bloody Sunday" and the beginning of a revolution, fanned by news of the disastrous war with Japan. Czar Nicholas II considered abdication but peace was signed Sept. 5 of the same year and the revolution was put off by granting a parliament and ordering a series of police raids. It was during these months that the Russian political parties of 1917 were established.

1955—Hundreds of French towns and villages were inundated by floods resulting from warm weather that melted mountain snow.

1949—The Chinese Nationalists surrendered Peking to the Communists.

1942—Japanese troops landed in New Guinea and the Solomon Islands in the Second World War.

Unemployment Requires Action

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Canada is recognized as the world's fourth most affluent nation. Across the country thousands of welfare recipients and 538,000 unemployed must be wondering where all the affluence is.

Political platitudes ranging from Manpower Minister Otto Lang's "unemployment has turned the corner" to Robert Stanfield's "I am shocked", flood the news media every day. But these outpourings provide cold comfort to Canada's growing army of unfortunates.

Trudeau's turtle riding, and Stanfield's cross-Canada caper to "find out about unemployment" offer no solution and only anger those faced with the pressing necessity of providing for their families.

It is time government and opposition alike stopped playing politics and got down to doing something now. Every day lost only increases the frustration and despair. Eventually the breaking point will be reached and the violence that Mitchell Sharp so superciliously says cannot happen will be upon us.

Surely the lesson of Quebec must have been learned by some of our politicians. When people living in the midst of plenty are forced to endure a mere existence they are apt to go into the streets to find the just society.

Men and women today are better educated, more concerned and less tolerant than their fathers and mothers who languished through the Great Depression. Starving people are not likely to care very much whether or not "this type of talk might discourage investors." Such naive clap-trap belongs in the Victorian era.

The just society is the right and heritage of all Canadians regardless of color, creed, ethnic background, or social status. It is a national disgrace that so many Canadians are not getting a fair share of the wealth of this great country. When people complain of this injustice they are not communists, radicals or misfits — they are merely recognizing a fact.

No country can aspire to greatness with a political system supported by slush funds of corporate and business interests. Democracy is a government of the people, by the people, for the people — not of the wealthy, by the wealthy, for the wealthy.

The wealth of any country lies in its people. Canada is no different in this respect. Our unemployed do not want dole money — they want a job. Society's misfits and unfortunates don't want welfare — they want security and respect. Everybody is entitled to live with dignity and pride. If our leaders fail to recognize this and act accordingly, they must be prepared to accept full responsibility for the consequences.

Uncertainty Over Agnew's Future

Democrats' McGovern First to Enter 1972 Presidential

WASHINGTON (CP) — The national frenzy known as the presidential election campaign has already begun. Senator George McGovern's announcement Monday that he will seek the Democratic nomination for 1972 came only days after the Republicans started setting their battle lines in order.

Undaunted by indications of public chagrin and boredom at the increasingly early start to such campaigns, both parties are seemingly moving toward a day when a new campaign starts officially the day after a presidential inauguration.

The announcement by McGovern, a liberal from South Dakota, had been a foregone conclusion for weeks, with only the timing in doubt. An unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1968, he is the first to step officially on to the platform for elections which are still nearly two years away.

He has a lot of running to do to catch up with another Democrat who still hasn't announced his intentions, Senator Edmund S. Muskie of Maine.

Just back from a well-publicized visit to the Middle East, the Soviet Union and Western Europe, Muskie has been campaigning unofficially for a year, building on the national reputation he gained as Democratic vice-presidential candidate in 1968. He already has a formidable campaign staff organized and is awaiting a politically opportune moment to announce his presidential candidacy.

The list of other "possibles" for the Democratic nomination stretches endlessly behind Muskie and McGovern.

Among the Republicans, President Nixon has started his own campaign for re-election by shuffling his support organization.

Political observers here have detected a slight shift to the left in the Nixon image in recent weeks, with the emphasis on welfare programs, a moderate approach to America's youth and intervention in the economy.

But the new look of the Republican party brass is anything but leftist.

The Republican national committee endorsed Nixon's choice for party chairman, Senator Robert J. Dole of Kansas, despite what many senators considered to be Dole's excessively conservative outlook and abrasive and ambitious personality.

Backing up Dole in the campaign preparations will be Murray Chotiner, who is expected to move shortly from his White House office into a more neutral corner of Washington to guide the Nixon political effort. Chotiner, a 60-year-old lawyer, has managed Nixon's campaigns since 1948—and has just been described by his former wife as a "hatchet man" for the president.

There has been so far little discussion here of what Vice-President Spiro Agnew's role would be in 1972. Attorney-General John Mitchell now is seen as Nixon's closest cabinet adviser on politics, which could represent a shift from the controversy Agnew generated last fall.

Chotiner's move away from the president's side is being viewed in Washington as a fulfilment of the president's intention, outlined in his recent televised interview, to be a national rather than a partisan leader for the U.S.

For the 1972 campaign, already well in motion, the president apparently is determined to seem to be a moderate and above politics. But the Republican campaign itself will likely be as partisan—and conservative—as could be expected under the management of Dole and Chotiner.

Nearly Half of Waters Tested Have Some Contaminated Fish

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario lands and forests department list published Thursday showed all fish tested for mercury content in 118 of 208 bodies of water were safe for human consumption.

Of the remaining bodies of water tested, 65 had some species of fish containing mercury levels dangerous to humans and all species in 25 contained dangerous mercury levels.

First fish tested in 1970 were in areas where mercury levels were believed to be high as a result of industrial activity. The tests resulted in commercial fishing bans in some waters, including Lake St. Clair, the St. Clair River, parts of lakes Erie and Huron, the St. Lawrence River, part of the Ottawa River and sections of the Wabigoon and English river systems in Northwestern Ontario.

The report issued Thursday clears Lake Nipissing, one of Ontario's major game-fish waters. Mercury is present, but in no popular species does the level reach the danger point. The 0.5 parts per million of mercury is exceeded only in gar pike and white bass.

In Lake Simcoe, all popular winter-fishing species were found safe for consumption, but mercury levels exceed 0.5 parts in pickerel, smallmouth bass, channel catfish and bowfin.

Mercury at dangerous levels has been identified in fish taken from lakes where there is no possibility of industrial pollution, the report says. These lakes, many of them in the northwest, have been contaminated from natural sources of mercury.

Major points made in the report, by districts:

Lake Huron: Only in the southern section does contamination exceed danger levels in popular game fish- pickerel in particular. There is dangerous contamination of turbot in the St. Mary's River and Georgian Bay. All other species are safe.

Lake St. Clair system: Commercial fishing is prohibited in all but the Thames River, although mercury levels in coho salmon in the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair are below 0.5 ppm. In the Thames, dangerous contamination exists in pickerel, catfish and carp.

Lake Erie: Commercial fishing for pickerel and white bass is prohibited in the western basis above Point Pelee, where dangerous contamination also exists in smallmouth, white and rock bass, suckers and catfish. Mercury levels exceed the danger level in pickerel in the central and eastern basin.

Niagara River: Coho salmon have dangerous mercury levels. Other species are safe.

Lake Ontario: Dangerous mercury levels exist in all sections of the lake in some popular game fish. They affect white bass in the western basin, pike, bass and eel in the eastern basin, pickerel, pike and rock bass in the Bay of Quinte and pickerel in the lake generally.

St. Lawrence: Mercury levels above 0.5 ppm exist from Lake Ontario to the Quebec border in pickerel, pike, smallmouth bass, largemouth bass, rock bass, yellow perch and eels.

Ottawa River: Commercial fishing is prohibited in the river below Ottawa, where almost all species contain dangerous mercury levels. Only in Lake Temiskaming is there no danger from mercury in any species. In the Rideau River, pickerel, smallmouth bass and largemouth bass are contaminated, and in the Ottawa River above Ottawa mercury levels in whitefish are dangerous.

Health Chief Named

OTTAWA (CP) — The new post of senior assistant deputy minister of health has been created in top-level organizational changes within the national health and welfare department. Dr. Peter M. Bird will be responsible for the four health branches of the department.

Voluntary Fingerprinting For All Suggested

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Every Canadian should have access to voluntary figerprinting facilities as an aid to identification in cases of mass disaster, says a coroner's jury which investigated a July 5 crash of an Air Canada jetliner.

Twenty of the bodies of the 109 aboard were never identified.

But the jury, reporting its findings Thursday at the conclusion of an inquest conducted by Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner, rejected his suggestion that all such fingerprinting should be compulsory.

The jury had been told by Dr. Cotnam not to consider the cause of the crash of Air Canada's Flight 621, which was bound from Montreal to Los Angeles with a stop at Toronto.

A report on the cause of the crash five miles north of Toronto International Airport, aimed at preventing similar accidents, is expected later this month or early in February.

Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Exchequer Court of Caada is preparing his findings on the federal inquiry he conducted here last month.

The inquest jury, in its conclusions Thursday, recommended.

—That all victims of multi-death air disasters be given a single, mass burial instead of individual burials for remains that can be identified.

—All police agencies should "provide facilities to enable any citizen to obtain a set of his own fingerprints."

—The set should be retained by the citizen and no copy should be made by the authorities.

—A educational program should be started immediately to promote public acceptance of the necessity and value of such records.

—Dentists should provide records of their patients to a central agency—such as the National Society of Forensic Odontology—for identification purposes in event of a crash.

—All airline employees should be required to have their fingerprints and dental records on file with their employers.

In his summation to the jury Dr. Cotnam said: "Only criminals would mind having their fingerprints on file." He said with combined fingerprints and dental records "you would get almost a perfect record of identification."

Dying Senator's Vote Ousted Kennedy

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — Senator Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia conservative who admits he once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, won the proxy vote of a dying congressional leader and deposed Edward M. Kennedy as Democratic whip in the United States Senate.

In a day of drama and surprise at the opening of the 92nd Congress, Senate Democrats Thursday gave a more conservative cast to their party's leadership—and dealt a setback to whatever prospect remained that Kennedy might emerge a contender for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination.

The crucial vote was that of the dying Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, cast by proxy. Without it, Byrd said, he never would have run.

Byrd had word from Russell's staff Monday that the proxy vote of the Georgia senator would be cast for him.

"I made up my mind, if he were living I'd run," Byrd said. "If Senator Russell had not been living, I would not have run."

The speeches nominating Kennedy for whip already had begun when Byrd slipped from the caucus room and checked on Russell, who was still alive.

Byrd walked back into the room and challenged Kennedy.

Within four hours, Russell, who had been re-elected president pro-tempore of the Senate at the same caucus, was dead.

When Grocery War Is Over Only Giants May Be Alive

TORONTO (CP) — A grocery price war in Ontario and some other parts of the country has put the independent operators in an economic vice.

Some people are concerned that consumers may look over the battleground at the end and find only giant companies left with power to arbitrarily set prices.

The latest sales statistics show that chain operations are gaining and the so-called "mom and pop stores" are the biggest losers.

Mrs. W. A. Brechin of the Consumers Association of Canada says she does not believe present legislation could prevent price-fixing by large companies if most competition is squeezed out.

Leon Weinstein, director of consumer affairs for Loblaw Companies Ltd., suggests government protection for the small operator is needed.

"He has a place in our economy. If we don't wake up, it's going to be all over."

Mrs. Brechin says that if only four supermarket chains are left after the price war "there no longer exists any price competition."

The price war began last November when Dominion Stores Ltd. announced it was closing stores for one day to discount prices. The move was a reaction to the "miracle pricing" program begun two years ago by Steinberg's Ltd. The major price war areas are the larger cities of Ontario, Montreal and Halifax.

Members of consumer associations say some prices are beginning to come back up but prices of many "leader" items are still below pre-November levels.

Many industry observers believe the fight between the major companies for a bigger share of the market will be a long one. A long price war will force many independents into a financial corner.

The chain stores' share of the market is an elusive figure but it seems safe to estimate that it is between a third and a half.

The latest annual figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics are for 1968, when total grocery-store sales in Canada were $5,986 million.

Chain-store sales amounted to $2,813 million, or 47 per cent of the total. DBS defines a chain store as a group of more than four.

There were about 2,500 stores in chain operations and seven groups operated about 1,700 of those. The seven were: Dominion; Steinberg's; Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd.; The Great A and P Tea Co.; Canada Safeway Ltd.; Mac's Milk Ltd., and The Becker Milk Co. Ltd. These are the Canadian chains with 100 or more stores.

The DBS sales total for the seven chains is $2,040 million, or 34 per cent of total grocery store sales in 1968.

However, the DBS total for the seven does not show sales by all grocery stores owned by some of the big companies.

For example only stores with the Loblaw name are included. Loblaw Groceterias Co. Ltd. is a subsidiary of Loblaw Companies Ltd., which is a subsidiary of George Weston Ltd.

Power and Busy B supermarkets are owned by the Loblaw group but not counted by DBS as part of the Loblaw chain.

An unpublished study by DBS provides an insight into the economics of the grocery business.

Total sales for all stores increased by 5.3 per cent during 1968, compared with the previous year. Chain store sales were up 7.5 per cent and sales by the independents were up 3.1 per cent.

DBS separated sales by independents into two groups--affiliated independents and non-affiliated independents.

An example of an affiliated independent would be IGA stores, which are locally owned but connected with Oshawa Wholesale Ltd. This connection gives them price advantages from central purchasing and warehousing and other benefits available to chain operations.

The non-affiliated independents include the "mom and pop stores."

Sales of affiliated independents were up 14.1 per cent comparing 1968 with 1967 while the sales of the non-affiliated independents were down 7.8 per cent.

Ray D. Wolfe, president of Oshawa Wholesale, was asked if the company would help an IGA store in financial trouble because of the price war.

"We've always supported our franchises—in good times and bad."

Mr. Wolfe said IGA stores were hurt at the start of the price war.

"Business is slowly but surely coming back," he said. "There will be some tightening of profits."

Arnold Rands, general manager of the Canadian Federation of Retail Grocers, said independently owned supermarkets were forced to make price cuts. The federation represents about 150 independent operators in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

He said independents were able to maintain sales levels.

"Profitwise, of course—well, there isn't any. The profit squeeze is bad."

Mrs. Brechin, director of the consumer association's national research committee, says she believes the consumer will lose in the long run.

"The fact that some prices are much lower now is great for some consumers, if they can stock up," she said. However, many cannot stock up, particularly those who live in apartments and those with low incomes.

Mr. Weinstein says the small stores should be allowed to sell beer and hours of operation of supermarkets should be restricted.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Police Use 'Loopholes'

As Luther famously said, it makes a lot of difference whose ox is gored. The great complaint of police departments everywhere is number of 'legal loopholes" through which suspects and defendants elude criminal justice. The police want these loopholes to be sealed up.

Except for themselves, of course. Last month, two deputy inspectors and three captains of the New York Police Department filed suit in court to prevent a special commission investigating alleged police corruption from questioning them about their personal finances.

In their joint suit (all the men, by the way, are assigned to the same midtown command), filed in the State Supreme Court, the five officers insist that to answer these financial questionnaires would "constitute an attempt to coerce and waive their rights against self - incrimination."

How do you like them apples? Now, please understand me. These officers have a perfect legal right to do what they are doing; indeed, they have an obligation to protest against any action that would coerce them into waiving their rights against self-incrimination. But this is precisely what police object to when suspects and defendants petition the courts for relief of this sort.

When the shoe is suddenly on the other foot, and the cops themselves are facing investigation on charges of corruption, they flee for shelter under the same protective judicial wing.

Their attitude toward suspects is "If you've got nothing to hide, why won't you answer our questions freely?" But if the two deputy inspectors and three captains have nothing to hide, why won't they disclose the state of their personal finances to the special commission?

They won't because they might incriminate themselves if they did. And no man, under U.S. law, should be forced to incriminate himself; he should be given every opportunity to get legal help before he utters a word, and no coercion should be exercised to wring a "confession" from him.

What most police officers seem to want, however, is the privilege of coercing suspects as strongly as possible, while reserving for themselves the sanctuary of the liberalizing decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court. But you can't have it both ways — when a cop becomes a suspect, either he should be entitled to the full protection of the courts, or he should be roughed up and treated as the cops treat other suspects.

Presbytery WMS Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies of the Kingston Presbytery was held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Trenton recently, based on the theme "Are You Getting the Word Around".

For the morning session with the president, Mrs. G. H. Lyons of Kingston presiding, the worship service was conducted by members of St. Columba Church, Belleville.

Guests were welcomed to the sessions by the president of Trenton WMS Mrs. Jackson after which was a short business period. A New Year's message from the Synodical president, Mrs. McFarlane was read and Mrs. M. M. Hackett of Belleville gave details of the planned Synodical meeting to be held in Belleville in April. Mrs. V. Weir reported that articles had been received for the Second Mile Project. Treasurer, Mrs. W. H .L. Smith handed out the financial statement which was discussed at some length with members urged to work harder to meet the needs of the WMS.

At noon hour a tasty meal was served by the Trenton group.

During the afternoon session, Mrs. Breatch, literature secretary displayed a number of books with members given the opportunity to purchase these. A service of remembrance was conducted by the Picton W.M.S. and Miss L. Button of Trenton contributed a solo.

Two announcements were given which dealt with the spring rally to be he'd in Picton on May 19 and of the congress to be held in June at the University of Guelph.

Mrs. D. Taylor introduced the guest speaker Mrs. R. Keefer who spoke on the topic "A Step Forward". She told of the work of the re-assessment committee which had been formed to endeavor to integrate more closely the work of the various church groups and the Board of Missions of the church. She explained that these two units appear to carry on the same type of work and unnecessary time and work are on the same thing and stated that this change should be challenging and exciting and would involve a great deal of work thought and prayer. All groups she felt should be reassessed.

The report of the nominating committee was given by Mrs. K. Hood and the following officers were installed by Rev. D. Wilson of Trenton: honorary president, Miss F. Matthews; president, Mrs. G. Williamson; 1st vice-president, Mrs. S. Cross; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. N. Allison; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. D. Taylor; recording secretary, Mrs. T. B. Sheffield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. J. McLaren, and treasurer, Mrs. J. Craig Committee chairmen were also appointed.

Cookies and coffee were served by the Trenton branch.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH PARISH GUILD

Christ Church Parish Guild held its first meeting of the new year with Mrs. K. Lazier presiding. Secretary Mrs. M. McComb read the minutes and correspondence from sick and shut-in members, who also gave the annual report. Other reports were given by acting treasurer Mrs. H. Cousins, for cent - a - meal, Mrs. M. Boyd and by Mrs. E. Vesterveldt for kitchen.

Mrs. E. Green conducted a short devotional.

Previous to the installation of officers by Canon R. B. Wright, Mrs. Lazier expressed thanks to all for their co-operation during the past two years. Officers include: honorary president, Mrs. R. B. Wright; president, Mrs. R. Godden; secretary, Mrs. J. Wright, and treasurer, Mrs. E. Vesterveldt.

On behalf of the members, Mrs. L. Jordan expressed thanks to the retiring president as well as the other officers and pianist Mrs. L. Adams.

The incoming president Mrs. Godden spoke briefly and a discussion followed dealing with the spring tea and a date will be set for this event at a later date.

Mrs. K. Varley and Mrs. E. Green were hostesses for the afternoon.

MESSENGER GROUP

RAWDON — The Mount Pleasant Messengers Group convened in the church hall under the direction of the leaders Mrs. Raymond McConnell and Mrs. Stanley Williams. They gave the meditation and were in charge of the two study books for juniors and primary classes.

Margaret Hoard presided and the worship was given by Isobel Hoard, John Knapton, Greg Joslin and Rich Knapton. Donnie Hubel acted as secretary.

During the program, piano solos were given by Heather Hoard and Margaret Hoard and selections were read by Kim Graff and Linda Hoard.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Martin of Corbyville announce the engagement of their only daughter Linda Jean to Glen Dorland Carson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carson of Holloway. The marriage will take place on Saturday, February 20 at 2 p.m. in St. Mark's United Church, Cannifton.

• • •

Prior to her wedding, Mrs. Robert Glancey (nee Patricia Hainstock) was honored at a 'Jack and Jill' shower held by Miss Brenda McCorkle of Bramalea at the home of the bridegroom's parents. A miscellaneous shower was given by her co-workers at Erie Technological products in Trenton. An "open house" was held in honor of the newly married couple when they returned from British Columbia by the parents of the bridegroom.

Club Activities

SENIOR CITIZENS NO. 343

The first meeting of the new year for the Cannifton-Corbyville Senior Citizens Club was held in St. Mark's Church hall at Cannifton on Wednesday afternoon.

President Mrs. Edna Andrews welcomed the gathering which included the minister of the church Rev. J. A. Morrison and Mrs. Morrison. Two new members were also welcomed.

For the business portion Mrs. Elsie Brenton read the minutes as well as giving the financial report. It was also reported that a member Mrs. Bessie Pound had returned home from hospital.

A program followed when readings were given by Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Percy Akey and Mrs. Dora Martin. A vocal duet was rendered by Mrs. Clair and Mrs. Swan. Everyone joined in a singsong at the conclusion.

A potluck dinner and quilting is planned for the next meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Jessie Howard, Mrs. D. Hudgins and Mrs. H. Farnham.

HASTINGS MANOR AUXILIARY

It was announced that a wheel chair with collapsible sides will be purchased for the use of the invalids at the Manor during the January meeting of the Manor Auxiliary held in the library. Bingo will be held on January 27 and a gift of fruit will be presented to each resident on a film night.

Earlier, it was reported that many volunteers helped with the coffee and tuck shop which had a very profitable year. Eleven film nights and nine bingo nights were held. Many prizes were donated by members and organizations. A number of rose bowls were sent to residents who were patients in Belleville General Hospital. A number of annual reports were read.

The meeting was closed with prayer for the new year. All joined the Manor residents with birthdays in January in the dining room where Happy Birthday was sung. Pictures were taken of the three oldest present — Mrs. Ethel Lee, 84, Mrs. Bertha Weese, 84 and Frank Aikens 85. Tea was poured by Mrs. Stenson and Mrs. J. Juby.

Legion News

BRANCH 99 L.A.

The first meeting of the new year of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Branch 99 was held in the Legion Hall on Jan. 19 with Comrade Edna Semark presiding.

The 1970 report showed a successful year. There were 15 banquets catered to during the year and a number of members and veterans looked after by the sick committee with cards, flowers, fruit and smokes. Two rummage sales were held during the year, also euchre held every Thursday afternoon in the Legion Hall. There were applications for membership and three transfers during the year along with two dances held. Comrade Dorothy Rashotte, Zone Commander paid the branch a visit and gave some news of the meetings.

One new member was initiated into the branch, Mrs. Mary Alice Clare and one new application for membership received.

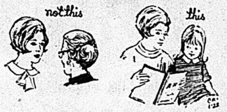
A Valentine dance will be held on Feb. 12 in the Legion Hall and a zone sports tournament is to be held Feb. 6 at Deseronto. Bus leaves the Legion Hall at 12 noon sharp for bowlers and euchre players.

The first zone sports day was held in Marmora on Jan. 16 and the three top teams were, Marmora, Deseronto and Belleville in bowling, and Belleville in euchre.

The meeting was closed by Comrade Edna Semark and refreshments were served by the lunch committee. The next general meeting will be held Feb. 16.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "I used to read a story to Jennie every night, but I refuse to read to her now. I want her to learn to enjoy reading books and she won't try if I keep on reading to her all the time."

Read to your child, even if she is old enough to read herself. Reading aloud is a companionable activity and even adults enjoy the opportunity for relaxing as they listen to a story.

Beginning readers often have to concentrate on the mechanics of reading and may not enjoy the thread of the story as much as if they merely listen while someone else reads aloud.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT GLANCEY

Glancey — Hainstock

Patricia Ann Hainstock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Hainstock of North Delta, British Columbia recently became the bride of Robert Patrick Glancey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Glancey of Belleville. Father J. Franks officiated at the ceremony held in the church of the Immaculate Conception at North Delta, B.C. Organ music was played by Sister Verna.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was in a white embossed satin gown with three quarter length sleeves and a boat neckline trimmed with satin. The train fell from the neckline and the shoulder-length tulle veil was held in place by a white satin rose on a lace band. She carried a white Bible crested with a deep purple orchid and white stephanotis.

Miss Sherry Lynn Ferguson as maid of honor was dressed in a pink satin empire style gown with long nylon net sleeves ending in pink satin cuffs. The bodice, hemline and collar were trimmed with lace. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations and heather.

The best man was John Ferguson while the ushers were William Hainstock, the bride's brother and Dan Ferguson.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at Fernwood Acres, Surrey, B.C. Guests were greeted by the bride's mother who was in a mauve crimplene gown with embroidered lace sleeves. Black patent leather accessories, a mauve net hat and gloves and a corsage of deep pink roses added the finishing touch to her costume.

The bride's going - away outfit consisted of a mint green A-line crimplene dress with black patent leather accessories and a corsage of white roses. The newly married couple took up residence in Belleville when they returned from their wedding trip.

Congregational Meeting

VICTORIA AVENUE BAPTIST

The annual meeting of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was held on Wednesday evening, January 20, folowing a buffet supper provided by the women of the church with Mrs. F. Travis as convener.

The meeting was led by the pastor, Rev. J. Arthur Sheil, who based his opening remarks on the advice given by the apostle Paul to the Colossians: "You are the people of God; He loved you and chose you for His own."

Before the business meeting, tribute was paid to Tom Stovell for his ten years of faithful service as superintendent of the Sunday School, and a presentation was made on behalf of his co-workers through the years.

Annual reports presented by the various officers of the church were discussed and adopted.

There are 320 members on the church roll. Total receipts during the year were about $28,500 and of this approximately $7400 was donated to missions and benevolence funds. The 1970 budget had been met and exceeded.

Highlights of the year included: the ordination of Wayne Soble; the combining of the three former Mission Circles and the Dorcas Association into one organization — the Baptist Women; a mid-week study program led by the pastor; camping at Easter by the B.H.F. group along with members from the Senior High Bible Class; the forming of a Young Couples' Group; anniversary services with Dr. M. C. Johnston as guest minister.

The following officers for 1971 were elected as follows, elected: deacons, to retire 1971 R. Burr, T. Stovell, O. Webber; deacons to retire 1972 W. Dempsey, E. Naylor, M. Robson; deacons to retire 1973 H. Hall, W. Soble, E. Stairs and deacons to retire 1974 D. Burn, B. Girling, W. Hales; deaconesses, Mesdames L. Bird, N. Fitzgerald, R. McPherson, W. Neal, A. Orr, E. Quirk, F. Travis, A. Wynne, Miss M. Cook; clerk, Mrs. W. Hales; assistant clerk, Mrs. M. Robson; treasurer, R. Orr; financial secretary, B. Girling; envelope stewards, Mrs. A. Gazley, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lush, Mr. and Mrs. T. Stovell, Mrs. H. Thompson and Miss J. Thompson; finance committee M. Lush, A. Wynne and D. Roddon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Thompson; house committee, M. Robson, C. Stevens and auditors Mrs. G. Pearson and E. Burn.

Various committee members were also appointed.

Successful Living

'Don't Just Sit There; Start Something'

By MARY MOORE

Dear Doris: Thank you for passing the reader's message on to me. I just love to collect quilt patterns and will write to her.

I always wished I could draw. Away back when I was going to school I envied the artistic ones. I can spend three nights a week with my quilt patterns, just looking them over; and isn't that really something better than staring at TV? — Stuck At Home.

Dear Stuck: It would be better still to do more than just gaze at them. Maybe you can't draw, but that doesn't say you can't create a quilt. You don't have to do it all in one evening.

Set aside a little space, find some colorful materials, a frame (if it is called for), and get going. It's that first step that takes the extra push.

• • •

Dear Doris: Like "Trapped" I find myself blowing my stack — usually towards the end of the day — when I know it's completely childish and accomplishes very little good.

My three - year - old daughter is a strong - willed, but lovable girl, as yet untrained (after quite a few frustrating tries on my part). Between the trials of raising two others and the fact that she rarely needs a daytime nap, days are quite hectic struggles, and though my husband is a very observant help around the house and an excellent father, he has a responsible position on a demanding course this year and I can't expect him to shoulder too many household jobs.

I'm enclosing 10 cents and a stamped, self - addressed envelope for your "Tips For Harrassed Homemakers" and any other pertinent brochure you may have. — Times of Stress.

Dear Stress: The "Tips" are on their way to help you get organized.

Your three - year - old may survive quite well without a daytime nap, but you both need a quiet period. While the small baby sleeps, settle Number Two on her bed with a picture book and tell her to play there until the alarm rings.

Issue yourself the same orders

Don't force the toilet training issue. Diapers are a nuisance but early conflicts between you two can be troublesome later because of their lasting effect on your relationship.

When you let up the pressure about it, and she does, nature may well help her to become more cooperative.

• • •

Dear Doris: At 17 I am four-foot-eleven and weigh 120. I should lose about 25 pounds.

I am very close to my brother and he has always wished that I would lose weight, so I would like to do it by Easter sort of for a present for him.

My problem is that my friends are tall and slim and eat what they like, so I do likewise. I do all the cooking for our family and love to bake, but I usually end up eating most of it before the rest of the family has a chance to.

I will start dieting tomorrow morning but I would appreciate any advice you can give me. — On The Way Down.

Dear On The Way: O.K. Cookie, you just can't resist your own cooking. Better make a study of food values and calories. This will help you with meal planning too.

If you simply must nibble, keep little carrot and celery curls handy. For your 20 cents I am sending you my "Simple Reducing Diet" and "Low Calorie Menus and Recipes". Good Luck!

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Variation for Potatoes

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Two years ago in your suggested Christmas dinner menu you had a recipe for potato rolls that were coated with chopped almonds. Our family raved over these but I cannot find the clipping . . . Beth W.

ANSWER: I am glad you reminded me of these for they will help other readers to vary their potato preparation.

POTATOES BERNEY

(18 almond-coated rolls; must be made in advance)

4 very large potatoes (or enough to measure 3 cups when cooked and mashed before additions)
1-3 cup milk
1 egg
2 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. salt
Flour
1 egg (second)
2 tbsps. water
2 cups shredded and finely chopped almonds or sesame seeds or 1 cup each almonds and bread crumbs
3 tbsps. butter (second amount)

Boil potatoes in salted water until soft. Drain and mash until very smooth. Add milk, 1 egg, 2 tbsps. butter and salt and beat until smooth. (Note: at this stage you have super mashed potatoes.) Spread on shallow pan or plate and chill. With buttered palms shape into rolls or balls or elipses. Have ready three shallow bowls — flour, second egg beaten with water, almonds (or sesame seeds or almonds and crumbs). Roll potato shapes in flour then in egg, then in almonds. Chill on plate to set and dry. One-half hour before mealtime melt the 3 tbsps. butter in a shallow pan, carefully add chilled potato rolls and roll each over in the butter to coat. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 25-30 min. or until crusty. These are sensationally good.

Dinner Menu

Vegetable Soup; Baked Fish Fillets French Style; (see Monday); Baked Mashed Hubbard Squash; Stewed Tomatoes; Relishes: Radishes and Gherkins; Prune Whip with Custard Sauce; Tea.

Vasectomy Not Legal In Every State

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently you stated in your column that the vasectomy was legal in all states. This is to inform you that Section 17-19 of the Connecticut General Statutes allows vasectomy only on individuals who "would produce children with an inherited tendency to crime, mental illness or mental deficiency." Furthermore, Section 53-33 of the Connecticut General Statutes makes it illegal for anyone to perform, assist in, or otherwise promote the performance of the operation described in Section 17-19.

The penalty for violation of this statute is a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years or both.

Your advice seems to be in violation of Section 53-33 since you appear to be promoting vasectomy in situations where there is no medical necessity. — D. C. R. (Hartford Attorney).

DEAR HART: I appreciate your writing and I stand corrected. Your letter hints that I may be subject to a $1,000 fine and five years in stir, on the grounds that I am promoting vasectomy. I am not a promoter. I am a columnist who expresses views on a variety of subjects. Birth control is one of those subjects. I believe that people who want to limit the size of their families should be free to utilize any technique which they consider suitable for them — without interference from church or state.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Vasectomy is not legal in Texas because it may constitute legal mutilation, which is defined as depriving an organ of its function. — H. A. T. (M.D.)

DEAR DOC: I hope one day in the not-too-distant future the Texas legislators will acknowledge the fact that some organs have more than one function. Thanks for letting me know that they have not yet reached this point.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How far should a mother go to save her married daughter from destruction? Her husband gambles and she is alone every night with her baby. The supper gets cold on the table and she worries that maybe he is dead in a ditch somewhere. She can't work because of poor health. I'm sure most of her sickness is from worrying about bills and where her husband is. When she threatens to leave him he cries and says he needs her. They argue all the time about unpaid bills and her being alone so much.

If her health was good I would mind my own business but I feel it is my duty to help my daughter before she has a complete breakdown. The only solution I can see is for her to get rid of that no-good bum. How can I get this across to her? — A GRIEVING MOM.

DEAR MOM: When your daughter has had enough punishment she will throw the bum out. In the meantime, stay out of it. No one can save anybody. Everyone must save himself. If your daughter reads my column she might be interested in the address of Gamblers Anonymous — just in case her husband decides HE has had enough and wants to cure himself of this illness and lead a decent life. Poor Administrators

LUCKNOW, India (AP) — Women make good mothers, nurses and doctors but are wanting as administrators, said Charan Singh, chief minister of Uttar Pradesh State. He said he recommended to India's lady prime minister, Indira Gandhi, a constitutional amendment barring women from administrative posts in government.

He Knew Her

KENNETH, Mo. (AP) — Magistrate Leon McNally sternly imposed a $27 fine on a 17-year-old girl who had been brought before him charged with driving 87 miles an hour in a 60-mile zone. After giving the young miss a lecture, he ended up with: "Better not let me hear of this happening again." She was his daughter, Sue Ellen McNally.

Worth Four Billion Words?

If a picture's worth a thousand words, Billie Jeanne Lebda must be worth about four billion words. In the past four-and-a-half years she has been the subject of four million frames of still and movie film taken at Eastman Kodak in Rochester, N.Y., in Kodak's checks on film quality and consistency.

Degree No Measure of Worth

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Getting an education is important but getting a bachelor of arts degree is not, says Prof. T. H. B. Symons, president of Trent University.

"I don't think it is important to get a BA," he said in an interview. "I thik it is important to get an education. The two are not the same thing at all."

An education consists of broadening the mind, stocking it with useful ideas and using it, he said.

"For this you don't need a BA And having a BA doesn't necessarily mean any of these things have occurred."

Prof. Symons, who is on a six-month leave of absence from his administrative and teaching duties until July 1, has a BA from the University of Toronto and a BA and MA from Oxford University, England

"A university is only one of many approaches to higher education," he said. "It is a disservice to the universities that so many people think it is the only approach."

Reading and travelling were two other roads to higher education.

"Trent is a distinctive university," Prof. Symons said. "It is not that it is the right answer to the problems of education. It is one of a number of right answers."

Trent's distinctiveness came from its successful attempts to provide small-unit, individualized education and to promote good student-faculty, inter-student and inter-faculty relations.

"I think it was an important experiment. It was important that it be made, and it was important that it be made in Peterborough at the time it was."

Prof Symons was invited to become president-designate in 1960 by a citizens' committee which had begun planning Trent in the late 1950s.

The experiment was made to counter the trend toward depersonalization and isolation arising from the bigness of Canadian universities.

"I and others were concerned with the 'Americanization' of our universities. They were developing in the mould of big. American state colleges."

There had to be an alternative.

"Ten years ago, when I came to Trent, I felt there has been and there ought to be, a different, worth while Canadian approach to higher education. We have fewer resources. It should be less massive, more intimate."

About 50 per cent of the students live on the campus, Prof. Symons said.

"I am perfectly confident that the university can maitain and improve upon its essential aims and essential ideals as long as the faculty, students, board and community maintain their convictions and care enough.

"I think it is most important to get your conceptual thinking sorted out first, to set your ideals. Then care enough and you can sort out all the other difficulties with buildings teachers and money."

Unorthodox 'University' Has Enrolment of 1200

EDMONTON (CP) — Dan Makarus is the leader of a highly successful organization he calls a university but it grants on degrees and none of the staff gets paid.

The university has increased its enrolment to 1,200 from 100 in two years, but it still uses the backs of old mimeographed sheets for its course lists. This causes less paper pollution, says Mr. Makarus.

Nobody gets paid because the university has a budget of nothing even though it offers 64 courses. It has no creditors banging on its doors either, because it has no doors and everybody does everything without charge.

"What we've done," said Mr. Makarus, 24, "is throw out the conventional definition of almost everything."

No tuition or registration fee is charged although the organizers suspect that their institution would de more popular if students were made to pay for the classes they take.

"This is the consumer philosophy," said one organizer. "If you don't pay for something, you don't feel it has any value."

The institution, called Free University North—there's no Free University South—was started in Edmonton two years ago based on an idea of Stanford University in California. It had 100 students the first year, did not operate the next, but expanded quickly last fall.

Among the courses offered are Volkswagen repair, noise pollution, cinematography, design, folk music, aquatics, yoga, jazz, ecology, wine making, myths and symbols, astrology, drugs and nutrition, the welfare system, engineering and the history of guerrilla warfare.

Classes in each subject are usually held once a week in the evening at students' homes, at rooms in the Students' Union building at the University of Alberta and sometimes in corridors.

Most of those taking courses are full-time students at U of A, but some come in from the surrounding community.

Most of the course leaders are university students although some are professors, a few are high school students and a handful are older persons with little formal education.

Both students and teachers generally sit on the floor in circles, often sharing a bottle of wine. It is hard to tell who is the teacher because almost everyone takes an active part.

This was not true, however, of one class on the occult or supernatural. The students said their teacher—John Morrison, 45, a former minister at a church of spiritualism—was so psychic that he frequently answered questions before they were asked.

Many students say they learned more about a particular subject at Free U in a few months than they did in years at the more highly structured university.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — John Spencer and Wesley Finch attended the inaugural meeting of the Rawdon township council for 1971-72 for the first time as councillors on January 11. Murray Heath, deputy reeve for this council also attended.

The summary day for the short course on desserts held recently at Stirling was attended by Mrs. Paul McKeown, Mrs. Ernest Irwin, Mrs. Hector Arnold, Mrs. Jack Watson and Mrs. Gerald Barnum of the Rylstone WI.

Percy Reid recently attended the United Co-operatives of Ontario convention held in Ottawa.

Several from here attended the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Mitchell. Mrs. Mitchell who was formerly Lena Wellman lived her youth in Rylstone. She lived on a farm on the ninth line which is now owned by Donald Stewart.

Mrs. Minnie Petherick has returned home from Campbellford Memorial Hospital where she was taken after she fell and broke a bone in her shoulder.

Mrs. Clarence James of Foxboro was the hostess at a shower held in honor of Judy Heath.

FIRE STATION N

Fire Halls An Attraction For More Than 1,000 Youngsters in 1970

Spittoons, Checkers Are Gone

Times Have Changed at the Fire Hall

Story and Photos
By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Gone are the Dalmations; gone are the checkerboards; gone are towers for hose drying; gone are the horses and harness and for fire departments all across North America. Even the traditional sliding pole is slowly falling into disuse.

The picture of the fire hall has undergone a great many changes in the past few years and some of the glamor has fallen by the wayside

Emphasis now is placed upon updated instruction for equally updated equipment.

Officers of the Belleville Fire Department absorb more than 500 hours of instruction annually.

In fact, the man who has been on the force for just six months is fully qualified to operate all equipment.

The men receive refresher courses on use of chemicals, breathing apparatus, street layout, salvage methods for after-fire work, and ventilation of burning buildings.

Each member of the fire department must know how to operate the shiny red engines from the ladders, pumps and hydraulics to the release valves.

He must know the most accessible route to a fire which, depending on the time of day and traffic conditions, could be a series of different directions.

He must learn where every hydrant is and determine whether a fire warrants a smaller hose connected to the tanks of the truck or the heavier equipment.

To ensure that each man understands use of the equipment, an internal test is given every four months.

Now when the fire department is not fighting fires (and Chief Leo Culhane commented that this is one type of organization that doesn't look forward to business) the equipment sits. There is only so much polish that can be applied to already clean trucks; only so much new information to be imparted; and there aren't all that many new inventions to be tested.

So what, other than instruction periods, does the fire fighter do when battling blazes is not his immediate concern.

There are 60 men of the Belleville force and two halls. One is on Dundas Street East; number two, central command, is on Moira Street West.

The men are rotated on night and day shifts; a typical shift might be four days on, six off, three nights on and seven off, followed by three days and three nights of duty.

Both night and day shifts require a certain amount of maintenance work.

Trucks are cleaned and motors run, not only to uphold traditional shine but to ensure proper running order; extinguishing and breathing equipment is tested; handy work such as painting, mowing lawns and improving the appearance of the two-storey halls . . . it's all in a day work.

Two fire prevention officers (sometimes referred to as inspectors) inspect business, industry, hospitals, nursing homes and residences upon request and as a matter of course, where necessary.

Even with recommendations from the manufacturers, new chemicals and equipment undergo thorough testing in the back field of number two station. During the warmer months, all such devices are both tested for effectiveness and as a means of renewed instruction for the men.

Although the checkerboard is gathering dust in the historic files of firefighting, recreational facilities are available for the little time left over after duties are concluded.

Billiards, table tennis, radio and television are on hand for use but, contrary to certain public opinion, these facilities do not form a major portion of the firefighters workday.

There are many public-spirited functions performed by the Belleville firemen; functions not generally known to the public.

After a fire, the men help clean up water and debris and then go over the building to make sure it is sound and no fire is contained in walls and under floors.

This thorough check "has paid off in a few cases" the chief commented.

The Underprivileged Children's Firefighters' Fund receives much attention from the force. At Christmas time they collect toys for distribution.

The chief informed The Intelligencer that many letters are received from people the force helps.

On occasion, the men have gone to the rescue of a family unable to fire their furnaces or stoves.

"The people we help know it; the men know it . . . and they do it without seeking publicity."

Fire fighting is a year-round job, every hour. Christmas morning, 1970 saw men of the force out checking on a small occurrence.

While interviewing the chief, The Intelligencer was witness to the efficiency of the men.

The alarm rang and before an immediate phone call was made from the chief's office, the red engine was screaming down the street.

Although a minor fire; a burning bedroom extinguished with a small hose, the men arrived on the scene with a minimum of time involved.

This is the goal of the force.

"We don't look forward to fires, naturally, but we have to cut our time down and arrive as soon as possible."

The chief said that in many cases, frustration arises because of lack of information.

An anxious homeowner often doesn't take the time to inform the department as to the extent of the trouble and a large unit has often arrived to find a roast burning in an oven, or a burning oil furnace fire pot.

He explained that, by proper information, the firefighters can gauge the seriousness of the fire and send appropriate equipment, be it fire extinguishers or a general alarm requiring all equipment from both stations.

"We check them all, and at all hours," Chief Culhane said.

Firemen are dedicated. One would have to be to be placed in a position of getting covered by freezing water during a winter fire; getting soaked to the skin as a ceiling releases torrents of sooty water, and the ultimate danger, ever lurking . . . the last accident.

A fireman in Syracuse, N.Y. was killed last week fighting a fire.

It's something the men do not often think about, but the idea is there.

But fire in Belleville was minimal last year. Apart from regular calls — several homes were gutted — the Belleville Plaza was the first large, business fire, followed by Ruddy Electric just over a month later.

And the Belleville Fire Department aided the Fire Marshal's office and the city police in proving arson in the case of Sir Winston Churchill and Prince of Wales public schools.

"We had a good year in 1970, the number of fires was down from the year before," the chief declared.

The fire department is called regularly by industry and business to check their alarm at central headquarters automatically lights up when a fire occurs in one of the alarm - equipped businesses and these have to be periodically checked.

The men are rotated between the two stations and a close bond exists between the firefighters, their fellow force members and their officers.

They are a team. "But we're not in a competative field," the chief quipped.

The fire department is one organization that doesn't really want more business.

Saves Rangers Point

Gilbert Making Habit Of Last-ditch Goals

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It's getting to be a habit with Rod Gilbert.

For the second time in as many nights, Gilbert's late-game heroics pulled New York Rangers into a National Hockey League tie.

His two third-period goals Thursday night, the second with fewer than three minutes remaining, enabled the Rangers to tie the lowly Buffalo Sabres 5-5 in Buffalo.

The previous night, at home, he turned boos to cheers with two late goals, the second with 19 seconds left in the game, to give New York a 3-3 tie with Philadelphia Flyers.

In other games Thursday night, the Flyers blew a 4-1 lead and settled for a 5-5 tie with Montreal Canadiens, Minnesota North Stars won their first game at home since Christmas night, 5-3 over St. Louis Blues, Chicago Black Hawks blanked Detroit Red Wings 2-0 and Los Angeles Kings tripped Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2.

Gilbert's two goals against the Sabres gave him 16 for the season and equalled his total output for the 1969-70 schedule.

The tie marked the longest winless streak of the season for the Rangers—two losses followed by the two ties. They have been pushing Boston Bruins for top place in the NHL's East Division all year and the tie moved them to within a point of Boston.

The Bruins, however, have played two fewer games for their 67 points.

"We're falling down in certain areas like penalty killing," said Emile Francis, Rangers general manager-coach. "We've now blown two three-goal leads and one three-goal lead.

New York held a 3-1 lead midway in the game but the Sabres rebounded and took a 4-3 lead early in the final 20 minutes on goals by Steve Atkinson, Phil Goyette and rookie Gilbert Perreault's second of the game and 19th of the season.

Gilbert tallied his first at 8:06 of the period and finished it up at 17:24 after Doug Barrie had again given Buffalo the lead.

Henri Richard's sixth goal of the season ended a 16-game personal scoring drought to climax Montreal's four-goal rally in the third period.

ROD GILBERT

The Flyers, who spotted Montreal a 1-0 first-period lead, rapped in four of their own, including goals by Jean-Guy Gendron, Bill Lesuk and Jimmy Johnson in a span of one minute, 19 seconds.

After Montreal's Jean Beliveau and Bobby Clarke of the Flyers exchanged early goals, the Canadiens went on their own scoring binge with the Mahovlich brothers, Frank and Peter, and Richard tallying in a period of one minute, 47 seconds.

Danny Grant and Jean-Paul Parise banked shots in off goalie Glenn Hall's padding to send the North Stars winging to their first win of 1971 at home.

Grant's 22nd of the year, a sizzler from the blue line, glanced off Hall's glove and pad to make the score 3-2 in the second period and Parise blasted a 30-footer off the goalie's pads at 3:25 of the final period for the winner.

Grant was being shadowed closely by Blues' Jim Roberts all night and the goal was the only shot he had.

Tony Esposito, who played brilliantly in his last start, a 2-0 victory for the West Division all-stars over the East Tuesday night, continued his solid performance against the Wings while turning aside 30 shots for his fourth shutout of the season.

Rookie Dan Maloney's ninth goal of the year at the 14-minute mark of the opening period was all the offence he needed with added insurance coming from Bobby Hull in the second.

Bob Berry's two goals and rookie Bob Berry's first NHL goal since being called up from the Kings' American League farm club at Springfield, Mass., sparked the Kings.

In other league developments Thursday, Boston Bruins recalled Reg Leach, 21, from their farm team at Oklahoma City in the Central League, to replace injured John McKenzie.

McKenzie suffered a shoulder separation at Boston Sunday night against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Bruins also announced a trade with Philadelphia, sending forward Dan Schock to the Flyers for a player to be named later.

Ratelle Makes Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jean Ratelle's one goal and two assists Thursday night enabled New York Rangers to come from behind and tie Buffalo Sabres 5-5.

Ratelle's three-point evening brings his season's total to 51 on 21 goals and 30 assists and moves him into seventh place in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Racer Facing Court

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A year ago, Jean-Pierre Beltoise left Argentina a local hero, winner of the 1970 Argentine sports auto race.

He leaves today, charged with negligent homicide, under bond of $15,000 and object of local abuse from press and fans alike.

The difference was a fatal accident in the 1971 race that killed Italian driver Ignazio Giunti. Beltoise was the key factor in the accident.

A local judge Thursday ruled that evidence to date showed that Beltoise was guilty of negligent homicide and ordered the 33-year-old Frenchman arrested, then released on bond.

Beltoise will be allowed to leave for 60 days but will have to return at the end of that period to again face the courts for a final determination in the case.

Beltoise, driving for the Matra team, ran out of fuel on the 38th lap of the Argentine 1,000-kilometre sports auto race Jan. 10. He got out and began pushing his Matra toward the pits.

A number of cars went safely around the Matra, which Beltoise was pushing at some considerable strain in a criss-cross path in the centre of the track.

But when Giunti rounded a hairpin curve he smashed into the stalled car from behind.

The Ferrari exploded in flames and the popular young Italian driver was trapped inside the burning car in front of the thousands of fans.

Petes' Backup Finds Job Easy

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Playing goal in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series must seem easy to Paul Elford, the backup man for the first-place Peterborough Petes, but Hamilton's Mine Veisor could tell him it can be hard work.

Elford posted his third consecutive home ice shutout Thursday when the Petes blanked last-place Niagara Falls Flyers 4-0.

At Hamilton, Veisor frustrated London Knights by stopping all but three of 55 shots as the Red Wings won 5-3.

Elford who has played in five games for the Petes, has gone 187 minutes without allowing a goal. Thursday, he faced only 18 shots.

Craig Ramsay scored twice for the Petes who took a 3-0 first period lead. Paul Raymer and Rick Plumb scored the other goals.

The win gives the Petes a six-point bulge over second-place Ottawa 67s, who have two games in hand. Peterborough plays in Niagara Falls tonight.

The rest of tonight's schedule has Ottawa playing host to the seventh-place Oshawa Generals, Toronto Marlboros visiting the Kitchener Rangers, and Montreal Junior Canadiens playing at London.

Veisor had to be at his best in the third period when London held a lopsided 22-9 advantage in shots on goal. The Knights had a 16-13 edge in the first period and a 17-9 edge in the second.

It was the fourth win in a row for the Wings and their sixth in seven games under new coach Billy Harris, but they needed a goal into the empty London net in the last minute of play to clinch the victory.

The Wings moved three points ahead of the seventh-place Knights with the win, and to within three points of fifth-place Toronto.

A first-period goal by Jerry Butler and second-period goals by Larry Gould and Tommy Williams, his 34th, gave the Wings a 3-0 lead before Terry West scored London's first goal in the second period.

Terry Ryan scored the winner for Hamilton early in the third period, but goals by London's Jack Kell and Reg Thomas pulled the losers to within a goal of tying the score with a minute and 36 seconds left to play.

Hamilton drew nine of the 17 penalties which included majors to Bob Neely of the Wings and Jay Babcock of London for fighting in the first period.

Stadium Bribe Probed

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Two Democratic members of the Erie County Legislature said Thursday they had been offered bribes in exchange for votes on the county's proposed $50 million domed stadium project.

Frank C. Ludera of Buffalo and Frederick F. Pordum of Lackawanna said they informed the county attorney of the offers and would be willing to testify before federal and county grand juries investigating the project, although they have not been subpoenaed.

They declined to give details.

County Attorney Robert Casey confirmed the legislators' reports.

Ludera and Pordum have opposed the dome project.

The Buffalo Evening News says the federal probe is only one part of a national investigation.

Lions' Talk Not Cheap

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders want a little treat from British Columbia Lions before letting the Western Football Conference club into their yard for talks about trading retired Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson.

RUSS JACKSON

Lions general manager Jackie Parker said Thursday the eastern conference club won't talk trade unless they get something. But Ottawa general manager Frank Clair, in a telephone interview, would not say what he was asking to get negotiations started.

Clair said if they do get around to talking about Jackson, he wants Lions running back Jim Young and other players as part of any trade.

Jack Gotta, Clair's head coach, said in a separate telephone interview:

"B.C. is going to have to give us something before they talk with Russ. We want players.

"Look," said Gotta, "Jackson is the best quarterback the Lions will get this year on either side of the border. Why, he's a diamond."

"We're sort of stymied," said Parker. "The Riders seem to think it's worth something to negotiate with Jackson."

Clair said "everything's at a standstill, nothing will probably happen until next week."

Crash and Crumble Only Worked Five Months for Skating Title

WINNIPEG (CP) — Five months training isn't usually enough time to develop a pair of Canadian figure skating champions, but two Toronto youngsters with the unlikely nicknames of Crash and Crumble proved Thursday it can be done.

Barbara Berezowski, 16, and David Porer, 21, captured the junior dance gold medal with a steady performance in both compulsory figures and free skating.

It was one of three championships decided Thursday, the third day of competition of the Canadian figure skating championships. Ontario athletes continued to dominate the events, winning two more gold medals.

Before the Toronto pair won the junior dance event, John Rait and Ginnie Grieco of Toronto won the novice dance championship.

Karel Latham of Vancouver was the only non-Ontario athlete to be crowned and it took a brilliant free-skating exhibition to give the 17-year-old the junior ladies gold medal.

"We've only been together for five months," Porter, nicknamed Crash, said of the junior dance team. "Our pros teamed us up.

"The secret to success," he says, "is to make every moment on the ice count. Leave all your troubles at home when you go to skate."

Porter made evry moment count during the free skating and received the praise of his partner for possibly saving the victory.

"He saved me," Miss Berezowski, nicknamed Crumble, said. "I don't know what happened but all of a sudden I was under him.

"He held me up and kept me from falling on my face."

Having the right professionals has also helped the pair. Their coaches, Marg and Bruce Hyland, also teach the novice pairs winners, Bernard and Marie Souche of Toronto, and one of the top senior pairs here, Mary Petrie and John Hubbell of Toronto.

Miss Latham, the B.C. senior champion, found the Winnipeg Arena ice to her liking and took advantage of it to overcome a seven-point deficit to defeat Julie Black of Point Edward, Ont.

Rait and Miss Grieco withstood a tremendous free-skating challenge from Greg Ladret and Debra Robertson of Vancouver in the novice dance.

Karen Magnussen, 18, defending senior ladies champion, and Stan Bohonek of Toronto in the junior men's event, took commanding leads after compulsory figures.

The final three senior ladies figures will be skated this morning followed by the first three senior men's figures. The senior dance compulsory section and the junior men's free skating is scheduled for the evening.

Another Meagher Would Give Fairways Big Edge

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

If health charts have any significance, the Belleville Fairways should have a big edge in their Eastern Ontario Junior B meeting with Trenton tonight.

The only deletion from the Belleville lineup will be right winger Terry Meagher, sitting out a one - game suspension for his part in a brawl in Cobourg Monday night.

The Golden Hawks on the other hand could be without one of their top lines, the Ken Holmes - Paul Lavender - Hugh Holmes combination, who are reported to be suffering from influenza. Another Trenton regular on the sick list is Art Burnett.

Although the Fairways will be minus one Meagher, the team could very well be bolstered by the addition of another of the brother combination that earned invitation to the Niagara Falls training camp this fall.

Fairway manager Jim quick - stepping centre Rick Meagher had agreed to join the team for tonight's contest. The standout pivot with the Blake Kerr midgets last season earned a goal and an assist in action with the Western Tire Juveniles, last Sunday.

RICK MEAGHER

Coach Floyd Crawford indicated that he hopes to use the younger Meagher on a line with Brian O'Coin and Doug James.

Another welcome addition will be two-way winger Dave Smith whose return after a one-game suspension will reunite Belleville's top scoring line. Smith's linemates, Joe Clarke and Danny Lupenette both counted goals in Monday's 3-3 tie with Cobourg.

Crawford also indicated that utility forward Jim Horwood could see more ice time after a fine fill-in effort in Cobourg Monday night.

Defensively the coach was pleased with the play of his rearguards, particularly second year man, Kevin Dockrill. "Kevin's really improved back there", noted Crawford, "he's getting a piece of everything that moves and they're solid hits."

Belleville could move into a fourth - place tie with Cobourg by winning tonight's hold three games in nand over their rivals for the final league playoff position.

Trenton, on the other hand will be looking only for the satisfaction of handing their perennial Bay of Quinte rivals a setback. Plagued by injuries and illness the Hawks have only one win in 21 contests this season.

Game time will be 9 p.m. at the Trenton Community Gardens.

Win Tonight Squares Mo-Hawks

In most hockey leagues, playing .500 hockey gets a team into the playoffs, and Belleville's Senior A Mo-Hawks can even their record at 15-15 tonight with a win over visiting Owen Sound Crescents.

But with ten games in their 40-game schedule remaining after tonight, the Mo-Hawks are still capable of a run at one of the top three of the eight - team league's six playoff berths.

Including tonight's 9 p.m. Memorial Arena fixture with the seventh - place Crescents, the fifth - place Mo - Hawks have six of their remaining 11 games on home ice. They would take over fourth place and pull to within eight points of third - place Barrie with a win tonight.

The Crescents have been spoilers for the Mo-Hawks all season, winning three of their first five meetings. Last season, Belleville enjoyed a 5-1 record against Owen Sound.

Owen Sound is the only other senior A entry besides Belleville employing the playing - coach format. Former league scoring champion Dave McComb took over the coaching duties a few weeks ago when Billy Taylor called it quits.

In addition to McComb, the Mo-Hawks must be wary of little Mayo Paquette, their Number 7 centre who seems to enjoy his best nights around Belleville nets.

After tonight's game, the Mo-Hawks are idle until a week from Sunday, when they are host to Barrie in what amounts to a four-point game in the battle for third place.

Narrow Edge For Nicholson

Losing a step almost meant losing a game to the Nicholson seniors in their Bay of Quinte COSSA basketball contest with Moira last night.

Using a tight man-to-man defence Nicholson managed to build up a 26-12 lead at half time but then were forced to hang on to a narrow 50-48 victory over the Trojans.

Bill Harley and Wayne Farrell led the winners with 10 points apiece while Jim Wiggins had 21 and Phil Kirby 10 points in a losing effort.

Moira Juniors handed Nicholson their second loss of the season with a solid 63-37 trouncing. Pacing the winners were Ken Lapalm (19) and Bill Henry.

In the midget contest it was Moira 42, Nicholson 24. Steve Kirby's 22 points were tops for Moira, while Joe Edwards hooped six for the losers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Yogi Berra and Ralph Kiner were disappointed and Early Wynn was bitter Thursday after they fell short of the Hall of Fame as the Baseball Writers' Association of America failed to elect anyone to the sport's shrine. "Sure I'm disappointed," Berra said after being told that he was the top vote-getter with 242 but had missed the needed 270, or 75 per cent, ballots required for election. It was not the first time no one was elected. Finishing second behind the former star New York Yankee catcher who now is a New York Mets' coach was Wynn, former Cleveland Cleveland Indians' star pitcher who was the most recent to win 300 games in the majors.

TORONTO (CP) — The increasing cost of operation has prompted the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association into the commercial field of endorsements in an effort to recoup some of its losses, CAHA president Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., said Thursday. The association's first endorsements, under a new symbol — capital letters CAHA imposed over a maple leaf with a hockey stick in the background — are a puck and mouthguard. Dawson told a news conference the CAHA envisages annual returns of about $100,000 within four or five years through its contract with CAHA Properties Ltd. "We lost $89,000 in five years of operating the national team. And with our increased services and promotions, we are running at a deficit. "We have to get the money some place .Other sports have been in the endorsement business for years. It has been a subject of discussion for some time and now we feel we should be in a position to make some money and use it to develop the game."

WHEREAS, the week of January 23rd to 29th is being observed throughout Canada as a period to focus public attention on the physical, character building and other benefits of hockey for our youth, and

WHEREAS, the game of hockey is recognized as Canada's National Game which teaches our youth to develop a competitive spirit, co-operation with others, body-building, and respect for authority, and

WHEREAS, it is the hope of every municipality to develop one or more players capable of representing Canada as a member of Canada's National Team, and

WHEREAS the Minor Hockey Association in this community has earned the commendation and support of every citizen, and

WHEREAS Minor Hockey is the foundation from which accomplished hockey players develop,

NOW THEREFORE, I, J. Russell Scott, Mayor of the City of Belleville, do hereby declare the week commencing January 23rd be observed as:
"MINOR HOCKEY WEEK IN CANADA" and request that all parents and others support this observance by attending games during Minor Hockey Week and thereafter until the minor hockey season ends.

(Signed) RUSSELL SCOTT, M.D.C.M., MAYOR.

DATED at the Mayor's Office
this 19th day of January, 1971.

FOR FRESH NEW IDEAS
FOR YOUR DRIVING NEEDS

1. Why not enjoy air conditioning in your car and pay for it only in the summer? Leasing makes it easy . . . 30c per day or $9.00 monthly.
2. Why not lease a new car every six months or once a year and save on repairs? Leasing makes it easy.
3. Why not save on income tax and lease for business driving?
4. Why "own" when accountants agree leasing costs less.

36 months net lease $105 - $131 6 months net lease

It Is Tough to Be A Good MP, 'Political Interns' Discover

OTTAWA (CP) — Political interns, a new breed on Parliament Hill, are exhibiting halfway through their first terms sympathy for the lot of the members of Parliament they work with.

"It's tough to be a good MP," says Ron Kanter, 22, from Brantford, Ont., who is completing an honors arts degree in political science at York University in Toronto.

The MP "doesn't have time to be an original thinker," observes Garry Curtis, 24, of Victoria, a master of arts candidate at Claremont graduate school in California.

Jean-Guy Finn, 26, of Inkerman, N.B., taking an MA in political science from Ottawa University, says MPs, of necessity, have to be "generalists" rather than being able to indulge in detailed knowledge on special issues.

Linda Geller, 23, of Toronto, with a BA in political science from the University of Toronto, and Donald Murray, 23, of Montreal, express concern about preparation and facilities available to MPs.

Young people launched the annual parliamentary intern program last year, a concept proposed in 1966 by Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington). The interns' work will be completed in June, with Prof. James Hurley of the Carleton University political science department as program director.

There were 129 applicants for the first batch of interns reporting here last September.

The other five in the program: Howard Aster, 26, Montreal; Richard Berger, 23, Montreal; Gregory Fyffe, 23, Ottawa; Peter Johansen, 22, Ottawa; and Brian Lennox, 23, Toronto.

They began with a series of lectures from Commons staff and with talks by such persons as Speaker Lucien Lamoureux and former prime ministers John Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson.

Then they were assigned to work with MPs selected from the four political parties sitting in the Commons.

Mr. Kanter said MPs frequently are accused of not doing their homework.

"They are expected by their constituents to be knowledgeable about 20 pieces of legislation and the activities of four Commons committees, say."

He has worked with Tom Bell, Conservative Commons whip representing Saint John-Lancaster, and Lincoln Alexander, Conservative spokesman on housing and urban affairs from Hamilton West.

Mr. Murray, a graduate of Bishop's University, Lennoxville, Que., who has been attending the Institute d'Etudes Politiques in Paris, has been working with Creditiste House Leader Andre Fortin, who sits for Lotbiniere riding.

He feels MPs receive little advance preparation for their jobs or for using facilities that exist to help them in their jobs.

"We got more orientation than they did."

Miss Geller has been assigned to Liberal MP Mark MacGuigan (Windsor-Walkerville) and says an MP has to share a small office with his secretary and carry on interviews with visiting constituents or reporters in the cramped space.

The interns believe that MPs have reacted in different ways to what is seen as a mammoth task.

Mr Murray, having attended Creditiste caucus meetings and helped in a byelection campaign, says members of the Quebec-based party "do not see themselves as influencing legislation."

They do see themselves as "constituency ombudsmen" concentrating on solving problems for their constituents, returning to Ottawa with dozens of problems to take up with federal agencies and departments.

Mr. Kanter says he is concerned at the futility of the hour set aside for debate of private members' bills and motions, averaging about four hours weekly. Good ideas contained in these were "talked out," kept from coming to a vote by government supporters following long-established custom.

Miss Geller said she has found herself carrying out long-term research work for Mr. MacGuigan who, as a backbench Liberal MP, has much less freedom than opposition members to disagree with day-to-day government policy.

House to Debate Control of Textile Imports

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons today swings into debate on government control over clothing and textile imports after two days of sluggish discussion over planned changes in the Northern Canada Power Commission Act.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin opened debate on the import bill late Thursday with a plea to opposition critics not to view the measure as "protectionism in its traditional form."

Canada had always been a heavy importer of textiles and clothing and would continue to be. But some control of imports was necessary to prevent massive disturbances in the domestic market.

The import bill, basically, would create a textile and clothing board with wide authority to recommend controls on imports of those products.

Any action to limit imports, however, would have to be taken by government, Mr. Pepin said.

The board would have to be convinced that imports were injuring domestic textile and clothing manufacturers and have evidence to show the Canadian companies concerned could improve their competitive positions before a recommendation for limiting imports would be made.

Earlier Thursday, the Commons gave second reading to a government bill that lifts from the northern Canada Power Commission an obligation to get cabinet approval for all projects costing more than $50,000. The bill now goes to committee.

The bill also is intended to reduce power costs to smaller communities in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and increase the commission membership to five from three.

It received general support from the New Democrats but was opposed by the Conservatives and Creditistes. Attendance in the 264-seat Commons dropped to 13 MPs at times during the debate.

Opponents of the changes argued that the agency is destroying private initiative in the north and is not covered by an over-all development plan. The debate was sprinkled by Conservative amendments to delay progress on the legislation or have it thrown out.

An amendment by Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) calling for debate by a committee of the whole House was ruled out of order.

A second amendment by Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) was defeated 98 to 45 with the NDP voting with the government. The amendment would have killed the bill. Second reading was by an informal voice vote.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 152, Conservative 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 13, Independent 1, vacant 3.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said the northern power bill might help save the north from exploitation by profit-seeking capitalists.

But Jack Bigg (PC—Pembina) said it represented another move toward a socialist state in Canada.

Witness Says He Was Hit

MONTREAL (CP) — A native of St. Boiface, Man., said Thursday he made a statement to police in relation to the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec "under physical and moral coercion."

Raymond Cormier, 23, said in Court of Queen's Bench police had interrogated him for several hours after his arrest last Oct. 4.

"They hit me in the face and on the back of the neck," he said, "and they pulled my hair like this."

Cormier was testifying at the continuing trial of his friend Come Leblanc, 23, an unemployed Montreal laborer facing three charges that link him with the FLQ.

Parts of the statement signed by Cormier were read in court by Prosecutor Gabriel Lapoite to "refresh the memory" of the witness, who came here seven months ago from St. Boniface.

Cormier said he met regularly last fall with Leblac and two other young men "to drink beer and talk politics" and that they visited junior colleges to distribute copies of an FLQ "manifesto" calling for a workers' revolution to establish an independent Quebec.

But he denied having told police that he and the others plotted to rob gunshops to get weapons, or that they planned to take "direct action to support the cause, the FLQ movement."

Cormier also denied telling police his brother Gilles, 20, Jean Boisjoli, 21, also from St. Boniface, and himself had planned a training camp in northern Manitoba where they would practise with arms and explosives and return to Quebec and "blow up the offices of Household Finance" Corp. of Canada.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 23

Your birthday today: You face a year of general prosperity, increased involvement in your career and social relations. Problems are not major and nearly all of them grow out of your own unconscious attitudes; old habits need revision. You may have to learn more about adapting to individual local situations. Today's natives are natural leaders, both men and women, although most of them lead in fields where no great numbers can follow them closely.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Almost any adventurous idea can be worked out with enjoyment. Bring good friends to share the occasion, particularly if they have special talents to contribute.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Seek to live "grace and beauty" today; attract something of the same from others. Inspiration lights your path, and that of others.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Don't let intriguing new acquaintances take you away from old friends. Make peace, pass up a chance to "get even". Gentle words to your loved ones are essential.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Somebody you work with brings information which fits into your schemes. You will shortly have the responsibility of somebody's personal secrets — unless you dodge it. Take time out, have fun.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Everything in moderation today. Promises received are delightful even if they are never fulfilled. Try to get a better perspective on your present daily living.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Make a fuss over people if you feel like it. Surprise gifts are an elegant way of doing it. Use your time in constructive effort. You have nothing to lose.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): This is a day of meetings, perhaps long - awaited arrivals. News comes from the outside, letters may cross in the mails. There is much to celebrate by evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): The personal touch and a bit of tact will get you out of a temporary squeeze. Pursue personal interests rather than business. Find time for meditation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): With self-confidence, proceed directly to what is most important. Home life improves, with ideas for changes, the projects of loved ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your intuition for once is on the side going overboard with massive efforts. Make a complete change wherever neded. You hear confidences which you must hold quiet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Take nothing for granted about the understanding people have of you — show your feelings, offer symbolic expressions promises where you're sure you can keep them.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Gather help to press a career venture early in the day. Then switch to light diversions, make people glad they've been helpful. Just verbal thank-yous are not always enough.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Mothers' Concern Often Oppressive

The concern of some mothers for their children is unnaturally oppressive. As some children put it, "My mother doesn't let me breathe."

The child is not allowed to make any decisions or have its own likes or dislikes. It is bound firmly by the opinions of the mother.

The child has two choices: either to submit or to rebel. In many cases children who have married in their teens have told me the reason was to escape excessive restrictions in their way of life. Flight was their only relief. Sometimes there is no apparent solution. One such case is described in the following letter:

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 41 years old and my nerves are completely gone — especially in my stomach. I cannot make a decision for myself, Mother has to make it. She tells me how long I can stay when I go somewhere. She has to know why I go, what I did, whom I saw.

But above all, I have no privacy at home. If I get sick she wants to know what kind of medicine I take. Lots of times she stays up until I go to bed. Why, doctor? I'd like to be a normal human being, but she won't stand for it.

I have my own business. She tells me how to run it. She doesn't treat my sister this way. I've been married and still would be if mom would let me. Dad isn't like that at all. Now he is sick and getting worse.

Please don't misunderstand me. I love them both very much. Dad is wonderful and Mom is good in many ways. But I can't go on much longer this way.

There's nothing wrong with me but nervousness. It's more than I can take. I've been to all kinds of specialists, but they couldn't help. One talked with our pastor and all he could say was pray.

Doctor, can you give me some advice? You're first on my list. If you can't help, next in line are Ann L., Dear Abby or Billy Graham. But I'm hoping you have the answer. Thank you for putting up with me. — Mr. B.

Comment: Until you signed it Mr. B., I thought you were a Miss. Usually girls put up with parental oppression more than boys.

My answer? I wish I had one other than "leave the nest" and try your own wings. Perhaps that is too trite and simple. I still believe that consultation with a doctor and minister, working together, is essential. And, of course, your own will to sever the cord this late in your life.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am having so much trouble with my stomach lately such as pain after eating and heartburn. This has been worse after my husband retired. He follows me everywhere in the house and nearly drives me crazy. Doing nothing — just watching everything I do. Could my stomach trouble be caused by nerves? — Mrs. I.

Comment: Have you ever complained to him? Perhaps in all innocence he is showing his affection for you. Have you had your doctor check on your symptoms? A faulty gall bladder or hiatal hernia, or other factor might be more guilty than your husband in making you so uncomfortable.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 5 - year - old son has a hernia. A fine surgeon says he needs to have it repaired. Isn't my son too young to have an operation? — Mrs. M.

Comment: You might consider him "old" when compared to the very young infants and children who undergo hernia surgery safely.

Now Steaks Are Spun From Plant

QUEBEC (CP)—Researchers at Laval University's food research faculty have developed a high-protein flour which can be spun and molded into artificial steaks, it was learned Thursday.

The flour is a derivative of lucerne, a clover-like plant used for fodder.

Dr. R. Riel of the school's food research faculty said the flour is white in color and has no distinct taste. In previous experiments the flour obtained was green and had a definite aroma of lucerne.

Bill to Reduce Arrests Is Given First Reading

OTTAWA (CP) — The redrafted bail reform bill, aimed at cutting arrests to a bare minimum, was given first reading in the Commons Thursday.

The thick swatch of amendments to the Criminal Code will discourage arrest and encourage early release from custody where arrests are made, the justice department says.

"The basic question should be whether an accused person is likely to show up for his trial," Justice Minister John Turner said in a news release.

"In many cases, except for serious crimes, it may not be necessary to arrest him at all, or if he is arrested, it may not be necessary to hold him in custody pending his trial."

Cash bail will be required sparingly under the proposed amendments. It would be required only in cases where a person lived more than 100 miles from the place of arrest, or where he couldn't identify himself as part of the community.

Even then, a justice of the peace could waive bail and grant a release on the person's word to return for trial following a review of the original decision.

When introduced last June, the bill would have limited cash bail to cases in which the suspect came from another province.

However, this clause and others were modified after suggestions from police forces, attorneys-general and other interested parties.

Snowmobile Traps Set

ORANGEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Colin Davies, 42, of Orangeville was charged Thursday with setting traps with intent to cause death or bodily harm to snowmobilers.

The charge was laid after police found several snowmobile traps on Credit Valley Conservation Authority land during the past month.

The traps, made of barbed wire, copper tubes and stakes, were set to catch the skis of snowmobiles and some were high enough to catch the heads of operators.

The 646-acre site was closed to snowmobilers Wednesday by the authority.

Orangeville is 40 miles northwest of Toronto.

Nixon's Six Goals Include Cancer Cure

Cities To Get Funds

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon, in a State of the Union message that could pass for a Nixon campaign manifesto for 1972 has called for a "new American revolution" against social injustice, poverty and government bureaucracy.

The message clearly puts Democratic presidential hopefuls on the defensive.

In an uncharacteristic, free-wheeling style Nixon, before a joint session of Congress, Friday night issued an annual report on the republic that set "six great goals." It called for:

1. The Democratic - controlled new Congress to make the mountain of "unfinished business" of the 91st Congress its "first priority—a crack heavy with political innuendo that set the tone for much of the 4,500-word message.

2. Full prosperity in peacetime, a goal "Americans have not enjoyed since 1957"—in the last previous Republican administration, of Dwight Eisenhower.

3. Restoration and enhancement of the natural environment.

4. Far-reaching proposals for improvement of America's health care and making it available more fairly to more people.

5. The strengthening and renewal of state and local governments. In this context he proposed a surprisingly generous revenue-sharing plan aimed at passing $16,000 million down to the lower levels of government.

6. Complete reform of the federal government—reduction of the present 12 cabinet departments to eight.

Actually, much of the annual report on domestic affairs—required under the constitution—was a vision of the future rather than a factual report on the state of the union. Of more interest, probably to Canada and other countries will be Nixon's budget later this month and his report on foreign policy next month.

Although much of Friday's message had been leaked in advance, the proportions of the $16,000 million handout to state and local governments surpassed expectations.

Thus, in addition to disarming the Democrats, he also stole much of the thunder of governors and mayors who even before delivery of the message were accusing Nixon of a sleight-of-hand fiscal policy aimed at making political gain while coming up with a minimum of new money.

But in fact Nixon proposed $6,000 million in fresh funds—"Let us put the money where the needs are"—representing, he said, a 25-per-cent increase

PM Signs

Indonesia to Get Loan

JAKARTA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and Foreign Minister Adam Malik signed an aid agreement today whereby Canada will provide Indonesia with a $4 million loan repayable in 50 years at no interest.

The loan will be used by Indonesia to buy commodities in Canada, mainly fertilizer. It is the largest single Canadian aid commitment to Indonesia to date, and Trudeau said his government has decided to make Indonesia a major recipient of future Canadian aid.

Trudeau said in a signing ceremony at the presidential palace that other agreements will be signed soon for provision to Indonesia of Canadian forestry, civil aviation and highway and bridge engineering help.

Canada already is supplying Indonesia this year with $3 million worth of wheat flour and skim milk.

At the signing ceremony at Meakeka Palace, Trudeau said: "This commodity loan represents the largest Canadian aid commitment to Indonesia to date, and while small against Indonesia's total aid requirement, it nevertheless reflects Canada's decision to make Indonesia a major recipient in the future of Canadian aid."

Early today, Trudeau received a courtesy call from Jakarta's governor, Lt.-Gen. Ali Sadikin, and later placed flowers at Indonesia's national heroes cemetery.

He is scheduled to visit the chairman of Indonesia's national Congress, Gen. Abdul Haris Nasution, who has accepted an invitation to visit Canada in April.

Trudeau also invited President Suharto to visit Canada but Suharto's reply was not immediately available.

Later in the day, Trudeau will go sightseeing around Jakarta, a city of 4.6 million people.

Total Attack Sought

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — One of President Nixon's most dramatic proposals in his State of the Union message Friday night took up only one paragraph of his speech—his call for a total national commitment to find a cure for cancer.

In asking Congress for an extra $100 million for anti-cancer research and calling for a major mobilization against the disease, Nixon borrowed some ideas from a recent report by a 28-member committee of citizens and scientists.

The committee was set up by Senate resolution last March and recommended Dec. 4 that a new agency of the government be formed to conquer cancer.

It proposed that the agency be given $400 million in the coming 1972 fiscal year, almost doubling cancer research funds.

Nixon, in proposing only $100 million, said he would ask later for additional funds.

The president declared: "The time has come when the same kind of concentrated effort that split the atom and took man to the moon should be turned towards conquering this dread disease. Let us make a total national commitment to achieve this goal."

Egypt Threatens To End Ceasefire

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram says Egypt has told the United States it has not seen enough progress in Ambassador Gunnar Jarring's talks to justify an extension of the Middle East ceasefire beyond its current expiration date of Feb. 5.

Cairo indicated, however, that it might agree to another formal extension of the Arab-Israeli military standdown if the Big Four powers collaborated in "issuing clear and specific directives to help Jarring with his mission," the semi-official newspaper says.

Jarring, the United Nations mediator conducting the peace talks, conferred separately in his New York office Friday with the Egyptian, Israeli and Jordanian UN ambassadors.

SAIGON (AP) — The United States rushed up to 80 tons of war materials to Cambodia today, and a large bomb explosion ripped through a government office in Phnom Penh. The terrorist attack came on the heels of a devastating rocket, mortar and guerrila assault Friday on the Phnom Penh airport. Two U.S. Air Force C-130 transports flew arms, ammunition, spare parts, barbed wire and sandbags into Phnom Penh to help the capital recover from the attack on the airport.

Freighter Captain Criticized

DETROIT (AP) — The captain of a Great Lakes freighter whose ship failed to stop for two men drowning in the Detroit River last November has been found guilty of negligence for not doing more to help them.

The decision was handed down by a United States Coast Guard civilian examiner, and was received at the Detroit marine inspection office Friday.

Maximum possible penalty for the defendant, Captain Burris Wolters of Sandusky, Ohio, is revocation of his captain's licence. Such action would end his sailing career."

The coast guard is expected to insist on revocation, and the defence to appeal the decision —to civil courts if necessary.

In the incident for which the hearing was held, William Caminiti, 35, of Gibraltar, Mich., and F. Bruce LeBold, 39, of Trenton, Mich., were drowned near Bob-Lo Island, downriver from Detroit.

They were still floating in life preservers and calling for help when the coal carrier Sylvania, captained by Mr. Wolters, passed without stopping, the coast guard said.

Mr. Wolters testified he radioed the coast guard immediately and also notified a freighter following his ship. He said he had done all he could do without endangering his own ship and crew.

Liberal Conference

Education Policy Paper Sharp Surprise for Robert Nixon

TORONTO (CP) — A bulky policy paper on education, dubbed Tim's Monster, created a furore at the Ontario Liberal party conference Friday because one of its proposals urged abolition of the province's private school system.

The proposal, if approved by the 1,000 delegates in secret ballot today would be a repudiation of the party caucus and Leader Robert Nixon, who firmly support public aid to separate schools from kindergarten to Grade 13. Results of the vote may not be known until Sunday, last day of the three-day policy conference at the Royal York Hotel, because of procedural difficulties.

Delegates must vote on each of the 86 resolutions in the paper prepared by a special party committee headed by Tim Reid of Toronto, the party's education critic. One official jokingly referred to the paper as "Tim's Monster."

John Wintermeyer, former Liberal leader, and Elmer Sopha, veteran legislature member for Sudbury, appealed to delegates at the plenary session Friday night to reject the abolition proposal to avoid embarrassing Mr. Nixon and the party, particularly with the prospect of a provincial election in the spring.

"I beg you as practical people to avoid a situation where we could undermine steps taken by your caucus and leader in the past year," Mr. Wintermeyer said.

Mr. Sopha said the party could alienate the 3,200,000 people in Ontario who support the separate school by approving the motion.

Election of executive officers Sunday will feature a two-way battle for the party presidency between incumbent John Richard, 35-year-old bilingual lawyer from Ottawa, and Gord Ryan, a Toronto investment dealer.

In a keynote speech to delegates Friday, Mr. Nixon said the Liberals are in a strong position to win the next election because the ruling Progressive Conservative party has become demoralized with the resignation of Premier John Robarts, and the New Democratic Party is too radically socialistic to win the support of the people.

"The time has come for a change," he said, urging delegates to support what he described as a blueprint for government that emphasizes fiscal and administrative reforms and policies geared to relieving the unemployment crisis, poverty, and the encroachment of foreign control in Canadian industry.

Mr. Reid's 21-page document proposed that a majority of members of university teaching staffs be Canadian citizens within two years, and that more Canadians be hired by universities. It also urged that schools hire more teachers trained in various indigenous and ethnic cultures to teach special courses for ethnic groups, a proposal the Conservatives have rejected.

The paper urged provincial support for private schools that are open to the public, and recognized the right of students to strike "as a last resort."

Delegates will also vote on a proposal, contained in the resources paper, by Ottawa student Alexander Cullen for a ban on the operations of resources industries in Ontario parkland, and a program of subsidies to encourage these industries to move to sites in Northern Ontario.

Other resources proposals:

—Any future hydro rate increases be permitted only after intensive examination by a legislature committee.

—Ontario Northland Railway create rate structures to assist secondary industry establish in the north.

—Regional offices of a provincial ombudsmen be established in Northern Ontario.

—Canadian investors or Canadian mills or timber operators be given first opportunity on all resource limits to at least an extent of 55 per cent of new licensing.

—The sale of surplus energy resources, such as water, and electricity be sold to those in need, subject to assurance that the sales would not "dissipate the natural ecological systems."

A 20-point social and community services program included provisions for half-way houses for cured mental patients, family-life education for children and a bill of social rights to include a guaranteed annual income.

The 12-policy conference papers prepared by a team of 100 writers, are to provide the platform the Liberals will promote in the next election.

QIT Cast Selected

PICTON (Staff) — Cast members have been named for the upcoming Quinte Island Theatre production of Cactus Flower which will be performed here February 26 and 27 and March 5 and 6.

The male lead will be Douglas Walmsley who portrays the single - married dentist Dr. Julian Winston. His remarkably efficient secretary is QIT actress Elizabeth Hirst. Dr. Winston's erratic girl friend, Toni Simmons will be played by Janet Alexander. David Taylor will make his stage debut with the QIT in the role of Igor Sullivan, Toni's confidant. Hope Boyd and Rose Fulton appear as two of Dr. Winston's "more unusual" patients.

Feature roles are played by Jeremy Vincent and Wendy Foster while Hugh Kenny and Larry Taylor make cameo appearances.

Several of the Cactus Flower cast are veteran QIT performers but a number of new arrivals will join with them for this production. A theatre spokesman observed that this is in keeping with the QIT philosophy of creating a broad base of experienced actors and theatre buffs in the community.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY

In recent months construction and its related businesses have accounted for a large proportion of the job vacancies listed with the Canada Manpower Centre by local employers. Fortunately present and planned construction is at a record high for this area Although, it is not much consolation for those persons now seeking work, the fact remains that upon completion of shopping centres, motels, educational, institutional and commercial projects, they all require staffs for their operations The workers required are quite frequently wanted for occupations and skills new to the local labor force. Such is the case of one of our new industries which is in the process of initial production of golf clubs.

Meanwhile the present labor market is not only limited but very selective and competitive. It has been observed that persons who are laid off, through no fault of theirs, from long term employment find it difficult to adjust to their new situation, especially as to how and where they can best sell their qualifications to a prospective employer.

For such persons and others experiencing this difficulty, it is recommended that they contact their nearest Canada Manpower Centre in order to discuss their problems with an experienced Manpower counsellor.

A Canada Manpower Centre does offer some important services which may help you to get a new job or improve your prospects for the future. These services come under the federal department of manpower and immigration and are available. free of charge to all Canadians, immigrant or native-born.

Among the many responsible people and organizations very concerned with employment is the Belleville and District Employment Committee. This committee has been working for some time to have a program implemented to assist the young and adult worker who for various reasons finds is extremely difficult to obtain and hold a job.

It is understood that a program called the Ontario seasonal employment program has recently been started which embodies a few of the committee's ideas. That is a number of unemployed workers will be put to work cutting down and clearing dead trees. Possibly more will be heard about this type of work project in the near future.

The old winter works slogan Do It Now, had much to commend it. Why not alleviate the unemployment situation by Doing It Now and get the jump on spring? Workers in most occupations are available now for employment whether it is of a permanent part-time or casual nature. All employers are requested to review their immediate and future labor requirements. If you have such a requirement contact your nearest Canada Manpower Centre. In Belleville the Canada Manpower Centre is located at 324 Church Street, telephone 962-8681.

None of the four discussed the talks with reporters, but it was apparent that Jarring had not received Israel's reply to Arab complaints that the latest Israeli proposal offered nothing new.

Some diplomats said they expect the Israeli cabinet to agree on a reply by Sunday and that it would be delivered to Jarring the following day.

In London, The Daily Express reports that Israel is prepared to withdraw from 95 per cent of the occupied Arab territories, including certain parts of Jerusalem to secure permanent peace in the Middle East. The newspaper says the Israeli proposition has been put before Jarring, but not officially.

Defence correspondent Chapman Pincer, who has no sources for his report, says the settlement could include giving Jordan back the Dome of the Rock, the Al Aksah Mosque and other holy places in Jerusalem, with guaranteed Arab access through the parts of the Old City that would remain under Israeli control

The peace plan would also include Israel's pulling out of occupied Sinai, except for Sharm el Sheikh, which controls the Gulf of Aqaba, the dispatch says.

"And the Israelis are even prepared to consider withdrawing from Kuneitra, and even other Arab areas in the Golan Heights provided they can retain the small zone which previously allowed the Syrians to shell their settlements," Pincer writes

In Cairo, a four-nation Arab summit conference concluded three days of deliberations Friday with a unanimous decision to "mobilize Arab resources and potentialities" for liberating occupied Arab lands. ..

DR. M. JOSEPHINE FLAHERTY

Ready to Race

Bellevillians soon may be introduced to the newest of popular winter sports — snowmobile racing. City parks board members today were said to favor races in city next month for sportsmen like Doug Knight, among local enthusiasts of the sport.

Board Approves Snowmobile Races

Bellevillians next month will get their first glimpse of a new sport which has become a major event in other Ontario communities — organized snowmobile races.

Parks board chairman Alderman Paul Russell today said a canvass of board members revealed a favorable consensus to permit the races Feb. 20-21 at the Quinte Exhibition Grounds.

Thursday night the board deferred granting a request from Quinte Exhibition directors to allow the races.

The decision was delayed while more information was sought, said Ald. Russell, who contacted board members by telephone last night.

The board now will formally confirm its decision at a later date, said the chairman.

Organized snowmobile racing, while it has not yet been seen in the city, already has its devotees among Bellevillians.

Douglas Knight, an avid participant, estimates there could be about a score of interested racing enthusiasts in the Belleville area.

Mr Knight, racing in Huntsville this weekend with four other local enthusiasts, points out the enthusiasm with which the sport has caught on elsewhere in the province, under the sponsorship of the Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation.

Picton has been the Quinte-area community which has had notable success with the trend, he says.

It's a sport that's taken seriously by its participants — special racing machines can cost around $1,700.

Besides introducing a new spectator sport to the public, such races also benefit the community, said Mr. Knight.

"Races can draw from 150 to 200 entries — and they come from all over," he says.

Local business benefits from the money spent by the snowmobilers during their stay.

Thin Thief Bags Booze

A thin thief made off with a small haul of whisky from the East End plaza liquor store early today.

Police say the thief had to squeeze through bars about seven inches apart in a rear window to gain entry to the store. About eight bottles of whisky were reported missing

The window is about 15 feet above ground and wooden pallettes — used on fork-lift trucks — were taken from the rear of a nearby food store and piled up to the window

To reach the window on the way out, the thief stacked beer cases from liquor store stock against the inside wall

Police were called to the scene around 1 a.m. when a passerby saw a figure climbing back through the window

Nixon's Six Goals

over the present levels.

The remaining $10,000 million would come from converting one-third of existing grant-in-aid money that goes to specific programs such as urban renewal and the Model Cities scheme to broad block grants.

Terming the plan a move "to rescue the states and localities from the brink of financial crisis," he proposed the money be given with a minimum of strings attached. He said:

"Let's face it. Most Americans today are simply fed up with government at all levels.

"They will not—and should not—continue to tolerate the gap between promises and performance."

Ironically, the promises-performance phrase seems to touch on what is likely to be at the centre of criticism of Nixon's message.

To many observers—and probably even Nixon himself—it seemed inevitable that there will be a long time gap between the picture he paints for the U.S. in the near future and the actual accomplishment of his "six great goals."

Congress increasingly hostile toward the Republican administration in the dying months of the 91st Congress last year, is unlikely to move with great haste on a program that can only enhance Nixon's image as a leader as he enters the third year of his four-year presidential term.

Of the 12 present federal departments, the post office is already scheduled to become a corporation next August in a plan similar to that favored in Canada.

Otherwise, the reorganization would be the most extensive revision in the cabinet since the creation in 1789 of the first four departments—state, treasury and what now are known as defence and justice.

These four would remain unaffected under the Nixon plan. But the departments of agriculture, commerce, labor and transportation would disappear as separate entities. Many of their functions—often parallel and sometimes in conflict—would be combined in a new department of economic development.

The department of interior, of housing and urban development and of health, education and welfare would lose their present names and become cores, respectively, of the new departments of natural resources, community development and human resources.

As an example of the present mixup of responsibilities, the agriculture department now handles the food stamp program, whereby the poor—whose other wants are administered by the health, education and welfare departments—qualify for food at discounted prices.

As with the revenue-sharing plan, this administrative shakeup is bound to cause long and tedious debate Consolidation on a much more modest scale has been attempted before and ran into a wall of opposition from bureaucrats who lobbied successfully against the loss of their little kingdoms.

Although Republicans were quick to hail the message as a program for progress, Democrats are bound to suspect political motives behind almost every Nixon proposal.

Advertising With A Punch

PICTON (Staff) — A former Prince Edward County warden, Roy Ketcheson, Picton, yesterday was struck by a sign of the times while standing on Main Street.

Mr. Ketcheson was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for examination after an overhanging plastic sign advertising a Main Street paint-and-wallpaper shop fell and struck him on the side of the head.

A spokesman for the Picton police department said he was nearby when the mishap occurred and had just instructed a group of youngsters to move on before the sign fell.

Mr. Ketcheson was released from hospital following examination to determine possible injury.

IN MEMORIAM

BARTLEY — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away two years ago today.

A light is from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
Some may think you are forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more,
But in memory you are with us,
As you always were before.

—Remembered by daughter Marjorie and son-in-law Fred and grandchildren.

ACERRA — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Yvonne who passed away one year ago today.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true.
There's not a day, dear mother,
We do not think of you.

—Sadly missed by daughter J[illegible] and grandchildren Robert and [illegible]by.

CROSS — In loving memory of a dear wife, Margaret Cross who died two years ago, January 23, 1969.

Within my heart I'll always,
Keep a special place for you,
And try to do my best for you,
As you would want me to.
It's sad to walk the road alone,
Instead of side by side,
But to all there comes a moment,
When the ways of life divide.
You gave me years of happiness,
Then came sorrow and tears,
But you left me beautiful memories,
I will cherish through the years.

Candidates Woo Delegates

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Today's late afternoon visit to Belleville by Education Minister William Davis was the second to the Quinte area by contenders for leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

All five announced candidates for the post are stepping up their campaigns as the convention date draws nearer. Belleville will be visited by Mines Minister Allan Lawrence next Friday and other leadership hopefuls are expected to pay a call before the February 10-12 meeting that will decide their fate.

The five candidates continued Friday to agree with each other that Ontario is a wonderful place to live, and will get even better.

Around the province Friday, the cabinet minister candidates for retiring Premier John Robarts' job dropped promises of such improvements as equality for all Indians, an ombudsman, more loans for small businessmen, an economy controlled by Canadians, and strict regulation of logging in Algonquin Provincial Park.

Allan Lawrence, mines and northern affairs minister, told a Wingham gathering that if he were an Indian he would want to break out of the reserve and live just as everyone else.

However, he said this was an issue to be decided by the Indians themselves.

He said that "if one of your (Indian) complaints is that we have been pushing you around for decades, then this is your opportunity to come forward and tell us what it is you want done."

In Stratford, Mr. Lawrence said the government has paid too much attention to industrial loans for large corporations at the expense of small businessmen. He said more assistance should be given to small operators and industries to expand, with Canadian firms getting priority.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch said in Kitchener the government should appoint an ombudsman through whose office citizens could seek redress for grievances against government bureaucracy.

"I'm concerned for the individual rights of our citizens as we move into the 1970s and beyond. Civil liberties and individual rights will become a prime focus of those wishing to serve the people of Ontario."

Mr. Welch later refused to say whether or not he personally favors government support to separate high schools beyond Grade 10.

Meanwhile, in Cobourg, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said Canedians must be ready to invest "twice as much as we have in the past to maintain control of 51 per cent of new industry in the province."

He said he didn't want to stop outside investment, and added he would continue to grant forgivable loans to Ontario plants owned by Americans in order to provide growth and continued employment.

In Peterborough, Mr. McKeough told area leadership convention delegates that economic nationalism, the fight against pollution and establishment of a more people-conscious government are the chief problems that will face the new leader.

Bert Lawrence, commercial affairs minister, told a Pembroke audience he favors a special agency to oversee commercial logging in nearby Algonquin Park.

Logging by licence "no longer enjoys the confidence of the public and an alternative to the lease-inspection system must be looked at," he said.

"Substantial cutting is good for forestry but judgment should not be left to a handful of civil servants and companies."

In Toronto, Revenue Minister John White gave his support to Education Minister William Davis in his bid for the leadership. That gives him the declared support of 11 cabinet ministers for the Feb. 10-12 convention in Maple Leaf Gardens.

Mr. Welch will visit Hamilton, Oakville and Toronto today and tour the suburbs Sunday. Ottawa, Perth, Brockville and Prescott will see Bert Lawrence today and he will spend the day in Toronto before visiting Orangeville Sunday night.

Mr. McKeough visits Peterborough today and Chatham Sunday while Mr. Davis travels to Belleville and Kingston and returns to Toronto tonight and Sunday. Allan Lawrence stays in Toronto.

Exhibitors Picked For New Gallery

PICTON — The Thompson studio-gallery will open January 29 with a group of seven Prince Edward County artists exhibiting their works in the Armoury Mall. Among the exhibitors are Iona Grindrod, Donna Cameron, Donald Dawson, Jerry Putman, Frank Johnston, William Kettlewell and Allan Cameron.

A business meeting Thursday evening created enthusiasm in the group as artists praised one another's works and discussed effective methods of framing and presentation.

Mr. Thompson explained that the studio-gallery accepts only paintings by professional artists and not the works of "Sunday painters". He added that the term "professional" does not necessarily describe the quality of the paintings displayed but indicates that the artists rely on their work for the larger portion of their income. For studio-gallery exhibitors art is a way of life rather than a hobby. Each member of the group of seven painters is a Prince Edward County resident.

Mr. Thompson, said yesterday that the studio-gallery has already become a gathering place for county artists and a large volume of telephone calls has indicated wide public interest in next week's opening.

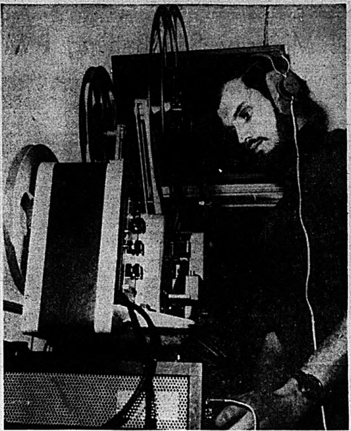
All paintings on display will be offered for sale with prices ranging from $45. to $350. It is expected that Belleville and Kingston will provide the biggest markets for the artists' works. The studio-gallery will be staffed by secretary-receptionist Helen Mitchell and Lloyd Thompson each day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. except Wednesdays and Sundays.

Although all paintings shown are for sale, Mr. Thompson emphasized that all works displayed are for enjoyment of the general public. School teachers have been invited to tour the studio with student groups interested in contemporary art.

Special Agent Transferred

Fred Howard, special agent in charge of Canadian National Railways police in the Belleville area for the past nine years, has been promoted and transferred to western Ontario.

Mr. Howard, a veteran of 28 year's service with the railroad, has been appointed inspector of railroad police for southwestern Ontario, and will be stationed at London.



Sound on Film Simultaneously

The reels on the right side of this machine operated by Geoff Webster, contain a color film which is being projected into the recording studio at Loyalist College. The pianist in the studio, while observing the film, is dubbing a sound track onto the reel on the left side. When physically matched at the processing laboratory, a magnetic transfer will place the music on the film.

Musical Matching

Lance Bailey, a third-year communication arts student at Loyalist College adds his personally composed music to an 8-minute color film produced at the college. He has re-arranged his own compositions so that they can be played as folk, beat or orchestrated pieces. Although he has five tunes to his credit, he can't write a note. The music remains in his head.

Adding Sound to Film Is A Tricky Business

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

The lips move and nothing happens. Out of nowhere a voice is heard. The lips move again, but with no sound.

When a 2½-hour movie is edited for television, becoming 90 minutes of film plus a half hour of advertising, something ends up on the cutting room floor.

If the editors are clever, sound and film maintain their balance. But all too often there is a noticeable difference between what an actor says visibly and what is heard.

Matching the visible and the audible is a fine art . . . one which takes years of practice.

When a movie is being filmed, the sound track is made at the same time as the action. Quite often, where background noise is present, the actor will re-record his lines.

The tracks on voice tape are then matched up by technicians at the film studio.

Loyalist College began movie filming on professional equipment last year. They graduated this year from black and white to color and the first of these films is almost "in the can".

Editing equipment allows the students to cut and edit their own work after processing in an outside film laboratory, but up until now the finished product has been a silent movie.

Geoff Webster, a first year communication arts student and free - lance photographer who has worked with the National Film Board of Canada, is the producer and editor of Loyalist's first sound - on - film movie.

The film, entitled "Preparing for Christmas in Upper Canada" centres around a simple country kitchen scene of pioneer days. Filmed at McPherson House in Napanee, the 8 - minute feature was filmed with characters in period dress.

Filmed during pre-Christmas festivities, the finished, spliced product received its soundtrack yesterday.

Or at least, the soundtrack was recorded.

Regular recording tape is eight millimetres wide but for the movie purposes, 16 millimetre tape with regular film threading holes is used.

Mr. Webster explained that the holes on the tape allow the editors to perfectly match the film to the sound.

Sound for this production is original music composed by third year student Lance Bailey. The pieces, entitled "A Place" and "Sing Out My Children" form a harmonious and melodic background for the film.

With the movie running through the projection part of the machine, Mr. Bailey added the music via live piano from the sound-proof studio to the simultaneously running recording reels attached to the projection machine.

This multi-purpose machine allowed the pair to view the film with the music accompanying it at the same time.

The result, as far as the viewer was concerned, was a finished movie.

A major time - consuming job, both reels were physically marked to allow the laboratory to magnetically transfer the sound from the recording tape onto film surface. Only after this final phase, would the film be ready for regular projection.

And then the sound track split in the middle.

Although carefully patched, the cracks were audible.

The result: back to the projection room for Mr. Webster and back to the piano keys for Mr. Bailey.

Although noticeably distressed, the film producer had carefully patched the tape together in a manner similar to his film editing.

"You must keep your cool in this business," he said.

Taking time from his repairs, Mr. Webster explained that a major advantage in using this type of equipment is the simultaneous editing.

He said that both the moving film and the sound track, on separate, reels, could be edited at the same time, at the same point.

For films including dialogue this allows the editor to clip a piece of film, together with the corresponding words, thereby doing away with a visible voice and no sound.

"We're lucky with this film having only a musical background . . . we can go back and project the film and Lance can easily replay the music."

"But not today!"

"When things look grim . . . they really are," he said resignedly.

"PARTICIPATION" . . .

Man is challenged to participate in the sufferings of God at the hands of a godless world.

He must therefore plunge himself into the life of a godless world, without attempting to gloss over its ungodliness with a veneer of religion or trying to transfigure it. He must live a worldly life and so participate in the sufferings of God . . . To be a Christian does not mean to be religious in a particular way, to cultivate some form of asceticism — but to be a man. It is not some religious act which makes a Christian what he is, but a participation in the suffering of God in the life of the world.

U Thant to Retire

It has been a long haul for United Nations Secretary-General U Thant, longer even than either of his two predecessors who between them put in 15 years in this thankless and exacting diplomatic post.

The Burmese diplomat has announced he will not serve beyond the end of his term this year. By then he will have completed two terms, or ten years in the service of the international body.

It hardly seems possible that a decade has gone since Dag Hammarskjold died in that plane crash in the Congo; the Swede had occupied the post since 1953 when he took over from Trygve Lie of Norway. The latter was the UN's inaugural secretary-general from 1946.

U Thant is a conscientious, quietly-spoken diplomat who nevertheless has never hesitated during his long term of office to warn nations about their conduct, and the world at large of the dangers of wilful and unilateral policies.

He has served the world body well. Even if it has not always been as effective as we could have wished, its continued existence and the value of its many affiliated bodies cannot be discounted. In no small measure U Thant has helped to make this possible.

Newspaper's 150 Years

Celebrating 150 years of publication, The Recorder and Times of Brockville has put out an interesting anniversary edition. Only newspapers in Halifax, Quebec City, Montreal, Toronto and Kingston, notes the R and T, can lay claim to greater age, although some have not been in continuous publication under the same name.

Reproduced on the front page of the special supplement is a scrap from the earliest issue of the newspaper known to be in existence. It is dated June 26, 1821 when the publication was still young. Founded by Chauncey Beach, the first publication of The Weekly Recorder came off the press on January 16 of that year.

Little is known of Mr. Beach, except that he came to Brockville from The Kingston Herald in 1820 and two years later vanished from the scene after selling his little weekly to William Buell, a prominent United Empire Loyalist.

In a message that goes with the supplement, president M. O. P. MacNaughton notes that since its founding in 1821, The Recorder had always espoused the cause of reform and had thus supported the Liberal party in politics throughout most of its life. In the 1940s it supported, for the first time, the Conservative party in Ontario. This year, however, with the change of the company name to The Recorder and Times Ltd., the newspaper's Liberal political affiliation was dropped and its status is now that of an independent.

One of the long-term employees of The Recorder and Times is Mrs. Lillian Lucy, a former Intelligencer staff member. A linotype operator, Mrs. Lucy first learned the skill on the old Brockville Daily Times. On amalgamation with The Recorder in 1918 there was a surplus of operators, so 18-year-old Lillian Armstrong went to Perth, then to Chatham and Peterborough. On her marriage she lived in California, but her husband died and she came to Belleville, returning again to Brockville 13 years ago.

For Mrs. Lucy it has been a remarkable span in the employ of newspapers in this province. For The Recorder and Times it has been an even more remarkable span in the development of Brockville — it is the community's oldest industry — and of this province.

Days To Come

In these dismal mid-winter days it is a relief to observe some hints of the summer which is staggering a shade closer with each passing day. We refer to full-page fashion spreads on such phenomena as the Paris-inspired "hot pants" outfit.

The pants were shown among Christian Dior's spring collection in London recently and they are shorts of a sort, if you know what we mean! They are seen too as the latest threat to the miniskirt which, as we all know, absolutely refuses to get lost.

It is all symbolic of warmer days and interesting sights to come. The Windsor Star, we note, has shown pictures of young women in beach wear, but since even balmy Windsor-area beaches are not yet fit for visiting the newspaper had one of its artists sketch in a beach scene.

Threat from Left-wing and Civil Libertarians

Vocal Minority Still Battling P M's Hard-Line Policy

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA. — "Just watch me" softly said Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau last October at the height of the FLQ kidnap-murder terror, when asked by what he scorned as a "bleeding heart" CBC newsman "how far" he would go to smash the anarchy in Quebec.

The CBC reporter, dropping his mask of objective newsman, and revealing himself as well, for want of a more precise term, a "social commentator," was obviously outraged by the Government's massive measures against the FLQ.

The sight of "armed troops," as he described them, almost as if they were invaders from abroad or even another planet, was horrifying. What was happening to civil liberties, and just how hard-line could a Prime Minister under pressure get?

Just before he flew out for the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in Singapore, under continuous nattering, petulant questioning and the posturing of civil libertarians, he finally revealed precisely "how far."

As far, he disclosed, as coming to a firm decision to ask Parliament to pass some measure of new and permanent emergency powers . . . and hanging tough on it.

Never again, he has made it plain, will the nation be left without the required authority to preserve and protect civil order.

The strange thing is, in retrospect, that the Prime Minister seemed to sense what was coming almost a year before the October nightmare of Quebec.

In a speech at Queen's University he spoke of the increasing threat of disorder from within, diminishing the peril of attack from without — in the sense that in the months and years to come Canadians might find the need for troops more urgent at home than abroad.

Peace-keeping in Faraway Places, said the Prime Minister, was fine, but let us make sure we can keep order at home.

And then came October in Quebec and a tough French-Canadian Prime Minister in Ottawa invoked the War Measures Act, and then replaced it with the Public Order Act which, under the legislation, is scheduled to self-destruct on April 30.

Before then, the Prime Minister has let it be known, almost casually in an interview with eight civil libertarians from Quebec, there will be some new and more flexible public order measures written into the law of the land.

It was good news to the over 80 percent of Canadians who initially approved the Prime Minister's smashing counter-attack on Quebec's "October Revolutionaries," but bad news for those Pierre Trudeau has brushed aside as the "bleeding hearts."

On the surface it does not look like much of a match.

There, on one side, is the Prime Minister with the overwhelming majority of Canadians with him.

And there, on the other side, is that small band loud in its lamentations.

But it is not as one-sided as it looks.

That tiny minority is artful in the use, even the manipulation of the news media which, in some areas, especially certain segments of TV, seems more than willing to be manipulated, very vocal and speaking with the voice of the self-styled intellectual.

Furthermore, it aspires to the altogether desirable aura of respectability, truth, justice, liberty and social reform.

It has political allies in Parliament: almost all of the New Democratic MPs, and a thin splinter of socialist-tinged Conservatives.

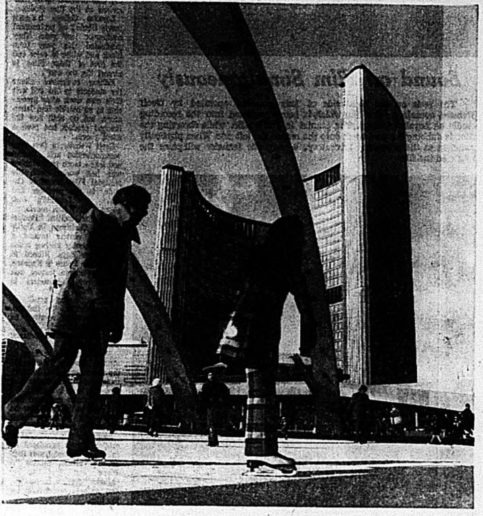
Those who speak, or pretend to speak for it, already are at work, transforming the kidnap-murder revolutionaries from the "criminals" the Prime Minister publicly said they were to almost respectable, and to some, romantic status of "political prisoners."

On trial, the way these elements see it, are not prisoners, even "political prisoners," but the "system," and society itself.

The Prime Minister and Quebec Premier Bourassa both have been under increasing pressure to toe the demanded soft line.

And now, having revealed plans for a permanent public order law, the Prime Minister has been served formal notice by the loosely-organized but quickly rank-closing civil liberties groups that he will face, as one of their spokesmen put it, "an all-out battle."

These battle lines already are drawn and the worrisome thing to the majority in Parliament, and probably across Canada, is that the civil libertarians are determined and dedicated and gathering power while all the rest of us start losing interest and getting caught up in other urgencies.



Skaters' Waltz

Toronto is a swinging city to be sure. Even in the big metropolis one can spare time from the workaday world, put on a pair of skates and do one's thing while still managing to look mod. Anyway, that is the way it seems with this couple as they have a whirl on the ice in front of the City Hall. (Ontario Department of Tourism and Information picture.)

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

January 23, 1951

More than 200 Army and Navy Veterans of Belleville chose W. J. Ford as their president for 1951 at their last meeting. Others on the executive are A. Galbraith, first vice-president; R. E. Denike, second vice-president; K. Edgecome, secretary; and J. H. Wells, treasurer.

Mrs. Phillip (Lavina) Allore has completed 50 years in the hotel business in this city and district and for the past 41 years in this city has, along with her husband and son, Walter Allore, conducted one of the finest hotels in the province.

Approximately 35 representatives of the Fleischman Distillery Corporation of New York arrived in the city today. While here they were the guests of Wilfred Laporte and officials of the Corby Distilleries Ltd. at a luncheon at the Hotel Quinte.

30 YEARS AGO

January 23, 1941

The prowess of the Quinte Skating Club as winter entertainers is heralded throughout all of Eastern Ontario, where the club and its individual specialists are in weekly demand for ice carnivals in all parts of the district. Members of the Club have appeared as guest skating artists from as far east as Gananoque, to Cobourg, Port Hope and even Peterborough, as the local organization is recognized as one of the outstanding clubs of its kind in the province. Too much credit cannot be given the Quinte Skating Club in its entirety for the honors and recognition its members have brought to this city in their humble manner.

The Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, former Rector of Christ Church here, and later Rector of St. Mark's Church in Toronto, has been appointed Vicar of St. John's Church in Peterborough, and has assumed his new duties.

Dr. Cronk has been appointed acting Medical Health Officer of this city during the absence of Dr. H. A. Yeomans, who has been granted three months' leave of absence.

More on Prescription Drugs

Letter to the Hamilton Spectator

Please allow me to thank Eric Piurko for his detailed breakdown of the dispensing fee. To me it seems the breakdown only confirms the injustice involved in the whole system.

Mr. Piurko lists three different costs. 1) According to him, the costs of a container, a label and a receipt and inventory cost come to $1.38 per prescription. An average container is a six-ounce bottle which may cost five cents. Then take the label. First of all the customer would like to know what medicine he is taking, and by whom it was manufacturered. No label gives this information Anyone who has bought a medicine knows from where he has bought it. So the label which the druggist forces upon the customer has no more use to the latter. It is only a piece of advertisement for the druggist himself. Even if the customer has to pay for it, would it cost more than a cent apiece?

Then the inventory cost — the cost of recording on a card just a number indicating how much was sold out. Is it an hour's labor to charge more than a dollar for it? All together these costs should not exceed 15 cents in my opinion.

Then we are given a list of indirect costs, such as rent, taxes, insurance, etc., for which 26 cents are charged per prescription. All these are incidental to all business. If, every time you buy a loaf of bread or a packet of cigarettes, you are asked to pay an additional 26 cents, what would you say?

Next on the list is the entrepreneural profit of 25 cents per prescription. I would say this is a very unrealistic statement. How many of the readers would believe that the pharmacist's profit on a sale of $25 medicine is just 25 cents? I don't. If the profit is based on a reasonably graded percentage system (a higher percentage on smaller values and a smaller percentage on bigger values) there may not be any serious complaint.

Then to provide that the percentage system of profit is really a loss to the customer, Mr. Piurko has introduced a new mathematics. If the actual cost of a medicine is $6. 40 per cent profit on it comes to $2.40 under both the old and the modern mathematics; but under pharmacy mathematics it works to $4. Students, please take note!

However, in Mr. Piurko's concluding paragraph there is a green leaf for those suffering from chronic illnesses. Don't buy your drugs in dozens, ounces or milligrams; get them in grosses, gallons and kilograms. You can save a lot! Did I not say in my letter of December 22 that if we have allowed drugs to take the place of bread and butter in our daily life, the present system of drug sale is the best?

Is David Lewis Playing Politics?

Granby La Voix de l'Est—David Lewis, House leader of the New Democratic Party, has been talking a lot recently. He lets no occasion pass without expressing himself on one or another of the great problems of the times.

But would he talk so much if he were not one of the hopefuls for the leadership of his party?

Would he, for example, be so interested in the War Measures Act, the conditions of the prisoners and the exceptional powers possessed by Quebec police by virtue of this legislation? This may be doubtful.

Mr Lewis would be well advised, meanwhile, to think before speaking. This would stop him from talking foolishly. . . .

It appears to us that the current leaders are well enough situated to know if this legislation . . . is necessary in Quebec.

The fact that Mr. Lewis avoided accusing the government of bad faith at the time of the invocation of the War Measures Act leads one to believe that the House leader of the NDP is not fully convinced that his criticisms are well founded.

Mr Lewis could, however, ask himself if it is logical to make politics out of such a serious problem, one to which Quebec has not yet found a final solution.

A Conflict of Interest

Brockville Recorder and Times

"Jousting with windmills".

That's the way Mr. Donald R. Price, of Gananoque, former chairman of the Leeds and Grenville Board of Education put it when this newspaper, on December 14, called on the members of the Board to take a look at the School Administration Act as it related to Mr. Eldon Guthrie and the conflict of interest that has obtained since the Board first started buying portable wooden classrooms from a firm of which Mr. Guthrie was a director. It is a point that this newspaper had been trying to make with the Board for two years.

We all have to eat humble pie from time to time and there's a couple of people that are likely doing it now that Mr. Guthrie has resigned. It is to the credit of Mr. Guthrie that once he received a legal opinion, he submitted his resignation. He could have been spared the necessity of having to go through the experience if someone had taken the trouble to look at the School Administration Act when the first business transactions were questioned.

By resigning now, rather than [illegible] year or the year before Mr. Guthrie has saved the Board the problem of having to check and possibly retrace actions of the Board involving Mr. Guthrie, and even the possible return of remuneration.

There are further technicalities in the School Administration Act that are open to interpretation. These have to do with the filling of the vacancy created by Mr. Guthrie's resignation. The Act states that it must be done "at the next meeting" following submission of the resignation. It could be interpreted that the "next meeting" was the first meeting, Monday night. This should be a matter of legal opinion.

The School Administration Act doesn't require the Board to appoint a person from North Leeds to fill the vacancy creation. It would be following precedent, however, if the Board asked Mrs Dorothy Cannon, of Portland, to fill that vacancy It is a precedent that was established by this Board and one that is a good one to follow. The Board requires the voice of two women and Mrs. Pamela Bliss, we're sure would welcome another of her sex, as would the mothers of Leeds and Grenville. While Mr. Guthrie is eligible under the Act to be renamed to the seat, we cannot foresee him wanting to return or the Board members and electorate favoring such a turn of events. Should such a move be attempted successfully the Board would place itself in the position, over the next two years, of having to challenge his right to sit if the need for more portable wooden classrooms arose. Surely the members of the Board wouldn't want to go through such manoeuvring.

But this is presupposing that Mr. Guthrie would want to return to the Board. As a conscientious citizen, he wouldn't . . . or are we again jousting with windmills?

Synod Will Be Asked to OK Referendum on Church Union

TORONTO (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada meeting in Niagara Falls, Ont., next week will be asked to approve a nation-wide referendum of Anglicans 18 and older on the question of union with the United Church of Canada.

The resolution comes from a study group appointed by the church's committee on organization which has been studying what steps would be needed to effect union with other churches.

The two churches have been discussing union for months between themselves and more recently with the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

The proposed referendum would be at least four years away.

The synod, made up of almost 300 bishops, clergy and lay persons representing 2,500,000 Anglicans in dioceses across Canada, will meet Jan. 24-Feb. 2.

A resolution on South Africa will come before the synod from the national and world program division. If passed, it would call on the federal government to stop encouraging trade with South Africa and would condemn apartheid.

It asks the government to "make credible its professed policies so that the economic growth of Canadians will not be achieved at the price of compromising the concern of Canadians for black Africans who are the victims of apartheid."

A report of a study committee on Christian initiation headed by Dr. J. R. H. Dempster, a layman from Vancouver, will recommend a change in liturgy that would eliminate the service of confirmation as a prerequisite for taking first holy communion.

The report has already been approved by the committee on doctrine and worship headed by R. L. Seaborn, Bishop of Newfoundland.

Confirmation is a service in which baptized persons—customarily but not necessarily in their early teens—renew vows made for them at baptism. A bishop performs "laying-on-of-hands" and persons subsequently take their first holy communion.

In the early Christian church, says the report, this took place at the same time as baptism. But because it came into custom that only bishops could confirm, the service became a separate one.

The motion is that laying-on-of-hands be reunited with baptism and that renewal of baptismal vows be retained separately for mature Christians. This would result in baptism being the only requirement for holy communion, much as it is in both the Roman Catholic and United churches.

The general synod is normally held every two years. This time it is scheduled only 16 months after the last one at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ont., to coincide with the United Church's general council also meeting in Niagara Falls.

There will be no recommendation for or against women being ordained because a committee on the subject has not completed its study.

The group working on procedure for union said in its report:

"Under its constitution the United Church will go into any union as a whole or not at all. It cannot be assumed that a decision by the Anglican Church of Canada as a whole . . . would constitutionally carry into the union a diocese whose synod and people rejected the union."

It says the undesireable consequences of only part of the church entering are so great that union should not be entered into unless all dioceses ultimately approve.

After Sordid Years, They Have Found God

TORONTO (CP) — Marg Unruh and Ken Caveney, in many ways dissimilar yet with much in common, have never met.

Perhaps they will now for their pictures and their stories, startlingly alike, were in the same edition of a Toronto newspaper recently.

MARG UNRUH

Each says that after sordid years he found God. Each, in his own way, seeks to pass on the message.

She is 23, he 30. Both are children of the streets.

Marg Unruh, a sweet-faced former alcoholic and an admitted shoplifter, once considered suicide but couldn't face the final step. Now she serves God by singing to Him in a tavern.

KEN CAVENEY

Rough, tough Ken Caveney serves J.C.—street parlance for Jesus Christ—by writing about Him in church periodicals, picking up just enough "scratch" to pay for the $15-a-week room in which he lives behind a midtown barber shop.

Marg spent a year with a rock group, working small clubs and school dances in Ottawa. She didn't take drugs—"I would have taken dope if it had been the thing to do when I grew up"—but she tried all the other popular vices. On the side, she did some "lifting" in stores.

Eight months ago she decided to end it all but "I just couldn't do it—I thought I was too young to die."

She said in an interview that there and then she sat down and wrote her first song, For the First Time. It tells about loneliness and alienation and the problems of today's world. Her style is folkish and her guitar work, like her singing, strong but unschooled.

She's written other songs and performed in public for the first time in a downtown bar. She's been offered a one-week booking in February in a better-class tavern.

"I just know that what happened to me was a result of something supernatural that I know as God. . . ." she says. "Now my bag is telling other people where they can find out what I found out."

Ken Caveney learned on the streets of Toronto how to steal and to roll drunks. He quit school after failing every course but English.

In 1965, he says, then a barrel-chested, tough, mean guy with a low boiling point, with a jail record, he met an Anglican priest and "Jesus kicked me in the heart."

Through his writings he seeks to reach "the whores, dope users, winos, ex-cons, all those people—my friends."

He's taking a three-year college course in social work and is paying his way, and eating now and then, with his earnings from his writings and other work.

He put his philosophy simply:

"When I finish this course, I want to work for a church. Some people tell me Jesus is a crutch. If He is, He's the strongest one I can find and it sure beats money. . . .

"Here's the way I look at it. You've got $10 and you want to take your broad out to a show. You want to show her off to your friends. When I go places, I want to take Jesus with me, because He's a beautiful gift from His old man."

MEANINGFUL — BIBLE CENTRED AND CHALLENGING

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

WINTER

"When days are short and nights are long . . ." Francis Gay.

* * *

Since winter casts all in its spell, let's for fun — spell winter :

W — for Wood that feeds the fireplace, spreading warmth and cheer all around. A Belleville grandmother feels the burning wood arouses memories.

"Especially in January," she says, "for this was the month chosen by my mother and each of her three sisters, when it came their turn to marry, for their wedding month. Even the wedding day date was the same — the ninth. The married sisters lived within visiting distance, and each took turns in celebrating their wedding anniversaries. For me all during my childhood, January stands out as a winter month for wonderful family gatherings overflowing with love, plenty of fun, laughter and special dishes of favorite food."

I — for Ice and those tangible formidable teeth of winter: icicles. Also for intricacy. Look at the intricacy and symmetry of a snowflake. Someone suggests, if inspected through a glass on a dark sleeve or a square of dark material, "a fantastic half-hidden world of order and inconceivable variety" reveals itself. Yet, no two are alike, though all are "based on the six-pointed star for their designs." What intricacy of filigreed icery indeed!

N — for New seed catalogues, which the seed industries begin to send all flower-lovers about the end of January. To make life easier for the gardener this year, plastic tapes encased with flower or vegetable seed spaced for growing in the garden row are available. All the homeowner needs to do is plant the tape in a soil furrow at the proper depth the particular seed requires and eventually the tape dissolves with soil moisture.

T — for Trees - stripped of foliage and flowering plants, show their true nature in winter, to which line and sweep of trunks, limbs and twigs add beauty and interest. One of the most graceful in silhouette in winter is the elm. White birches seem a part of winter, which seen against the snow brightens the day.

E — for Erase. Entirely blotted out, erased from sight and memory are spring, summer, autumn. Vanished are the green shimmer budding leaves of spring, the full ruffly leaves of summer, the gay colorful ones of autumn. Only the needles of the evergreen trees withstand the annihilating hand of winter. But with winter's great snow-blanket, the scars, injuries and wounds these very seasons may have dealt the earth is gently, firmly erased from view: serenity remains.

R — for Rummage. Now is the time, the quiet time, when one can go through old chests, desk drawers, closet shelves or attics in search of old paper articles. Things like personal and business cards, Valentines, brochures, magazines private correspondence of all kinds, deeds: even old wallpaper which designers and historical researchers find of value. All these things which because of their sentimental value have escaped destruction are now valuable and collectors' items. Early telephone or street directories, theatre tickets, documents for sale of property, bills and receipts, menus of feast, hand-written invitations to social activities . . . all these are potential money-makers.

Well, W-I-N-T-E-R as a season is quite spell-binding!

An Edwardian Revival Done in White and Gold

Nippon is an Anglicized pronunciation of the Japanese word for Japan. It appears on many articles made in Japan after 1891 and before regulations regarding country of origin and manufacture were enforced in the 1920s.

One of the patterns issued in Japan and prevalent in Canada and the United States is modelled on the cup and saucer illustrated. The style is an Edwardian revival of an adamesque empire design, done in white and gold.

The cup and saucer shown was made in 1912 for Tiffany's in New York by Royal Crown Derby. It is part of a service for 24, specially ordered. The gold was fired twice to obtain the raised effect and a team of the best gliders worked on separate parts of the design. It took 18 months to complete.

White and gold was a popular combination and there were many imitations of this design. The Japanese version is similar but not as elborate, although the design is raised and the embossed effect is much the same.

The cost of the Tiffany set was astronomical in 1912 and expensive by modern standards. By comparison, Nippon china, which appears mostly in cups and saucers and tea, coffee or chocolate sets, was inexpensive in its day and is still relatively cheap.

China made in Japan for a mass European market (which included North America) was high quality in the 1890s and early 1900s. Much of it was eggshell china, thin and delicate, hand painted in imitation of Limoges and Beleek.

Bridal Rose, one of the commonsest Limoges patterns, was imitated in Nippon china. It is still cheaper than Limoges of the same period. Eggshell china has had a certain vogue, appears at auctions and is rising in price.

Eggshell is frequently not marked with a country of origin. Many pieces are simply marked "Hand-Painted". The hand painting is usually only the gilding, and the designs (which are very un-Japanese) are transfer printed, particularly the pieces that imitate Limoges.

Eggshell china is as translucent as its namesake and extremely thin. It stands up surprisingly well. Later, poorer quality Japanee ware resembles earthenware with a heavy bordy, vitrified glassy. In the 20th century importers concentrated on the cheapest mass-produced ware. The Japanese have always made high quality china but not much of it reached North America.

After World War I regulations were changed and the words "Made in" were added to the recognized Anglicized geographical name of the country of origin. Back stamps such as Nippon, Royal Bavoria Royal Austria disappeared and "Made in Japan", "Made in Germany", "Made in Austria" appeared instead.

The Experts Say

Many Ways to Renovate Apartment

TORONTO (CP) — There are ways you can adapt the shell of an apartment to your own style of living without making a lot of potentially expensive holes in the wall.

For a start, you can create an entrance hall by using a different color of paint or paper than in the living room, plus a see-through divider of fabric, metal mesh or clear acrylic. If you put a picture or mirror over a narrow shelf of glass or wood, you give the feeling of some furniture. Then add a piece of fitted carpet and soft lighting to complete your illusion.

Ann McRoberts of the Canadian Furniture Mart says the living room atmosphere depends to a great extent on the arrangement of your furniture. Don't line it all against the walls. Arrange it in groupings, with sofas or a pair of chairs and table at right angles to the long wall. Pictures, bookshelves or a large piece of furniture can be used to take the place of a strong architectural feature in a long wall.

Furniture should be scaled to suit the room. In most apartments, a six-foot sofa is big enough, and causes no problems going in and out on elevators.

Round tables and small coffee tables are most flexible. Long, narrow tables that can sit behind a sofa can be used as desks or set for buffet dinners.

Area carpets can help divide space without using it up.

A dark paint or patterned wallpaper may give a room a cosy feeling, but if there is a strong pattern on the wall, upholstery should be in solid, plain colors.

You can separate a living room from a dining area with draperies, folding screens or a panel of mesh fabric. If the area is L-shaped, put a mirror on one wall or use a foil wall covering to create the illusion of space. If you hang a shelf on the wall, it can be used for serving without taking the room a buffet does.

In the bedroom, unless the view is good, you might cover windows from ceiling to floor with sheers and overdraperies to change the apartment look.

If you have a guest bedroom, try to provide a small writing and reading area.

If you are shopping for furniture, or accepting donations from home, remember you can mix modern and traditional.

Basic guidelines are simple. Mix ornate with simple, the straight line with the curved, the unusual with the ordinary, textures with smooth fabrics.

Successful Living

It's A Temptation to Put Weeks by; Look for Spring

By DORIS CLARK

The air
Has lost its bite.
Banks of snow sink
And icicles vanish.
Starling and pigeon splash.
Has Spring not come?
— Mable Jenkin.

Isn't it a temptation to push the weeks by, mentally, and look for spring? And yet we should savor every single day of our sojourn here on Earth.

For a day let's try looking at each precious thing and person in our lives as if our days were numbered. We can stage our own January thaw.

• • •

Dear Doris: Your column carried a letter signed Disappointed, describing the effects of life with a man who has a drinking problem. Those of us who have lived through similar experiences recognized the symptoms and would like to suggest that you offer her the help available in the nearest Al-Anon Family Group (in local phone book).

Living with alcoholism brings on these feelings of worthlessness and frustration because of our inability to understand the alcoholic. Al-Anon gives us understanding of both the alcoholic and ourselves, and gives us back self-respect and a feeling of worth for the first time in years.

It also, in most if not all cases, changes hate and condemnation back to love for the alcoholic. Those of us who have felt its healing powers know that there is no need for Disappointed to go on suffering in this way.

We cannot promise sobriety for her husband, but we can promise her self-respect, serenity and peace of mind if she will follow our way of life. — Winnipeg Al-Anon Intergroup.

Dear Al-Anon: Then off your message goes to Disappointed. Al-Anon can help terrifically where things seem hopeless.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am a male, 15, and I need a purely physical way to protect myself. I am unpopular at school to the extent that I come home some days with bruises from head to toe, but I still manage to maintain several close friends.

I'm tired of being a coward but I sure don't want to rush into a brawl and get my face punched in. I play the organ at church and plan to become a priest, but I just can't see myself saying "God bless you!" when some smart alec punches me in the stomach. — Still Cringing.

Dear Cringing: If it's straight physical skill you need, study judo or karate. Probably the "Y" where you are can steer you to a course in self-defence.

But surely physical abuse such as you describe goes deeper than that. Have you no suspicion of why you are so disliked? Could it be you give your schoolmates the impression that you feel superior to them?

Your ideals are lofty. Let's hope they don't look like snobbishness to that other fellow who is struggling with his own growing-up problems.

• • •

(Have you an idea — about people — that you'd like to share? Write to Doris.)

Another Vote Against Drop-in Company

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If you needed another vote against drop-in company, you've got mine. Here's the way it is at our house:

ANN LANDERS

I have two-month-old twins, a son who will be a year old next week, a three-year-old daughter and another little girl who just started school. All but one of these children are adopted.

I arise at 5.30 a.m., fix breakfast for my husband, start the laundry going, do a little ironing and fold some diapers. At 8.30 I drive my husband to work and the five-year-old to school. The other kids are piled in the station wagon. From then on it's go, go, go.

Last week I was rushing around trying to get everything done so I'd be on time for bowling league. Two minutes after the sitter arrived, in walks my mother-in-law. She could see I was on my way but she sat down anyway. Finally I said, "I'm sorry but I was just leaving." She asked, "Leaving for where?" When I said, "Bowling," she blew up — said I certainly didn't need any more exercise with all those kids. I stood dumbfounded when she called me "crazy" for taking the twins when their mother (my sister) had died in childbirth.

I walked past her and muttered, "Please call next time — for YOUR sake as well as mine." She hasn't dropped in since.

So, Ann, you've got a soulmate in Columbus.

DEAR SOULMATE: Bravo. I applaud the courageous manner in which you protected your integrity.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My neighbor is in her early 30's, a nice woman and the mother of three well behaved children. She did something the other day that I thought was absolutely ridiculous. I told her so and she said I was out of my mind. Please be the referee.

Martha's 7-year old son got into her cosmetic drawer and scraped out the eye makeup with her tweezers. He said he wanted the case. When Martha saw the mess she told him he had ruined something that belonged to her and he had to pay for it. She did not let him keep the case and she made him wipe up the floor.

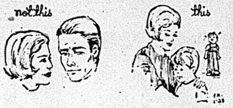
I told Martha it was foolish to charge a child $1.25 for ruining something. She said, "He has a piggy bank and a savings account. I will buy him an extra gift for his birthday with the money. But I want him to know when he destroys property he has to pay for it."

Isn't this weird? I believe another kind of punishment, such as no dessert or going to bed early, or even a spanking would have made more sense. To charge a 7-year-old kid $1.25 is nutty. What do you say, Ann? — MINNEAPOLIS QUESTION.

DEAR MIN: I say hooray for Martha. Her approach makes a lot of sense to me. You can be sure the boy learned a lesson from that experience and he will remember it well. Kids often do not understand that things cost money until THEY have to pay for something themselves.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Tommy's favorite words are 'That's mine.' He grabs everything away from little Teddy."

Father: "I'll give him a taste of his own medicine the next time he wants to use my tools. I won't let him touch them. He has to learn to share.' '

Try to find out why a child acts so possessive. Perhaps he feels a younger child is taking over everything else in the house, including his parents' affections. His selfish acts may be the only way he can vent his resentment.

Parents set examples by doing what is kind and good — not by imitating the improper behavior of their young, even when the object is to teach a lesson.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Hot or Cold Chicken Dish

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: It must have been four or five years ago because that is when we moved here and I started to read your column. You gave a recipe for Vichysoisse that you said was a reasonable facsimile of Air Canada's. I made it up several times but now can't find that recipe. Would you mind repeating it or sending me a copy? I know several of my good cook friends would like to have it too. — Elva W.

ANSWER: You are right. It was May 31, 1965. I gave it then because warm weather was approaching and as you know it is good cold. I like it hot better though so your timing is perfect.

VICHYSOISSE
(serves 4-6 — hot or cold)

(I don't need to tell our French-speaking readers that the last "s" is pronounced.)

- One 2½-lb. chicken (see below)
- 6 cups water
- 2 cups diced potatoes
- 3 leeks of ¼ large Spanish onion, chopped
- ⅛ tsp. mace (or nutmeg)
- ½ tsp. salt
- 1 chicken bouillon cube
- 1 cup milk
- ½ cup 18 per cent (table) cream
- Chopped chives (for garnish)

Simmer the chicken in the water, covered, until it will fall from bones. Let it stand in broth until cool enough to handle. Remove chicken to utility tray and strip meat from bones and use the cooked chicken meat for another purpose such as Chicken Divan, a la King, sandwiches or salad. Discard skin and bones. Strain broth and boil it down rapidly until it measures 3 cups. Add potatoes and leeks or onin and boil, covered until vegetables are tender — about 15 to 20 minutes. Force through fine sieve. To this puree add the mace, salt, chicken bouillon cube, milk and cream and reheat, but do not boil. Serve at once garnished with finely chopped chives. Or chill. If this soup is chilled it is thicker due to the jellied chicken broth and it may require more salt when served cold.

Wear Helmet Always Doctor Advises Drivers

OTTAWA (CP) — If motorists had any sense at all, they would put on crash helmets every time they get in a car.

That's the advice of one of Canada's foremost traffic accident researchers, Dr. W. R. Ghent, Queen's University professor of surgery.

But he acknowledges that he does not follow that himself, even though he risks having his brains scrambled since 70 per cent of all traffic deaths are from head injuries.

Dr. Ghent was chairman of a symposium on prevention of motor vehicle accidents at the annual meeting here of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons.

He maintains that the only hope of improving the epidemic of death and injury on the highways lies in prevention.

Some of his recipes for prevention:

—Make everyone, before licensing, take "panic situation" training in handling a car in skids, blowouts and the like. Now if anyone tries to practise coping with a deliberate skid on the road, he is breaking the law.

—Run highway crash films on television "in living color" to show what can happen, until the public is sick.

—Greater research to learn about the deceleration forces that literally tear apart the heart, lungs and other organs of the body in many crashes.

—Encourage coroners to be much more suspicious of the circumstances surrounding accidents so they will insist on a good deal more information, not just about the drivers, but the state of the vehicles, road design and other environmental factors.

—Use at least the three-point lap and shoulder belts always.

Sterling Moss, former British racing driver and one of the symposium participants, suggested a driver grading system on a 10-point scale to give incentive to drivers to improve.

Mr. Moss also proposed periodic examination for licence renewals, more driver education, better car and road engineering and enforcement laws which would include compulsory re-education for drivers involved in accidents.

Welfare Talks Attacked

OTTAWA (CP) —While federal and provincial welfare officials gather Monday in the refurbished railway station now used as a conference centre, representatives of the poor are expected to demonstrate here and in other Canadian cities to protest their policies.

The demonstration plans were sparked by a recommendation from the recent poor people's conference in Toronto, where delegates expressed doubts about whether the welfare authorities would have their interests at heart.

The poor people also attacked the federal government's white paper on income security, expected to be a big item on the agenda of the federal-provincial talks.

It is thought that, in particular, welfare officials will discuss sections of the paper dealing with family income security, the Canada and Quebec pension plans, social assistance and services. Another topic which may surface is divorce reconciliation procedures.

The resolutions from the poor people's conference—more than 100 of them—are also on the agenda. But because of their number they likely will be discussed only in a general way.

Local demonstrations aimed at the meeting will focus on Parliament Hill. Organizers hope at least 200 representatives of self-help groups from the capital area will gather there for a march to the conference centre a short distance away.

The demonstrators have planned to hold their own meeting in the lobby of the adjacent National Arts Centre. They also say they hope that sometime during the week federal Health Minister John Munro will talk with them.

Topics from the federal white paper, released Nov. 30, which are likely to get a thorough going-over include a proposal to revamp the system of family allowances, making them taxable and paying them on a sliding scale from a top of $16 a month for each child of a family with an annual income of $4,500 or less down to $5 a month for each child of a family with $9,501 to $10,000.

For families above $10,000 there would be no payment, marking a major shift of the current family allowance systems which pays up to $8 a month for each child depending on age.

Pill and Breast Feeding Rejected by Pediatricians

OTTAWA (CP) — A medical controversy over use of contraceptive pills by breast-feeding mothers came into sharp focus here Friday with pediatricians publicly disagreeing with the Canadian Medical Association.

The Canadian Pediatric Society said in a statement that breast-feeding mothers should not be given the pill.

It drew attention to animal experiments which show that a single dose of steroid—the basis of birth control pills—can produce sterility when the newborn reach adulthood and also can stunt growth.

The Society's position, in effect, backed the report last Dec. 9 to the federal government by an expert committee headed by Dr. R. A. Kinch of Montreal.

The Kinch committee suggested the government require drug manufacturers to list breast feeding as a reason for refusing to prescribe oral contraceptives.

Following release of the Kinch report the Canadian Medical Association published the report of its own expert committee, headed by Dr. J. H. Walters of London, Ont., which said listing breast-feeding as a contra-indication for the pill was not justified.

Dr. Jeffrey Bishop, chief adviser to the federal food and drug directorate, said the government has required such a listing in the scientific literature supplied to doctors about the pill since before the Kinch report.

Work Test on Moon To Be Telecast Home

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — When the Apollo 14 astronauts head for home after visiting the moon, they plan to conduct four experiments that may determine whether specialized manufacturing processes can be carried out ideally in the weightlessness of space.

The results could set guidelines for experiments that will be conducted in future space stations where scientists will be able to work for years.

Apollo 14 is scheduled for launching Sunday, Jan. 31. On Feb. 7, the day after leaving the moon, astronauts Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell will transfer liquids from one container to another through a series of baffles, separate a solution of different liquids, measure heat flow and convection and attempt to do some casting in a small heat chamber.

They hope to televise their work so scientists and other earthlings can watch.

The liquid transfer demonstration is designed to show benefits of tank baffling in the storage and transfer of liquids in weightlessness. The test will be conducted with two sets of tanks, one with and one without baffling. The results could be important in the design of future space refuelling systems and in certain manufacturing processes.

Manifesto Picked Up At College Newspaper

MONTREAL (CP)—The defence will present its case Monday in the trial of Come Leblanc, an unemployed Montreal laborer facing three charges involving the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Leblanc, 22, is charged with being a member of the FLQ, with advocating its aims and with communicating statements on its behalf.

All charges are punishable by a maximum of five years in prison, a $5,000 fine or both.

In concluding its case Friday, the Crown had two statements by Leblanc to police admitted as evidence in Court of Queen's Bench.

Both statements named Le Quartier Latin, student newspaper at the University of Montreal, as the source of several dozen copies of a terrorist "manifesto" calling for a workers' revolution in Quebec.

The statements, made Oct. 26 to police by Leblanc, also referred to a mid-October visit to Shawinigan and Trois-Rivieres junior colleges by Leblanc and three companions.

HANDED OUT PAPERS

The statements said the group handed out copies of the manifesto and other sheets calling for a general strike by students in support of FLQ aims.

With Leblanc on the trip, as previous witnesses have testified, were three natives of St. Boniface, Man.—Jean Boisjoli, 21, Raymond Cormier, 23, and his brother Gilles, 20.

The other three are to stand trial later on similar charges related to the FLQ.

The statements quoted Leblanc as saying his copies of the manifesto and a sheet called Operation Quebec "came from Le Quartier Latin" and were picked up by himself and Boisjoli.

But he was unable to name anyone at the newspaper.

"I really thought you were winning the argument, until he made that forceful rebuttal!"

Too Expensive: Munro

EDMONTON (CP) — A guaranteed income for Canadians may not be practical until the end of the 1970s, John Munro, minister of health and welfare, said Friday.

He told an executive meeting of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities that all forms of social assistance cost Ottawa $4.5 billion a year. To bring in a guaranteed annual income would cost at least $2 billion a year.

"To talk of raising $2 billion more in taxes at this time, with the knowledge of an expected deficit is irresponsible unless the Canadian people want it and are willing to pay," he said.

Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton had told the meeting that Canada could have a guaranteed annual income for only $100 million a year.

Mayor Dent said his plan is based on the idea of scrubbing virtually all current welfare, insurance and pension plans and diverting all this money into a guarantee that an unemployed person would be assured of a set amount of money through a form of negative income tax.

Textile Workers Get Dollar Aid Protection

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey outlined proposals Friday to assist workers laid off in the troubled textile industry as the government enjoyed an easy day of Commons debate on its bill to widen its powers to regulate textile imports.

The bill, now on second-reading debate, would give the government power to unilaterally impose quotas or other devices to regulate textile imports in situations where firms could prove they were being threatened or injured by the imports.

The companies would have to convince a three-man textile and clothing board—legally established by the bill—that they had firm plans to improve efficiency during the period of protection in order to be able to compete again after the protection was removed.

The proposed legislation also would extend federal aid to textile workers who could prove they were laid off either because of injury caused to their firm by low-price imports or by reorganization of their industry demanded by government requirements.

Mr. Mackasey told members this assistance would take two forms.

Until proposed government amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act are implemented—probably July 1—unemployed textile workers who can prove they have been laid off because of imports would be provided with benefits equal to two-thirds their previous income from the industry, to a maximum of $100 a week.

This short-term measure would terminate when the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act are passed, which would provide these benefits in all industries.

A second, long-term measure would provide idled textile workers over 54 years of age with benefits amounting to 50 per cent of their previous earnings up to the age of 65, if the federal manpower department agreed that it would not be useful to retrain them for other employment.

There would be an escalator clause permitting the $75-a-week maximum to increase annually with the cost of living.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Thursday that he hoped MPs would "not conclude too hastily that Canada is becoming a protectionist country." But response Friday in the Commons showed no such concern.

Louis Comeau (PC—South Western Nova) advocated that the government take a stiffer stand against imports from foreign countries.

In essence, the bill provides the government with a tool to impose unilateral restrictions against any imported textile deemed to be injuring, or threatening to injure, the Canadian textile industry.

At present, the government is powerless to impose a quota or surtax on goods coming from one or two particular countries unless the goods satisfy three qualifications under the Export and Import Permits Act: They are scarce on world markets; they are among certain designated products receiving domestic price supports; or when the restriction is a necessary part of an international agreement.

Under the bill before the House, the government would be able to apply restrictions when the textile industry can show injury or threat of injury —which permits the government more scope to be protectionist if it wants to but which falls within the regulations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Mr. Comeau said that he has nothing against protectionism—"the problem does not lie in lack of efficiency, but in allowing too many imports"—but he said that Mr. Pepin has had to fight against anti-protectionist sentiment in the cabinet for 2½ years.

He said two western ministers —Manpower Minister Otto Lang and Supply Minister James Richardson—as well as others within the cabinet has opposed introduction of the bill.

Western interests often oppose import restrictions because they tend to raise domestic consumer prices while assisting industries that are most often located in Eastern Canada.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said his party supported the bill to the extent that it would help the textile industry and its workers.

'Faith, Hope and Charity' Key to Success As Mo-Hawks Hand Owen Sound 7-1 Loss

Faith, Hope and Charity combined to give the Belleville Mo-Hawks a 7-1 home ice win over the Owen Sound Crescents last night, moving them into fourth place in the OHA Senior A standings.

Actually, Faith, Hope and Charity are more commonly known as Plane, Colligan and Jones, a recently formed forward combination that played the key role in Belleville's win.

Ralph Plane's faith in a hustling style of hockey paid off in a hat trick performance for the Mo-Hawk captain, who proved to be a real opportunist against the seventh-place Crescents.

Playing-coach Dave Jones' charitable contribution to his team came in the form of assists on five of the seven goals counted by Belleville.

As for Les Colligan, the hustling right winger is hoping that in the future he will have the foresight to reject any Owen Sound peace offerings.

Colligan was cut above the right eye in a battle with Bill Abbott of the Crescents at the end of the second period. Abbott, apparently disclaimed any interest in continuing the jostling match and then landed a haymaker as Colligan dropped his guard.

George Godson scored the only goal of the first period banking a shot from the corner off goalie Chuck Jewell's skate. Jewell made up for the lapse by turning in a fine effort in the face of a 55-shot barrage by the Mo-Hawks. He twice robbed Ray Johnston of good scoring chances in the first period and repeated the larceny with a diving stop of Lorne O'Donnell's drive.

Plane counted what proved to be the winning goal at 5.24 of the second period batting in a rebound after Jewell did the splits to block a shot by Lionel Botly.

Steve Rexe protected the lead with a fine stick save on Don Vipond's breakaway effort shortly after Plane had scored his first goal.

Plane and Bill Armour upped the count to 4-0 before the second period ended.

Steve Rexe earned an assist on Plane's third goal of the game at 4.38 of the last frame. The Mo-Hawk goalie passed the puck to Jones, who carried it the length of the ice before feeding Plane for the score.

Bob Wilson and Colligan added the final Belleville goals, while Dale Watson ruined a shutout bid by Rexe at 7.15 of the period slapping in a centring pass from Bob Tunstead.

Wilson was a standout on the Belleville defence handing out some telling checks in the opening period in addition to his goal.

For Owen Sound, Vipond and Mike Caine played well in a losing effort.

Gamble by Trenton Fails As Fairways Take 6-4 Win

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

TRENTON — Norm Cairns must feel a bit like a racing buff who successfully backs a 20-1 longshot, only to have his winnings wiped out on a foul claim.

The Trenton coach made a big gamble last night by removing goalie Tony Minaker for an extra attacker with 2.38 remaining in an Eastern Ontario Junior B bout with the Belleville Fairways and his team trailing by 5-4.

Jeff Howard appeared to have made the move pay off when he jammed a loose puck past Fairway netminder Ron Jury in the last minute of play while Belleville's Kevin Dockrill was sitting out a tripping penalty.

Referee Keith MacDonald of Picton disallowed the goal however ruling that the Trenton forward was in the crease when the goal was scored. Dave Smith put the game out of reach by scoring into the empty net with 22 seconds remaining in the game.

"No I've never pulled a goalie with that much time remaining in a game" admitted Cairns after the contest, "but it paid off with a goal. We felt that with them a man short already it was worth the risk to sink Belleville."

The Golden Hawk coach felt that his team played their "best game of the season," singling out recently acquired defenceman Robin Wade and leftwinger Jeff Howard for special mention.

"We've had a few breaks that went the other way this year and it's great to get one in our favor," noted Belleville coach Floyd Crawford of the disallowed Trenton score. "I think we are capable of better hockey than we played tonight," he added, "but they (Trenton) played a real good game."

Strength down the centre proved to be the winning factor for Belleville as pivots Danny Lupenette, Rod Palmer and Rich Meagher each counted a goal.

Meagher, playing his first Junior B game of the season, turned in a strong effort for the winners, after being called up from the juvenile all-stars.

The hustling centre scored a key goal in the second period when his 25-footer bounced off the shoulder of Trenton goalie Tony Minaker to square the contest at 4-4. In addition he set up right winger Brian O'Coin for a second period tally by digging the puck out from behind the Hawk goal and added another assist on Dave Horwood's tally, also in the middle frame.

RICK HOLMES

Danny Lupenette opened the scoring for the Fairways by blasting a low drive past Minaker in the opening period. Bim McFall squared matters with a short-handed score to even the score at 1-1 for the first 20 minutes of play.

Tallies by McFall and Howard sent the Golden Hawks into a 3-1 lead before the visitors were able to get untracked midway through the second period.

After scores by O'Coin and Palmer had tied the game, Wade walked around Peter Ackerman and beat Jury with a backhander to give Trenton the lead.

Tallies by Meagher and Horwood set the stage for the dramatics in the game's final minutes.

Jury had to be brilliant in the third period when Trenton held an edge in play but were unable to get the puck past the Fairway backstop. He twice made outstanding glove saves on shots from the point and came out to smother a rebound attempt by Bim McFall when it appeared that the Trenton centre would collect his third goal of the game.

Defensively big Rick Holmes played an aggressive game for the winners while Wade, recently discovered playing hockey in a CFB Trenton league was a bright spot for Trenton.

The victory moved Belleville into a fourth place tie with the Cobourg Cougars.

The Fairways and Trenton have a return match in Belleville Sunday night beginning at 8 p.m. The game will be Nicholson Catholic College night with students from that school being admitted for 50 cents.

Bim Bam

Bim McFall of the Trenton Golden Hawks tests Belleville goalie Ron Jury in an Eastern Ontario Junior B game in Trenton last night. McFall's two goals in the contest weren't quite enough as the Fairways emerged with a tight 6-4 victory that moved them into a fourth place tie with Cobourg in the league standings.

Beholder of Many Classic Clashes Still Picks Frazier Over Ali

By GEORGE H. CARVER

According to Alexander Graham Bell's beside cockerel, there are at least a dozen "whiteys" in the city who believe Muhammid Ali will emerge top sheik from the upcoming ballot brawl with Joe Frazier.

Most of the midnight bellringers appeared to be in their late "fifties". (No offence to Messrs. O'Keefe). All had excellent command of the Queen's English as it was handed down to Soho innkeepers in the days of Dick Whittington.

In fact these hardened old lobes were treated to a few brand new epithets, and me with a record of seven years in the bloomin' army.

My skull cavity, I'm told, is as empty as the wallet of an old age pensioner around the 20th of the month. One pair of gasbled tonsils told me when brains were handed out down Miami way I was diggin' in mussels and welks from under the south pole.

One femme in a voice husky with Garbo gratiness said with Ali cattishness, "As a fight predictor you would make a good chicken raiser. At least you would be sure there'd be an egg or two in the morning."

Another opined through denture rataplans, that I would be prime copy for a headshrinker. "You know, the kind that examines horses to see if they have been doped."

I was warned to stay in the apartment these wintry days because "the squirrels' food supplies are running short"

A beard-strained basso southerned "You all doan come from Louisville, man Youall make dad statement down thataway and you-all would be gin for de cotton mills".

And a refined voice told me, "So you think Frazier will win over the Ali? Cheer up, it's merely a mental condition. A year or two in a padded cell and you will be O.K. In case you worsen I'll be glad to forward a cyanide pill. Then you won't need to tax your feeble mind as to whom Ali will defeat the next time around."

Be that as it may. With a miion and a quarter of Uncle Sam's greenbacks packed in each glove matching those of the Ali, I believe Joe Frazier will take all that's left to take, the heavyweight title. (Note, my phone is off the hook from seven p.m. on.)

Never in the history of boxing mankind has so much been doled out to so few, to paraphrase Winston Churchill.

So what price gory? Never in the annals of fistiana have two boxers had 2¼ million dollars plunked into their bank accounts as a guarantee. And the expected take of the Midas moguls backing the fistic duet expect to rake in some 35 millions. I never dreamed two or more men could scrape together that much money at one time and toss it into the gold-hungry mitts of the gladiators like a duo of brides curving their bouquets at mate-hungry attendants.

We of the old school used to think that the pride of the heavyweights like Dempsey, Tunney, Louis, Marciano et al emerged like gold - plated matadors with their loot from titular combats.

Imagine, Dempsey after 1919, fought 12 bouts to 1927 with a gross take of $3,062,079. That's a little over a million more than Ali and Frazier have scooped up for an hour's actual work in the ring with the possibility of shorter hours.

Don't be surprised if Local 53468 Heavyweight Champions Local don't go on strike for shorter hours and a 50 per cent raise. Why with a take of $3,370,000 even Chuvalo could open another night club in Tawrawnta.

Former world champion Gene Tunney, titular take in three fights amounted to a million and three quarters. John L. Sullivan fought 18 title fights which brought him — and get this — a total of $120,000. His smallest payoff was $1,800 against Dominick McCaffery. Nine of his takes were in four figures.

Joe Louis defended his title 34 times, a record for any champion and his overall earnings amounted to $3,799,659. His biggest purse was $624,986 when he knocked out Billy Conn in eight rounds.

It is interesting to note that when Louis failed to regain the title in a "comeback" against Ezzard Charles in Yankee Stadium in Sept. 1950 the attendance was only 13,451 and receipts $205,370. Louis received $53,908.

President Nixon forecast everything would be going up in 1971 but his crystal ball did not predict any Nagasaki explosion in the financial forts of the beak-busting brigade.

P.S.: — I still like Frazier. No phone calls please.

Minors Make Sweep

Belleville OMHA entries made a clean sweep of the three games contested Friday night.

The Kinsmen Bantams had little trouble disposing of Brighton 8-3 getting two goals apiece from Rick Barbeau, Roger Chapman, Bruce Sutherland and Peter Crawford.

At Madoc the Mulroney's Novice B's coasted to a 9-0 win over the Madoc Novice All-stars.

Billy Rowe, Mark Crawford and Kevin Meagher fired two goals each for the winners. Adding to the total were Peter Fradette, Brad Miller and Paul Chapman.

Donald Cook and Garth Scully combined for the shutout.

Towers Food City Novices completed the unbeaten record for Belleville by stopping Cobourg 2-0.

Danny Jaques and Danny Duffy tallied the goals for Towers with Brian Cook and Drew Stotesbury picking up the shutout.

'Big Blue' Lances Loyalist

Second period sag proved costly for the Loyalist Lancer hockey team in their match with St. Lawrence College last night.

After playing to a 2-2 tie with the Kingston school for the opening 20-minutes the Lancers were victims of four unanswered tallies by the "Big Blue" during the second period.

Dave Blakely and John MacDonald notched a goal and assist for Loyalist while Gary Thompson notched the other goal.

In basketball action it was once again St. Lawrence coming out on top, this time by a 69-46 count.

Mike Parker paced Loyalist with 13 points while Rick Webster had 12 and Blair Culham 11.

Seals Upset Toronto 5-2

NHL Scoring Explosion Well Distributed

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins have come to be known as the National Hockey League's most explosive scoring team, but a few other clubs have been trying to get into the act this season.

Taking an eight-goal game as some indication of an explosive attack, scores up to the all-star break show a total of 22 games in which a team won by scoring eight or more goals.

That compares with last season's first-half total of only nine games in which a team won with eight or more goals.

The Bruins, who have scored 215 goals in 44 games, set the pace by whipping their opposition with eight or more goals in seven games.

Chicago Black Hawks, second-highest scoring team in the league behind Boston with 167 goals in 44 games, have romped for eight or more goals in a game four times, as have Toronto Maple Leafs who suffered a 5-2 loss to California Seals in the only game Friday night.

The Leafs, coincidentally, have been on the losing end of an eight-goal performance put on by the Seals and a 9-1 whipping handed out by the Bruins.

But the Leafs still rank third in goal production behind Boston and Chicago with 161 goals in 47 games and their 13-0 romp over Detroit Red Wings last month is the biggest single-game explosion by any team this season.

Montreal Canadiens have the next biggest single-game performance with their 11-2 win over Buffalo Sabres last Nov. 7. Montreal also whipped Los Angeles Kings 8-1 last month.

The Kings, incidentally, appear the most prone to allowing big scores against them. The Bruins have whipped them 9-5 and 8-5 and Toronto downed them 8-1 so far this season, but the Kings managed one big surprise of their own Dec. 26 when they beat California 9-3.

The Seals victory Friday, only their 14th in 46 starts, still left them in the West Division cellar, four points behind the sixth-place Kings. The Leafs remain an equal distance behind third-place Montreal in the East.

Rookie Don O'Donoghue and Gary Jarrett picked up two goals each against the Leafs who played the third of a six-game road trip. Their fourth game comes tonight in Los Angeles.

Toronto, with Bruce Gamble in goal, outshot the Seals 35-29 but were held back by the goaltending of Gary Smith.

Ernie Hicke got the other Seals goal, his 14th of the season, while Brian Spencer and Paul Henderson scored for the Leafs.

Sub-Par Rounds Fail to Excite Leaders of Phoenix Golf Classic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gene Littler shot an eight-under-par 63 and called it "a decent score."

Bruce Crampton had a 66 and said he "played like a drunk."

Arnold Palmer had a 67 and snorted in disgust: "That won't get it done."

Littler had a 36-hole total of 129, tied with Miller Barber and Paul Harney for the half-way lead Friday in the $125,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Littler's 63, eight-under-par on the flat little Arizona Country Club course, was the best of the year.

The 129 for two rounds was just three over the all-time tour record for 36 holes.

But the big shocker was the score of 137—five under par—that was demanded to make the cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

It was, by three strokes, the lowest cut ever on the PGA tour and indicative of the way the touring pros responded to the warm, windless weather and a short, generally trouble-free course.

In all, 117 players broke the listed par 71 in Friday's play.

The field is cut to the low 70 players and any tied for 70th position for the final 36 holes in all PGA co-sponsored events.

The casualties included defending champion Dale Douglass, former PGA champ Ray Floyd and Tom Shaw, winner of last week's Bing Crosby national pro-am.

Barber, 39, and Harney, 40, each had a 64 for their share of the lead. The entire remaining field of 71 is separated by only eight shots with two rounds left. There are 16 within three strokes of the lead.

Last Place Flyers Topple Goliaths

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

David toppled Goliath in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A action Friday night when last-placed Niagara Falls Flyers upset first-place Peterborough Petes 6-3.

The loss made the Petes vulnerable to second-place Ottawa 67s, who beat Oshawa Generals 5-0. The 67s still trail Peterborough by four points, but have two games in hand.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros took a firmer grip on fifth place with a 4-1 win over Kitchener Rangers and Montreal Junior Canadiens moved into third with a 9-7 victory over London Knights.

At Niagara Falls, the Flyers scored five in a row to stop Peterborough's unbeaten strike at eight games before 1,660 fans.

The Petes took a 1-0 lead on Doug Gibson's first-period goal but Eric Vail and Don Lemer put the Flyers ahead 2-1 in the second and Randy Holt, Vaul and Steve Stone sewed it up in the final.

Gibson and Dan Gloor scored a late pair for the Petes, but Wayne King scored an insurance marker for the Flyers after Peterborough coach Roger Neilson yanked his goalie for a sixth attacker.

At Ottawa, goalie Michel Larocque kicked out 28 shots, 15 in the first period, to register his fifth shutout of the season.

Defenceman Dennis Potvin and centre Wayne Merrick scored two goals each for Ottawa. Murray Wilson got the other.

In Kitchener, the Marlboros scored three times in the first period and once in the second before the Rangers scored their only goal before 4,094 fans.

The Marlboros moved five points ahead of the sixth-place Hamilton Red Wings.

Kitchener spoiled Ted McComb's shutout in the final period when rookie Les Burgess scored nearing the eight-minute mark. McComb had 36 saves, 17 in the third period.

Dave Gardner, with his 40th, Gavin Kirk, and defencemen Steve Durbano and Charlie Shaw scored for Toronto.

At Lonson, two-goal performances by Jocelyn Guevremont, Camille Lapierre and Richard Martin helped the Canadiens climb past idle St. Catharines Black Hawks into third place.

Sport Briefs

HULL, Que. (CP) — The death of basketball player Paul Boyd Friday after surgical treatment for a broken ankle may have resulted from a rare allergy to an anesthetic. Boyd, 21, an Ottawa resident, was admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital in Hull Thursday night after injuring his ankle in a basketball game at a community college. Dr. Roger Lachance, hospital medical director, said after an autopsy that cause of death was malignant hyperthermia — an abnormal increase in body temperature. The doctor said the fatal development may have resulted from a rare allergy to anesthetic. He said it was the first such case recorded at the hospital.

NFC Favored In Pro-Bowl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Conference All-Stars have been installed as slight favorites over the American Conference team for Sunday's Pro Bowl—the final flourish of a 265-game National Football League season offering record prize money to the biggest winners.

When the lights finally go out at the Los Angeles Coliseum, three members of the Super Bowl champion Baltimore Colts will have added either record winner shares of $2,000 or loser shares of $1,500 to already bulging pockets.

The three are middle linebacker Mike Curtis, defensive end Bubba Smith and safety Jerry Logan, who will be playing for the AFC All-Stars.

In addition to their salaries, the three already have pocketed one-fourteenth of their 1970 salaries for playing in the division playoffs, $8,500 for winning the AFC title game, $15,000 for winning the Super Bowl. And they are guaranteed one-fourteenth of next season's salary for the college all-star game.

Taking a $28,000 salary figure as an example, winning here would bring the total prize loot to $29,500.

AFC quarterback Bob Griese of Miami Dolphins will have Leroy Kelly of Cleveland Browns and Hewitt Dixon of Oakland Raiders as his starting running backs with Floyd Little of Denver Broncos and Larry Csonka of Miami in reserve.

For the NFC, John Brodie of San Francisco '49ers will start at quarterback with two Gene Washingtons as his prime target—his team-mate on the 49ers and the Minnesota Vikings' wide receiver.

The starting tight end will be Charlie Sanders of Detroit Lions.

In the starting backfield with Brodie will be MacArthur Lane of St. Louis Cardinals and Larry Brown of Washington Redskins, the No. 1 grounder-gainer in the NFL.

FOR FRESH NEW IDEAS
FOR YOUR DRIVING NEEDS

1. Why not enjoy air conditioning in your car and pay for it only in the summer? Leasing makes it easy . . . 30c per day or $9.00 monthly.
2. Why not lease a new car every six months or once a year and save on repairs? Leasing makes it easy.
3. Why not save on income tax and lease for business driving?
4. Why "own" when accountants agree leasing costs less.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Ruptured Disc Can Be Fixed

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been having back pain, leg pain — the works! I've been to our family doctor and to an outstanding bone specialist. There seems to be no question about the diagnosis. They both say I have the typical symptoms of a ruptured disc in my spine.

At first I thought I had just old-fashioned sciatica, because the back pain extended right down my right leg. But they tell me this is due to the bad disc which is pressing on a nerve in the spinal cord. Now the question comes up, shall I have an operation?

Bed - rest and traction haven't helped as much as we'd like. But the fly in the ointment is that I'm not sure I want to have an operation. I want to wait, even though the pain keeps me from working.

They say they won't take a myelogram unless I consent to operation if required. Frankly, I'm more scared of the myelogram than I am of the operation. I've heard that this test is liable to cause paralysis of my legs.

Is the myelogram dangerous? Does it hurt? Would you advise me to go through with it? — Mr. B.

Comment: As I keep saying, the decision will have to be yours and your doctor's. I wouldn't even presume to give any specific advice like "Yes" or "No" without knowing all the facts. But I can tell you that in the hands of a trained orthopedist or neurosurgeon, most patients have been helped by an operation on a ruptured disc which doesn't yield to more conservative treatment.

Of course, the diagnosis is important. That is where the myelogram comes in. Often the diagnosis can be made without this test — but sometimes it can't. Like any procedure in medicine, it's possible, but not probable, there may be complications. One that is very unlikely is the paralysis you fear. One that is common, and you haven't mentioned it, is headache — which may last anywhere from a few hours to a week.

But this is a small price to pay, when you consider how a myelogram may point out the exact spot and nature of the disc trouble; and make it easier for the surgeon to do a better job for you.

I suppose you are especially interested in just what a "myelogram" means. What exactly is it? It's a special X-ray procedure.

Under local anesthesia, the doctor inserts a long needle into the lower back area right into the arachnoid space. He can measure the spinal fluid pressure and remove a sample of the fluid for special study.

To obtain the myelogram he slowly injects through this needle an oily, iodized liquid. The patient lies on a special tilt table, so the dye can be run up and down the spinal canal. The examiner can observe its flow under a fluoroscope and take X-ray photographs. In at least three out of four cases, these will show up the trouble. After the test is over, the doctor removes (by syringe suction) as much of the dye as possible.

Doctors know that sometimes a normal myelogram may be present even though the patient has a ruptured disc, and vice versa. This is the reason patients — and doctors — should remind themselves that taking a myelogram is only one phase of diagnosis. Many factors have to be taken into consideration.

After having weighed these few comments I have made, Mr. B., I hope you will realize that you'd better leave the decision about having a myelogram and an operation to your doctors. If you're still fearful and undecided, it might be worthwhile to ask for another opinion. I'm sure your doctors will be glad to talk with a consultant.

Reduce Taxes Says Banker

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — G. Arnold Hart, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Bank of Montreal, said Friday federal income taxes should be reduced in an effort to curb unemployment and put new life into the economy.

He also called for decreased government spending. The back of inflation has not been broken, he said, and the government will not be able to spend its way out of "this temporary period" of unemployment.

He also told a news conference the government should not take much pride in the declining consumer-price index.

"Quite a major" cause of this was the price war among supermarkets.

Seaway Tolls Said Too Low

OTTAWA (CP) — A report to the federal government recommending a 27.5-per-cent increase in tolls on the Canadian section of the St. Lawrence Seaway over the next five years hangs over next week's annual conference of American and Canadian inland shipping lines at Montebello. Que.

Adopting the Carr proposals would increase tolls five per cent annually for five years at a time when the U.S. is trying to eliminate the need for tolls increases on its sector.

Queensboro

QUEENSBORO — Mr. and Mrs. Harry Love were "at home" to their friends and relatives on Sunday afternoon, January 17th at the United Church here on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. This was followed by a supper in the Sunday School room provided by members of the UCW.

A number of friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Barry gathered at the WI hall here on Saturday evening, January 16 to spend a social evening with them on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

The euchre party sponsored by the Women's Institute on Friday evening was well attended with 8 tables in play. Among the winners were Mrs. Roy Rollins, Mrs. Mac Davies, Art Robinson and Will Rollins. The winner of the door prize was Mac Davies. Lunch was served by the Institute members.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 24

Your birthday today: Your coming year is bound to be adventurous, with occasional detours and backtracking. Your main resources now centre in yourself, rather than in other people. Many times you may find that you have developed in directions setting you apart from some old friends. Get deeply involved with creative ventures. Today's natives are fond of moving from place to place, very strongly individualistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be a trifle formal in taking part in the community's customs. Hurry sets up a costly chain of events which can be avoided. Journeys are better postponed or shortened.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Emotional impulses are not necessarily your best guidance today. Make it a lighthearted, nonserious day; avoid any heavy stories. Gather old friends about you.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20). Just when people need sympathetic silence, your temptation is to say too much. Strive to keep or restore the peace, even if it means skipping your own plans.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Somebody is apt to forget something. Double-check and remain serene. Rearrangements are complex — keep your sense of humor. Some waste motion is inevitable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You aren't really able to keep secrets today. Favors and high expectations of friends fall short. A tidy home is a distinct asset this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Check the latest information early, as you may want to change something. Take your time to give events and people a chance to show themselves. Relax, early, with prayer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Nobody tells you what's happening, so be alert. Your own plans particularly for travel, should have complete secrecy. Contingencies work themselves out. Cheer up!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): This is one of those drift days in which nothing comes your way. Reflect on your progress, count your blessings. The evening offers intuition on the next step.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Strive for dignity and don't fret about things simmering underneath the quiet surface. Lending or handling cherished small possessions is not recommended.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): It will be a couple of days before you understand all that happens on this quiet but complex day. Subtle social changes are at work. Verify facts before becoming involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Now it's your turn to be the emotional anchor for somebody. Your own self-assurance is much needed. Leave discrepancies in plans and results for another time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your path is beset with people not sure of where you're going. Be patient while they sort themselves out. Make today a vacation, not a planning session.

For January 25

Your birthday today: Traditional ideas, lessons from the past, updated and put to use in your coming year of progress and personal improvement. Much activity is related to material gain, long-range security.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Just when things are rolling and your enthusiasm is running high a flaw materializes. Calmly pick up the pieces and get going again.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you start early, you can outdo competition. Check to make sure you're included in your neighborhood's social and cultural activities.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Today's bright ideas can become tomorrow's organized ventures. Further contacts develop from properly attended correspondence. Evening brings a change of mood.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Figure a way to escape overtime, extension of business into evening hours, at almost any extreme. With a bit of thought you can rearrange matters to find easier ways.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Settle for a standard, middle of the road path. Explore the ideas and schemes of associates; find improvements, group venture possibilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Trim out useless items or surplus articles; simplify procedures. Close existing troublesome details. Gather family and friends about you for a quiet evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The consequences of any past negligence or laziness close in on you. There's nothing like getting right down to business bright and early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Coincidence is apt to bring you a windfall. Watch that your friends and acquaintances are letting your affairs alone. Take the direct approach.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Use the resources of your community's established institutions. Announce your activities or ventures in the proper places. Think about making more contacts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Deal with people who control or advise at high levels; put in applications, bids, petitions. There's news to think over carefully this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Reviewing or revisiting old familiar places brings fresh inspiration and broader perspective. Make a formal effort to change or improve your status.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Everybody talks, but it will pay you to do more listening. Some people surprise you by having switched sides. An evening of study, prayer shows you what

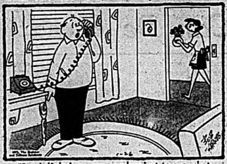
THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"But I dialed my own number just to see what would happen...who the heck are YOU?"

Church Faces Big Decisions

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The general council of the United Church of Canada meets for the 24th time here next week against a background of unprecedented unrest and social change

Problems facing the Christian church at home and abroad are reflected in reports and resolutions to be discussed at the meeting Jan. 25-Feb. 2.

Boards and divisions of the church, which claims 2.5 million Canadian members and professed adherents, will ask the general council, among other things, to go on record as opposing the sale by Britain of arms to apartheid South Africa, to bring the church into tune with the times, and to declare abortion morally justifiable in certain circumstances.

The board of evangelism and social service, in a report to be submitted to the highest court of the church, says that the practise of contraception "is often not only a legal right but a Christian duty."

The general council meets at the same time and in the same city as the 25th general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada. The two denominations, largest non-Roman Catholic churches in Canada, with a combined listing of more than five million members and adherents, have been discussing union for 27 years.

Meetings will be separate, in adjoining hotels. And that in itself is a departure from custom. General council and general synod in the past have met in different cities and in churches.

The preliminary draft of the proposed plan of union as submitted by the general commission on church union will be discussed in a joint session. It cannot be changed. That cannot be done until the plan—40,000 words covering the structure of the proposed new church and the proposed covenant of union, to be the basic founding document—goes before the memberships. Then it comes back to the courts in 1974 for changes and a possible membership referendum.

There will be another joint session to aprove a common hymn book. In preparation for six years, it contains 500 hymns and is scheduled for distribution to the memberships in March.

Within the framework of a commitment to basic principles of faith and order, members of the two churches would continue as they are in the practice of worship.

Also involved in proposed union with the United Chruch (Disciples of Christ), a 5,000-member denomination based upon Scottish Baptist theology, with congregations scattered across Canada.

General council business sessions get under way Tuesday with election of a moderator. Five ministers have been nominated to succeed Dr. Robert McClure, the famed medico-missionary elected in 1968 as the first layman to hold the position.

A troublesome internal problem for the council is a decision on the case of Rev. Russell Horsburgh, the Chatham, Ont., minister who in 1964 was convicted, after a 14-day trial, on charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency by permitting and encouraging boys and girls in church youth activities to use a church lounge for sex.

He was sentenced to a year in jail, served 107 days of his sentence and in 1968, in a retrial ordered by the Supreme Court of Canada, was acquitted. He resigned from the church in 1965 and now seeks readmission unconditionally.

Kent presbytery agreed to readmit him under certain conditions, including a year's probation. This he refused to accept and has appealed to general council which has not the power, under the Basis of Union in 1925, to overrule a presbytery decision. It can recommend.

His case comes up Tuesday.

Anglicans Meet To Pick Primate

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The general synod of the Anglican Church of Canada will open its 25th session Monday not in a church or university setting but in the penthouse of a hotel overlooking the Horseshoe Falls.

The general synod brings together almost 300 bishops, priests and laymen from across Canada for 10 days with a general theme of Mission and Change.

One of the first items on the agenda is to give 15 youth observers voting status so they can help elect a new primate Monday afternoon.

The primate—which means in church parlance first among equals—heads the national executive council, acts as spokesman for the church and will preside over general synod.

The previous primate, Archbishop Howard Clark, resigned the post in August after 11 years. Most. Rev. William L. Wright of Sault Ste. Marie, Archbishop of Algoma, has been acting primate.

More than 30 bishops under the age of 70 are eligible. Voting will take place in 105-year-old Christ Church. An upper house of bishops will send nominations to a lower house of clergy and lay people until a successor is found.

Betty Graham of Toronto, director of child welfare for Ontario, department of social and family services, will preside over the lower house, the first woman to do so.

The synod usually meets every two years but was set this time only 16 months after the last one at Laurentian University in Sudbury to coincide with the general council of the United Church of Canada which is holding its sessions at a nearby hotel.

The Anglicans, with 2,500,000 adherents have been exploring union wuth the United Church and with the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

During the week the synod and the council will consider the report from the joint general commission on church unity and from a joint committee preparing a new hymn book. As well there will be two inter-communion services.

Monday night the Anglicans will hear a report on the procedure to effect union with other churches. It will recommend a church-wide referendum of all adherents 18 and older.

No decision on union will be made at this synod.

Aside from the question of unity, the synod will consider changes in marriages and divorce and also a recommendation that an Anglican be allowed to take communion before confirmation.

It is customary that Anglicans be confirmed at the age of 12 or 13, taking responsibility for the vows made for them during infant baptism.

If the recommendation of the committee on doctrine and worship is accepted, it would mean Anglicans would make their first Communion at a much younger age, as is done in the Roman Catholic church.

Synod delegates also will discuss the church's role in missions at home and abroad.

In the Canadian Churchman, the Anglicans' national newspaper, General Secretary Archdeacon E. S. Light says the main issue at synod is what to do in light of reduced giving from dioceses to mission work.

The Anglican Church of Canada spent $745,000 on overseas work in 1970, compared with $620,000 a year ago and $921,000 five years ago."

Africa Obvious Spot For Clash--Trudeau

World Powers' Role Feared

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says major world powers may look for new areas to begin "throwing their weight around" and Africa is an obvious choice after the Vietnam and Middle East conflicts have been resolved.

Speaking in a CBC interview taped in Singapore, Mr. Trudeau said Saturday there is an "obvious theatre for a conflict in Africa between whites in South Africa and Rhodesia and the rest of the African continent."

The prime minister was explaining a remark he made at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore that Africa could be the next Vietnam within 10 years or so.

He said the problem that exists in Africa "could be blown up into world proportions by the intervention of outside forces."

"It's obvious," he added, "that world powers are more and more going to be trying to fill a vacuum there and take sides."

Mr. Trudeau said he felt the best way to solve the African problem was to put it in a long-term context. He said the immediate problem facing the Commonwealth—the possible sale by Britain of arms to South Africa—won't solve the problem of race relations.

Commonwealth leaders, said Mr. Trudeau, must place less emphasis on less important problems and aim their annual discussions at long-term problems with the idea of working out solutions before the crisis arises.

Countdown Is Started For Apollo Moon Flight

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The launch team today starts the six-day countdown for the Apollo 14 moon mission while the astronauts undergo their final major physical exam.

The clock begins ticking backwards at 102 hours at 9 a.m. EST, when the launch team feeds electrical power into the Saturn V rocket and the spaceship.

The countdown actually extends over a longer period, but there are five planned "holds" totalling 38 hours 23 minutes to provide any necessary catchup work.

Barring problems, the Saturn V will blast away from Cape Kennedy at 3:23 p.m. Sunday to start Apollo 14 on its daring journey of discovery.

The astronauts—Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa—planned several hours with doctors today.

Purpose of the extensive examination is to make certain the pilots are physically fit and to provide medical data for in-flight and post-flight comparison.

It was after a similar exam last April that doctors announced all three Apollo 13 astronauts had been exposed to German measles. Tests revealed that one of them, Thomas Mattingly, was not immune, and he was replaced on the flight crew by backup command module pilot John Swigert.

Shepard and Mitchell are to attempt to land on the moon Feb. 5, aiming for a precision touchdown in the rugged Fra Mauro highlands. They plan to set up a nuclear-powered science station and hope to find rocks that date back 4,600 millions years to the creation of the moon. They plan two outside excursions during 33½ hours on the moon.

Western Discontent Could Harm Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Western discontent, if ignored by the rest of Canada, could "become a source of disruption capable of severely damaging the Canadian union." I. H. Asper, Manitoba Liberal party leader, said today.

Mr. Asper told the Canadian Club of Toronto the West faces special problems, most of them related to the fact "that the economic and political power of Canada . . . remains concentrated in Ontario and Quebec."

He said the West "no longer feels the need to be an economic colony of the East" but at the same time "is still an underdeveloped region."

"While the East worries about American domination, the West simply asserts that it will not accept a Canada governed predominantly from Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa.

"Because of the impediments imposed upon us by the Canadian economic and federal structure, our growth rate between 1966 and 1970 was less than one-third of the national average. Because our population is so small, our cost of service by government is greater than that in Eastern Canada."

Mr. Asper said the West in effect wants a "truly federal union" with proper regional recognition

Ugandan Army Ousts Obote

KAMPALA, Uganda (CP) — Uganda's armed forces seized power today and ousted President Milton Obote.

National Police Chief E. W. Oryema announced in a nationwide broadcast that he had agreed with Maj.-Gen. Idi Amin Dada, commander of the army and air force, "that the government of Uganda will be run by the armed forces."

Earlier, Radio Kampala said the army had seized power because it believed the policies of Obote would lead to bloodshed.

The broadcast—made by an army officer—sa[illegible] wer would be handed over [illegible] the soldiers."

He said the government's economic policies were benefitting "the rich big men" while Ugandans were becoming poorer.

He also said Obote's policies were tribalist and that the government had a policy aimed at developing the president's own Lango region in the north at the expense of other parts of the country.

The announcement followed nearly 18 hours of confusion and sporadic fighting in which several persons were reported killed.

Shortly after Obote's overthrow was announced, crowds flocked into the streets, cheering, laughing and parading behind groups of army men.

In neighboring Tanzania, the government-owned newspaper, The Standard, headlined a special edition Coup Attempt in Kampala and said the army had split into two warring factions.

Obote was out of the country at the time of the coup.

He left Singapore for home this morning after attending the Commonwealth prime ministers conference, but he refused to discuss the Kampala situation with reporters either in Singapore or at Bombay airport where he made a brief stopover.

Obote had been scheduled to return to Kampala Tuesday morning after further stopovers in Karachi, Aden and Nairobi, but his plans were uncertain in light of the coup.

The radio broadcast said while the new government wished to continue to maintain relations with friendly governments any attempt to interfere "in Uganda's internal affairs will be crushed."

The broadcast announced that from today there will be a curfew from 7 p.m. to 6.30 a.m.

Kampala and the Uganda borders were closed. Planes were being turned back this morning.

Uganda has been under emergency regulations since December, 1969, and the former kingdom of Buganda around the Kampala city has been under a state of emergency since.

The army insurgents were reported today to have seized the big Owen Falls hydroelectric powerhouse.

Rebels were said to have taken over the Nsambya police barracks and several banks, including the government-owned Central Bank of Uganda.

Heavy fighting was reported in the Jinja area, about 70 miles from Kampala. One report said troops loyal to Obote had tried to break through opposing forces and head for the capital.

Tank rifle fire and explosions shattered the early-morning stillness of Kampala. Sporadic

Guinea Plans To Execute 58

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Guinea is going to execute 58 persons convicted of taking part in the invasion of the West African nation last November. Another 66 were sentenced to life in prison, including a Roman Catholic archbishop.

Guinean President Sekou Toure had charged the invasion was led by Portuguese mercenaries, but there was no indication that any Portuguese were among those sentenced.

South Africa Plans To Buy French Planes

LONDON (AP) — South Africa is about to buy 100 French Mirage Milan fighter planes at cost of nearly $185 million, the Sunday Telegraph reports.

The newspaper carries a front-page story saying negotiations between the South Africans and France's Dassault company are nearing completion in Pretoria.

"The South African air force already has 42 Mirages of an earlier type," said the story by air correspondent Derek Wood.

"The latest purchase will ensure that the South African air force remains the most powerful in the continent."

Wood, who gave no source for his report, said the sale is certain to harden Prime Minister Edward Heath's "resolve to go ahead with British arms sales to South Africa."

Phnom Penh Airport Is Shelled by Reds

PHNOM PENH (AP) — North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops shelled Phnom Penh's airport again today and attacked other positions on the Cambodian capital's defence perimiter. Explosions reverberated throughout the night.

Communist troops were reported taking up positions in villages north of the airport, but U.S. cargo planes continued to fly in arms and ammunition.

Guards at the airport fought a gun battle at the end of the runway during the night. The guards said they could not estimate the size of the Communist force, which retreated toward the north after the fight.

Armed Gang Raids Air Canada Depot

LONDON (CP) — An armed gang raided an Air Canada warehouse at Heathrow Airport today, tied up four men on duty there and escaped with precious metal worth more than $45,000.

The robbers, masked and brandishing shotguns, tied up three airlines employees and a security guard at the warehouse.

The four were unharmed but were left shaken by the experience. All are Britons.

The precious metal, described as rhodium platinum gauze used for industrial purposes, was in one of two boxes of such material sent to London from Toronto.

Trudeau Hopes to Copy Indonesia's Controls of Investment

COLOMBO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said in Jakarta today before flying to Ceylon that he hopes to apply at home some of the things he learned in Indonesia about foreign investment.

He said at a news conference that Indonesia has a wise policy concerning foreign investment, making sure that the economy is not dominated by "foreign investment and control by outsiders."

He and President Suharto discussed the subject during their three weekend meetings.

Trudeau told Indonesian journalists that there is "a great deal of economic domination of Canada by the United States."

It is a problem of concern to the Canadian government that many industries in Canada are dominated and controlled by the U.S. Canada is making sure that key areas such as banking were completely controlled by Canadians.

Trudeau did not elaborate on what aspects of Indonesia's control of foreign investment appealed to him. Indonesia exerts much tighter control in this field than Canada.

Trudeau repeated what he has often said at home: That Canada cannot have a foreign policy completely hostile to the U.S. Such a policy would not make sense.

Braille Publisher Visits Belleville

Liberato Pedro, representative of the Christian Record Braille Foundation Inc. has been visiting the Belleville area to publicize his organization's work for the blind.

The Christian Record Braille Foundation published the Christian Record, the oldest continuous Braille publication of its type in the world. The journal, begun in 1899, has developed into five braille and one large print monthly journal and a quarterly talking magazine.

The foundation was the first organization to put out ink-print - braille combination books, known as the Full Vision Library series. They contain printed pages, with pictures in color and braille pages inserted, to be used by blind parents of sighted children.

All publications of the foundation are given free to blind people.

Mr. Pedro has been acquainting local people with the services of his organization. Any blind person who could use the free services of the foundation is asked to contact Mr. Pedro at 560 Finch Ave. West, Willowdale, Ontario.

SNOW HAS MORE THAN ONE MEANING

To most people snow is what we would like to see gently falling at Christmastime or being rolled merrily into a snowman. However, snow has other slang meanings that you may not be familiar with.

One type of snow that can be controlled is falling dandruff. One of the many medicated shampoos that we carry can greatly help. Another kind of snow that is more sinister is "heroin." We hope that this generation of children will only want to know about that soft wintertime Santa Claus snow.

Heavy smoke, caused by smouldering tires, marked Front Street fire at B & D Motors Saturday night. To reach core of blaze firefighters (above) donned oxygen-equipped smoke masks.

Trent Authority to Hear Resource Study Report

BATAWA (Staff) — The Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority will receive a resources study report from George Kerr, Minister of Energy and Resources Management at ceremonies in the community hall here February 2.

The three-volume report, based on analysis of studies conducted in the Lower Trent region during 1969 by fieldworkers of the conservation authorities branch of the energy and resources department, assesses the area's resources and proposes a program for their management.

Decision on whether the recommendations of the report are implemented rests with the Lower Trent Authority, Cy MacDonald of Carrying Place, chairman of the LTRCA, told the Intelligencer yesterday. However Mr. MacDonold said that the authority is now aware of the program set down in the report and is willing to "follow the priorities established by the department".

The report documents the major problems of the watershed, including pollution. At least four companies are singled out for causing pollution in the area.

Pollution sources at Campbellford, Trenton, Brighton and Colborne are identified. Two of these are sewage discharge from private homes directly into the waters of the area and leaching from garbage dumps located near waterways.

Flood control recommendations are made for the Brighton-Colborne district. The report also suggests programs of erosion control, acquisition of forest land and the development of trout streams and wildlife management areas.

One of those cited in the study is a cheese factory that has now cleaned up its operation, Mr. MacDonald said.

Mr. MacDonald has concluded that the resource report will give the LTRCA a map for the future. In fact, he says "next year's program and budget for the authority will be predicated on it".

Implementing recommendations of the report will take years, he noted, because the tax base of the region is not great. However, he said the LTRCA has already moved faster than many comparable authorities in establishing conservation schemes.

The Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority was formed in 1968. Its area of responsibility comprises of 795 square miles and runs from Meyers Creek west of Belleville to a point just west of Colborne.

Arctic Owls Stop Over

TRENTON (Special) — Sophisticated aircraft suffered a blow to their crowd appeal here on Saturday afternoon when a pair of Arctic owls flew into the sprawling air station complex and landed on a TV aerial behind Andy Doucette's house at 21B Regina Crescent in Middleton Park. It wasn't long before every child and a lot of parents, too, crowded around to watch the unusual visitors.

The big white birds, the largest one appeared to have a wing spread of more than six feet, rested for about an hour before flying away to a woods nearby.

Perhaps more excited than most of the spectators, the Doucette's son Larry snapped pictures on a colored film he hopes to have to show those who missed the event.

ANAF News

Another good sized crowd attended the regular Friday evening social and dance in the elegant Tartan Lounge and either danced or relaxed and listened to the lively music of the Marg Flett Trio. Next Friday, Cde. Jack will have the Troubadors supplying the entertainment and music. There is free admission for members and their guests and door and spot prizes to add to the fun and excitement of a pleasant evening with congenial people.

The Sports chairman, Ken MacLeod, sure is a busy man. One of the largest crowds for some time was on hand for the Saturday afternoon darts with the following results. Singles No. 1: winner, J. Nichols; runnerup, J. Asseltine. Doubles No. 1: winners, K. MacLeod and H. Young; runnersup, J. Fitzgerald and G. Guy. No. 2 winners, D. Parker and W. Totten; runnersup., J. Nicholls and C. Birbeck. No. 3 winners, C. Birbeck and R. Burns; runnersup, R. Benn and R. Garvin. No. 4 winners, R. Garvin and E. Colbourne; runnersup, J Asseltine and R. Burns.

Over 20 couples competed in the Mr. and Mrs. Darts Saturday evening and the victorious pairs were: winners, Ruby Fitzgibbon and Hank Boyle, runnersup, Anna Feeney and Bill Totten. Ladies' high three: Doris Totten, 140. Men's high three, Paul Pelletier, 149. Next matches Saturday Feb. 6.

The sports chairman is planning on having a special darts tournament some time in February and a shuffleboard, cribbage and euchre tournament in March besides the regular games, so it looks like a busy time for the sports-minded for the coming spring. Another event that had to be postponed is again being discussed and that is the big hockey match between the Legion and the ANAF for that famous trophy.

The new ANAF Berets have to be ordered by size and any member wishing to order one is asked to contact Cde. Archie Jordan and give him your name and hat size. He will also accept your dues if not paid yet.

Sick Chairman H. "Kelly" Calnan gives the following report: in BGH Cdes. R. Woods, 711, E. Brockhurst, 529 and A. R. Craig, 504. Cde. H. Smale is quite ill and confined to his bed at 104 Chatham St., while Cde. J. Feeney also bedridden is waiting for a vacant bed at BGH. Last weeknd Cde. T. Descote was home for a short visit and Cdes. Calnan and Jordan visited him and presented him with his 25 year pin as he was unable to attend the presentation ceremony.

All members are invited to join the torchlight parade that will start off Belleville's bigest yet Winter Carnival. The combined veterans color party and the Duke of Edinburgh Pipe Band will be there, so join in the fun.

Most Damage by Smoke In Front Street Fire

Fire department inspectors today were trying to positively establish the cause of a fire which threatened a Front Street automobile showroom and garage.

The fire, at B and D Motors is believed to have started around a heater after the premises had been closed, said Fire Chief Leo Culhane.

The fire was spotted around 6.30 p.m. — about two hours after the staff had left for the day, said the chief.

Firemen had the blaze under control in 30 minutes, but heavy smoke, caused by smouldering tires in a stockroom, continued to pour from the building long after the fire had been extinguished.

Two cars at the rear of the stockroom, and a new-model automobile in the showroom were undamaged by the fire, said the chief.

Most of the damage was caused by smoke, he said. There also was some smoke damage to the adjacent Towne Furniture Shoppe.

No estimate of loss was available.

Belleville Area School Rules Being Relaxed

They're going up the down staircase at BCI.

One of Belleville's oldest academic traditions fell victim to curriculum progress this fall as the two up stair- and the two down staircases at the city's oldest secondary school were opened to unrestricted traffic.

The "which end is up" dilemma that confounded generations of grade niners for the first few weeks of their high school careers was solved this fall by decision of the principal.

Individual timetables were the reason for the change. In former years, with fixed timetables in force, assigning two stairs for up traffic and two for down was necessary to ensure the smooth flow of changing classes from one room to another.

Now, according to student council president Peter Hillier, the traffic flow is more evenly distributed and all staircases have been opened to both up and down use.

"It's working very well," says Mr. Hillier.

Restrictions are crumbling in all directions at district high schools.

Clothing regulations have been eased at five schools to permit girls to wear slacks and pant-suits, and in some cases, blue jeans to school.

The girls themselves set the code, in some cases calling a school-wide vote and seeking parental approval.

At Centennial Secondary School, girls may now wear slacks and pant-suits, but blue jeans are vetoed. A trial period was called in November during exams, and mothers of female students were polled. They voted overwhelmingly in favor of allowing pants

At Quinte, the same dress code is in effect from Dec. 1 to the end of the winter holiday in March. Girl students themselves are in charge of policing the code. Boys at Quinte are now considering drawing up a boys' code.

At both BCI and Moira pantsuits, slacks and blue jeans are permitted. Again the students themselves made the recommendations that were adopted by the staff after a trial period in the fall.

Regulations governing school operations make no reference to the specific clothes permitted boys and girls. They call only for "neat and tidy" attire.

At BCI, the student council clarified the regulations by stipulating that boys could also wear blue jeans to school.

In Madoc, female teachers and students at Centre Hastings Secondary School drew up a similar dress code for girls, which is now in effect.

Staff of district schools said dress is a minor consideration in their schools.

"I'm more interested in the way students get along with each other and with their teachers than I am in what they wear," said principal Ernest Shipton of Moira. "By and large, our high school students are an attractively dressed lot."

Miller Moving To Cornwall

Frank Miller, superintendent of Hastings county jail, will be appointed superintendent of Cornwall jail sometime in the spring.

He will leave Belleville when the local jail is closed upon completion of the new Quinte Regional Detention Centre at Napanee.

Mr. Miller will succeed J. Sutherland Dickey, who will retire soon as superintendent of the Cornwall Jail.

The superintendent came to Belleville Dec. 15, 1969. During his 14 years service with the department of correctional services, Mr. Miller has held supervisory positions at Cobourg Jail and at the Pine Ridge School, Bowmanville, a training school for boys. His experience included being in charge of the Coldsprings Forestry Camp for more than six years.

Before joining the department, Mr. Miller served for 17 years in the British Army, where he rose to the rank of major in the Royal Artillery. Born and educated in England, he is married and has four daughters.

Labor Federation Blasts Government

The executive council of the Ontario Federation of Labor has supported criticism of the federal government for lack of action on winter unemployment, Robert Andrus, Quinte District Labor Council president, said today.

Meeting last Friday, the OFL executive supported statements by its president, David Archer, that the Trudeau government is as confused on unemployment as it was on inflation.

Mr. Archer called for an immediate and substantial boost in unemployment insurance payments.

"The small increase recently allowed is just another indication of government diddling," he said.

He also called for more low-interest financing for public housing.

Nothing can step up employment as much as aggressive action on residential construction, he said.

A speed-up in tax reform could also alleviate the plight of unemployed persons and others with restricted incomes.

SOMEWHAT SHAKEN

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Fred J. Kissinger was somewhat shaken when he ordered a new suit. "It was only when the tailor told me what my waist measured," he said, "that I realized a Douglas fir with that much girth would be 90 feet tall."

IN MEMORIAM

BONTER — In loving memory of a dear mother Flossie Bonter who passed away January 24th, 1967.

The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved,
From memory pass away.

—Always remembered by Harold, Thelma and family.

FOSTER — In fond and loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Eva Gertrude Foster, who passed away on January 25, 1967.

Since you've gone first and I remain,
One thing I'd have you do —
Walk slowly down the path of death,
For soon I'll follow you.
I want to know each step you take,
That I may walk the same.
For some day down that lonely road,
You'll hear me call your name.

—Sadly missed by husband George.

FOSTER — In loving memory of dear mother who passed away January 25, 1967.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind.
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of mother dear,
Come smiling through the door.

—Sadly missed by Floyd, Barbara and family.

Broad Programs Described

William Davis Outlines His Political Philosophy to PCs Here

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Social assistance must relate to real need and — in some programs — should increasingly be linked to work incentives, Education Minister William Davis told Quinte-area Progressive Conservatives Saturday.

A front-running contender for the party's Ontario leadership, Mr. Davis also drew applause when he bluntly stated he was opposed to socialism and didn't believe in government undertakings which could be more effectively operated by private enterprise.

His meeting with local party workers at the Sun Valley Motor Inn was the second opportunity given local delegates to the party's February leadership convention to confront one of its five announced candidates on personal policy stances.

The Davis session followed by one week a similar delegates' meeting with Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

Today, local Conservatives confirmed that the next leadership bidder to talk in Belleville will be Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence — on Feb. 5.

Mr. Davis spoke for more than an hour — answering queries on a wide range of provincail policy areas among them what one party worker called "social programs that will appeal to the masses."

Mr. Davis said that "programs of social assistance must relate to a genuine need and increasingly must be directed in a way — and I'm talking now about some employment situations — where people are encouraged to work."

Such programs should be directed to discovering the "motivational force" of persons who stay home and "get just about as many dollars as he could by productively assisting the economy."

"This is the direction some of these programs should take" said Mr. Davis.

"Why don't we call them sort of incentive programs," he added.

At one point, Mr. Davis was told by a party worker that many people have said they've lost their faith in the Conservative party.

"They want to know if you stand for more of the same," he told Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis responded that he "didn't believe in socialism. I'm a free enterpriser. I don't believe in government doing that which the private sector can do more effectively."

At the same time, he told his questioner, the party's general membership should participate more in formulating policies.

"I think it's time that some members of the party's grassroots started to react with specific suggestions as to programs they think are relevant."

Other issues tackled by Mr. Davis included:

Education costs — While cost ceilings have been set, it's going to be "a very difficult task for the boards in this province to meet those and to continue to develop programs of quality." But the ceilings will stay.

Economic nationalism — Policy has to be evolved logically, unemotionally. "A healthy, growing economy where people are working" is a basic government responsibility. (Labor unions with international affiliations also would be related to the nationalism issue, Mr. Davis said at an earlier conference). NDP spokesmen on the issue are "not in touch with reality".

Government administration — Increasingly government should contract experts from the private sector to help resolve specific problems. Their involvement would end with the termination of their assignment thus — among other things — reducing bureaucratic buildups within departments.

Regional government — Since local problems vary, approaches to larger local government units also would differ, and there is no "single approach" that need be adopted across the province.

Community Colleges — Designed to relate to community requirements and their curricula must adjust to changing local needs. Some colleges have "related more directly" than others. But the process "takes time" and a "degree of patience."

Role of MPPs — Task of backbenchers has become more onerous. But it's important to find "creative ways" to more directly involve private members in the government process.

As education minister, Mr. Davis admitted he has held a portfolio which has "rippled the water" more than any other area of government.

But his campaigning included recognition that he was part of the government's decision - making process.

"In no way am I going to look back on those eight years and turn my back upon them. I have to accept my responsibility for that of which I'm part.

As shown by Premier Robarts, an Ontario premier also had a national responsibility, to provide leadership "that is also relevant to Canadians, not just people in this province."

Election Plans Not Decided

Education Minister Davis said Saturday he has not decided when he would call the next provincial election if he were selected leader of the Progressive Conservative government.

He has given "some thought" to an election date, but has reached no conclusions, he told a press conference before he met with local party workers at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

"There are a lot of things that have to be considered — so I can't give any indication of any possible (election) time," he said.

Later, he told Quinte-area delegates to the Conservative leadership convention that the next election would not be contested on the government's record.

The government will fight on the capacities of its members to provide "leadership and policies relevant to this province and this day and age."

Meeting the Candidate

Education Minister William Davis chats with Quinte - area Progressive Conservatives during meeting at Sun Valley Motor Inn Saturday. Considered a frontrunner in the party's Ontario leadership campaign, Mr. Davis stopped over in Belleville to talk with local delegates who will vote at convention next month.

Station Street Creamery Sold

Diminishing supplies of churning cream, together with rising costs of operation, have forced the sale of one of Belleville's two remaining dairy butter-making establishments.

Donald McNevin, owner of Glen Roy Creamery and Cold Storage, 289 Station Street, has announced the sale of his creamery to Stirling Creamery Ltd. with the operation to be transferred to the purchasers' Belleville Creameries plant on Station Street.

In making the announcement, Mr. McNevin said the creamery property along with his cold storage and ice-making business on Pinnacle Street would be put up for separate sale.

"There's hardly anyone in Hastings county separating cream any more," stated Mr. McNevin in giving the reason for the sale of his creamery.

He said that butter production at his plant now was only one-quarter of his peak output some years ago.

"It was getting to the point that with expenses going up, we were just not able to operate," he said.

Currently the Glen Roy Creamery is being operated by Mr. McNevin's son Peter. In summer, up to six people have been employed, this number dropping to two in the winter.

Mr. McNevin came to Belleville 30 years ago after operating a creamery at Sharbot Lake for a few years.

Stirling Creamery Ltd. has been operated by the West family of that village for many years with one of the brothers, Harold, managing the Belleville Creameries which was purchased some years ago.

Mr West said that some of the butter-making equipment at the Glen Roy plant would be moved to the Belleville Creameries, with the Station Street plant continuing in operation processing cream from patrons formerly sending to Glen Roy.

Mr. McNevin said his ice-making plant on Pinnacle Street would continue in operation until the business and property was sold.

Creamery amalgamations in the Quinte area over the years have followed the trend set in the cheese industry.

At one time there were cheese factories at almost every hamlet and crossroad in the southern part of the county.

But since World War II, with amalgamations and the construction of new and larger centralized plants, the number by last year had dwindled to only 12.

And this winter three more county factories have been sold with predictions that by next summer there could be only eight plants left.

Not too many years ago there were also creameries at most of the larger centres in Hastings.

But the trend toward larger and more efficient operations saw creameries at Bancroft, Madoc, Tweed and other centres phased out of operation by amalgamations.

Drifting Snow Causes Crashes

Drifting snow on Highway 401 west of Belleville Saturday night caused two traffic accidents and sent three people to hospital.

Charles Wener, 60, of Downsview, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital with scalp injuries after his car crashed off the highway. Damage to the automobile was estimated at $2,000.

A two-car crash also sent two Kingston women to hospital in Belleville. Mrs. Dorothy Risto and Mrs. Ella Churchill were later transferred to hospital in their home town.

Damage to the automobiles — driven by Gerald Risto, of Kingston, and Norman Taylor, of Toronto, — was estimated at $1,100.

Arena Issue

Belleville's Memorial Arena is no white elephant, but it is a chilly, inhospitable establishment at best that clearly has seen better days. However, it looks as if the 40-year-old arena is going to have to suffice for some time, with improvements to be made consistent only with increased safety but far short of costly recommendations made by a firm of architects.

Meanwhile, the continuing issue of a new community centre remains up in the air. The city's Arena and Recreation Committee is recommending that a costly arena reconstruction program is not justified, but chairman Donald Soutter voted against the motion because it did not open the door to alternatives. He spoke of the need to offer the community a positive program, but he did not specify exactly what. He did acknowledge that it would mean tapping the capital works budget; at the same time he recalled that a referendum in 1968 had rejected the arena proposal and that there likely would be no further action without another vote.

There is the further complication of the anticipated urban renewal study and so Bellevillians are left pretty much where they started on this issue. It is clear though that the city cannot bite off more than it can chew; if there are alternatives, it is the responsibility, as Mr. Soutter has pointed out, of the arena and recreation committee, not to mention council as a whole, to give a lead. If on the other hand we must continue, for financial reasons, to do without we do not think it is a great tragedy. The community still has good recreation facilities for both summer and winter and the best things in life are still free.

Call Of Adventure

Man is restless by nature; the whole history of mankind is evidence of this. Today, perhaps more than ever, the average citizen is bound to home and daily habits, as well as to such security as job and anticipated pensions afford. Nevertheless the restlessness manifests itself in many ways — in travel and in the flow of immigrants from one land to another.

Some forsake promising careers to obey the call of inner self. Hollywood actor Sterling Hayden, star of many a movie from Bahamas Passage, with Madeleine Carroll, back in the forties, to the more recent Dr. Strangelove, took to precarious escape from disenchantment with his work, and marital and monetary difficulties, and sailed with his children to Tahiti in the yacht Wanderer, a saga he later described in his book of the same name.

Now we see that folk singer Glenn Yarbrough is giving up his career to sail around the world, then open a school for underprivileged children. "I have never liked show business anyway," the 40-year-old Yarbrough was quoted as saying in Escondido, California.

We think too of that other adventurer and senior citizen, Sir Francis Chichester, now on his way from West Africa to Nicaragua in yet another sailing marathon, in the tradition of the many he has completed before, including a lone voyage around the world, not to mention his exploits as a pioneer aviator in the twenties and early thirties. Truly a remarkable man whom we salute, along with men like Hayden and Yarbrough who know that "life is short, art long and experiment perilous."

Unmarried Mothers

Monteagle township Reeve Carr's concern for the education of young unmarried mothers is something that should interest the authorities, because something could be done about it along the lines of a school out west.

CBC news recently showed film of this school in which teenage mothers continued their schooling while at the same time having the benefit of pre-natal classes. Unfortunately, we do not recall exactly where the school has been established, or the circumstances, but it was somewhere like Winnipeg or Saskatoon.

It is the idea, however, which should concern local authorities — in this case the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County. As Reeve Carr pointed out, too often young mothers do not return to school after child birth and as a result their education is neglected.

Leaders Have an Eye to Own Voters

Anti-Apartheid Stand Solid in Black Africa

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Leaders of black countries at the Commonwealth conference in Singapore mentioned one aspect of the over-all question of apartheid that has seldom been mentioned in all the years of contentious debate on the issue here.

That is that their own positions in their own countries could be threatened if they appeared to bend from their outright commitment to fight apartheid or anything that appears to support it.

Perhaps it is seldom, if ever, mentioned because it is so obvious.

But it bears emphasizing because it provides the background to the unswerving objection to compromise shown by black leaders—not only those in Africa—and the absolute refusal to back down on the issue of British arms sales to South Africa at the Commonwealth conference.

To the blacks sale of arms to South Africa, no matter for what reason, implies support for apartheid. Nobody, but nobody, can give them any assurances to the contrary.

Milton Obote, Ugandan president, brought the situation out in the open this week when he said that no matter what compromise East African leaders might be prepared to make on the issue, the voters at home would not accept it.

He is reported to have drawn a picture of left-wing elements taking over control of some countries and of the Soviet Union and China replacing British influence in Africa.

He also was reported to have said he could not guarantee control of anti-British riots in his own country if Prime Minister Heath goes through with sale of arms to the white-minority South African government.

Outspoken Julius Nyerere of Tanzania put it more succinctly when he said to Heath: "Please do not help South Africa—because if you do, our circumstances will force us to react."

Tanzania is one of the countries that has threatened to leave the Commonwealth if the sale of arms goes through.

Concern about the situation at home is not restricted to Africa.

T. Hudson-Phillips, attorney-general of Trinidad and Tobago, said sale of British arms to South Africa would create such problems that no Caribbean leader could agree to it. The Black Power disturbances in several Caribbean countries in the last year seem to back up this statement.

A Western delegate who has spent endless hours, weeks and months on apartheid matters here said Thursday that there is no question that African leaders are expressing the complete anti-apartheid commitment of their people.

He said a black African agreeing to apartheid would be similar to a Jew agreeing with anti-Semitism.

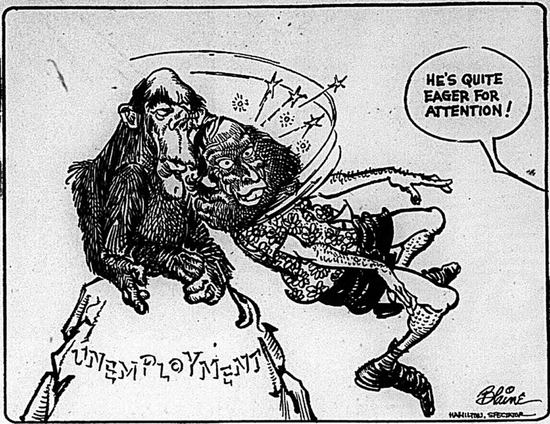
He said it is doubtful that Nyerere and Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, two of the most outspoken critics of racial separation, would ever face a danger of being overthrown in their countries.

But if they appeared soft on apartheid, he said, there would be danger of an emergence of left-wing elements in their parties to positions where they could rock the stability of their countries.

The situation in their own countries also explains why leaders talked until 4 a.m. Thursday after an accommodation was reached with Britain on the arms sales question.

The essence of what the black leaders said in the plenary session of the conference must have been said in two days of private sessions that led to the accommodation and in previous public statements, including long and often repetitive statements here.

They were talking to the constituents at home.



Will There Be Jobs For the Students?

Hamilton Spectator

When summer comes and schools and universities close their doors, thousands of students will be unemployed. One estimate puts the number at 250,000. The figure is intimidating and depressing because it concerns youth, that time of life which should be filled with activity, not frittered away.

Minister of Manpower, Otto Lang, says a youth program for the coming summer is being considered. What the nature of this year's program will be cannot, of course, be known in detail until Mr. Lang presents it, but it is safe to predict that it will not be on such a scale as to provide employment for a quarter of a million students.

The Canadian year is still based upon the needs and practices of an agrarian economy Even 20 years ago it could be claimed that students were needed on the farm in summer to help get the harvest in. In a large measure, this is no longer true. Since the last war there has been a revolution in the Canadian economy. Today we are primarily a nation of city-dwellers and our economy is industrial and technological. Yet the school year remains unaltered at a little more than eight months: Most of the expensive institutions — universities and schools — stand empty and idle for almost four months.

It would cost a lot of money to revamp our school year and make it suitable for an industrial society, but in the end it would undoubtedly be worth it.

We refuse to accept the view that modern youth is lazy; we believe that what it wants is jobs, not necesarily make-work things, but creative work that is useful in the world. Everyone likes to feel that what he is doing has meaning and that it makes some sort of contribution.

Last year the youth hostel program, backed by the government, was rated a success, in spite of a bit of nonsense in Vancouver at the end. The Spectator has long advocated youth hostels as a means of encouraging young Canadians to become acquainted with their country. It still does, but the scheme must not become a palliative for unemployment. The Government must devote its creative imagination to providing worthwhile summer jobs for young people, jobs in the woods or on the prairies if necessary.

West Berlin in 1971

BERLIN — West Berlin, located 110 miles inside communist east Germany, is attracting growing numbers of new residents, a large percentage planning to remain permanently.

In a reversal of the trend in past years, a greater number of people will be moving to the western half of the divided city than the number leaving. By the end of October, 30,600 west Germans had taken up new residency in the city — 5,000 more than the entire year's total in 1969.

Thirty-nine percent of the "immigrants" are married, 53 percent are under 25 years of age and 35 percent are women.

A particularly pleasing finding for city officials centres around the number of arrivals over the past few years who plan to stay permanently. Of those initially coming, only 45 percent said they planned to stay. But a subsequent check after they had lived in the city for some time revealed that 25-percent had changed their minds: 70 percent said they had decided to remain permanently.

• • •

BERLIN — When communist east Germany's rulers built the infamous Berlin Wall in 1961, about 76,000 Germans from the eastern sector of the city suddenly lost their jobs in West Berlin. The communists simply cancelled their passes to go into the western sector.

And though the barrier has remained closed to this day, at least 500 East Berliners work in West Berlin even now. Most of them are employed by east Germany state-owned railroad which is responsible for all rail travel from west Germany to the divided city, 110 miles inside communist territory, and for Berlin's subway in both the easternand western sectors of the tern and western sectors of the

A handful also work in a special office in West Berlin which issues occasional permits for West Berliners to go to the eastern half of the city in emergency cases mostly involving deaths of relatives. (East Berliners, on the other hand, are not permitted by their government to go to the western sector in such cases.)

West Berlin officials also find that a few other East Berlin "workers" come to their half of the divided city occasionally on special missions: as couriers or political agitators on behalf of the communists' Socialist Unity Party (SED) in east Germany or as agents of the east German security police.

Oxfam Relief to Pakistan

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Some time ago I wrote to you to appeal for the help of your readers in assisting the victims of the disastrous cyclone which swept through East Pakistan in November. The response across Canada has been magnificent, and so far contributions to the Oxfam Pakistan Relief Fund amount to almost $200,000. First of all, therefore, I would like to express our very grateful thanks to those of your readers who contributed towards this magnificent total.

The cyclone was possibly the worst in human history. It took a toll of 600,000 lives, killed 200,000 cattle, and caused untold destruction of property. Agricultural land was inundated, drinking wells became saline and polluted, fishing boats were swept away and homes destroyed — over a very large area the entire basis of life was shattered. The first thing to do was to bring immediate relief to the survivors in the form of food, clothing and drugs Oxfam flew in emergency supplies of these items together with such things as water purification tablets and our Field Representative on the spot supervised the distribution to ensure that these goods actually reached the people for whom they were intended. The next stage was to send in a team of workers to help with the rehabilitation of the people who were suffering from intense physical and psychological shock. This team is based on Bhola Island and is working with the people to help restore their confidence and encourage them to face the tasks of restoring their lives to something like normality.

The major task of reconstruction, however, still lies ahead, and it is for this purpose that the bulk of the money contributed to Oxfam will be used. The job of restoration and development of the region will take years and demand a great deal of money, skill and patience. Oxfam of Canada will have its own representative on the spot to advise us how best to reconstitute the agriculture and fishing in the region, what kind of new homes will withstand future cyclones, and other ways in which our contribution can be most effective. Our representative, a French Canadian who has lived in the area for years, will be taking up his position shortly. In renewing our grateful thanks to all those who contributed so generously I hope that this information on the use of their funds will be of interest. Donors will know that their money is being carefully and effectively spent and will be of the utmost value in the reconstitution of life in East Pakistan.

Arbitrary Powers Vested In Tribunal Questioned By Loyalist Staff Association

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Loyalist Instructional Staff Association wishes to clarify their stand on Bill 217. In a news item in your issue of Tuesday, Jan. 19, it was stated that our objection centred upon the removal of the right to strike.

Insofar as this Association has never considered the strike weapon as a valid tool of professionals in relation to their employers, the removal of this tool is not a major consideration with us.

On the other hand we are very much concerned to find wide arbitrary powers vested in a tribunal which is answerable to no legislative body. These powers include the right "to enter and inspect any premises and to interrogate any person respecting any matter, and further, to delegate these powers to any person". In the case of teaching faculty, this must include private homes.

In addition, as a professional body, we feel that it is highly desirable that our collective voice should be heard on a range of issues relating to professional conditions. These conditions are specifically excluded from negotiation by Bill 217. These restrictions would apply to virtually all crown employees in Ontario, and not just the facilities of Community Colleges.

It is our view, and that of a number of prominent legislators, including the Leader of the Opposition, that this Bill should not be brought before the Legislature again.

Act Provides for Aid To Innocent Bystander

TORONTO (CP) — Three years ago, the Ontario government took a small step to aid victims of crime when it passed the Law Enforcement Compensation Act.

That act provided financial compensation to persons killed or injured while assisting a peace officer.

The first application under the act came from a Toronto family of a cabdriver shot in a robbery by a mentally retarded person. The application was rejected because it was ruled the victim was not assisting police at the time of the shooting.

Public reaction was unfavorable, and the government decided to amend the act. It did so last year, making victims of crime eligible for compensation whether or not they had been assisting police.

The change was made retroactive, thus providing compensation for the family of the slain cabbie Larry Botrie. The dead man's mother was awarded $100 annually for life and his brother received $1,000 for funeral expenses and $350 for legal fees.

There are five members on the Law Enforcement Compensation Boar, which meets each Wednesday to decide whether applicants qualify for compensation and how much they should receive.

No compensation is paid for property loss, so victims of fraud, robbery or arson are out of luck. Robbery victims are entitled to compensation only for physical injuries they suffered.

The government has set a $10,000 limit on the amount it will pay to any victim. But there is no limit if a person is injured assisting a police officer.

By the end of October, the board had rendered 100 decisions, granting 94 awards for a total of $194,915. Six applicants were denied compensation.

Chairman of the board is Judge Colin Bennett, Ontario's chief county court judge and former Liberal member of Parliament for Grey North. Vice-chairman is R. Percy Milligan, who also is chairman of the Ontario Police Commission. Neither receives any remuneration for his board activities.

The other members are Fred B. Deacon, a Belleville sportswear manufacturer, and retired county court judges A. Roy Willmott and Ian Macdonald. Each is paid for meetings attended.

Most applicants are accompanied when they make their presentation, outlining the crime and resulting suffering. Questioning by the board is gentle, but to the point.

Board members usually have the background of the crime from police records or the trial transcript, if the claimant's attacker was tried in court.

The board recently hired an investigator to check the claims of applicants, and to ensure the board gets the complete picture.

The average award has been $2,061, and the $10,000 maximum has been awarded only once.

Judge Bennett says the toughest part of the job is to determine the amount of money that should be awarded for pain and suffering.

Night Light

Hugh Heslip recently began manufacturing a safety light for snowmobiles. Attached to any make of snow machine, the aerial attachment, visible in the background, can be seen for 1-3 miles connected to 12-volt battery or an independent 6-volt dry cell. Tested for durability, they sell for $25 each.

Snowmobilers' Light Is Developed Here

Public opinion has focused much attention on the snowmobile in general with specific concern directed to enacting laws to prohibit, restrain and regulate operation of the machines.

At Hastings County council on January 19, Thurlow Deputy Reeve Borden Forsythe stated that many accidents resulted becouse there are no lights when the vehicles are not moving.

Unlike the automobile, most snowmobile light systems operate only when the motor is running.

Therefore, when the lights are cut off due to machine failure, a regular stop or an accident, the vehicle is not visible to other snowmobilers.

A Belleville inventor, Hugh Heslip, may just have the answer to this problem.

Centenary Safety Lights, the first Canadian-manufactured night light for snowmobiles, offers to its owner the distinction of long life.

Mr. Heslip's sales partner, 3. G. MacKenzie, explained that the Canadian attachment does not contain wires which can be frayed.

The inventor demonstrated this device to The Intelligencer.

Mounted to a pre-cast form is a heavy spring into which is inserted a telescoping rod similar to a car aerial.

A rubber plug at the top surrounds the encased light.

Contact is made without use of wires, a major selling attraction to this unit.

From the aluminum-cast plug, wires lead to a toggle switch and the battery systems.

Pull-start machines supply 12-volt electrical power through magnetos. When the machine is off, there is no power to operate the connected safety light. A 6-volt dry cell battery is jointly connected to the system, thereby supplying enough power for the light to be seen for one mile.

Battery-operated self-start snowmobiles operate in a similar manner, but with the advantage of use of both systems when the machine is not running.

Mr. Heslip explained that the American counterpart contains wires which, when tested, proved to be easily broken.

"We think our double contact brushing the edges (of the aerial) will prove a definite attraction to our unit . . . plus the independent lighting system," said Mr. MacKenzie, a former sales manager with Deloro-Stellite.

To date, the new firm, Centenary Manufacturing and Marketing Company, has sold all assembled lights at the sale price of $25 each.

Interest is such that the Ontario Safety League and the Ontario Federation of Snowmobile Clubs are presently testing the devices.

The firm hopes to make these units available to the public on a greater scale by next year.

Rawdon

RAWDON — On Sunday, at the three church services on Rawdon circuit, a chalice for each of the communion tables was presented by the Rawdon Hi-C group and dedicated by the pastor Rev. W. C. Cox. Grant Dunham made the presentation at Mount Pleasant, and Virginia Pollock at Bethel. The one at Springbrook was received with no formal presentation.

Roy Thrasher is now convalescing at the Edward Street Manor in Stirling.

On Tuesday afternoon several from Mount Pleasant visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Jeffs at their new residence in Stirling. On behalf of the Mount Pleasant community and friends at Hoards, a presentation of a platform rocker was made to Will and Cora. Refreshments were served and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Denton Meiklejohn president of Rawdon AOTS Men's Club and eight members were guests of Grace United AOTS Men's Club, Trenton on Monday evening. The guest speaker was Rev. A. Bateman, Belleville who served in a leper mission for 12 years in South East Asia and Africa.

Many Teachers Lack Classroom Skills: Teacher

EDMONTON (CP) — Many teachers begin their jobs with A in theory, but E in classroom skills.

"I'm concerned that teachers can be highly skilled in theory but unprepared to handle students in real situations," says Ivan Stonehocker, president of the Alberta Teachers' Association. And if he has his way, this will change.

He wants to see a period of internship that will give prospective teachers an insight into the practical side of teaching.

In Alberta, a teacher takes a three-year education course at university to get the professional certificate that permits him to begin teaching, Mr. Stonehocker explained. To obtain a bachelor of education degree, he takes five further courses, either in a one-year university program or at summer school.

During this three- or four-year preparation there's a six-week practice-teaching period. And that's the only time a young teacher actually faces pupils during his training for a job that mainly is concerned with youngsters and their classroom reactions.

Mr. Stonehocker, 52, in his second term as president of the 24,000-member teachers' association, doesn't think this is enough.

He is concerned also about the wastage of those who spend four or five years preparing to teach only to discover after six months in the classroom that teaching is not for them.

"Think of those years of wasted effort—and wasted public investment."

The association wants a four-year minimum education requirement for Alberta teachers, including an internship program as a compulsory part. A policy committee will recommend this at the next annual meeting.

"Our policy committee proposes a phasing-in of internship," Mr. Stonehocker said. "Perhaps it would begin as a two-month period, but it would eventually extend to a full-school-year internship."

He thinks the best time for the internship year would be at the end of the second year of the university program.

"Students can transfer to other university programs at that time anyway. An internship at this time—with some remuneration—would give the individual a chance to assess how he would face the responsibilities of a teacher's life.

"Then, he could either return for a final year in education or change his program and go into some other occupation if he finds that teaching is not for him."

Mr. Stonehocker, who teaches science at a junior high school in Ponoka but has moved to Edmonton for the period of his presidency, said internship offers advantages to the prospective teacher, to the students and to the taxpaying public.

"The quality of teaching will improve," he said. But he added that payment of teacher-interns might cost the department of education and school boards an additional $7 to $8 million.

On the other hand, the number of fully-qualified teachers could be reduced to let the interns assume some of the teaching load.

"It is important that the interns have actual teaching responsibilities. They need to work with good teachers—a kind of master-teacher concept. But they also need to be able to test their theories in a given situation and find out if they work."

Mr. Stonehocker thinks young pupils also will benefit from an internship program.

"The enthusiasms of the young teacher would rub off on the children. The schools might also be able to let the interns work with smaller groups of students, which is always beneficial."

School boards, trustees and parents repeatedly ask for better-prepared teachers, he said. And that doesn't mean more theory.

"The main criticism we face as teachers is that we are not doing as good a job as we could, in a practical sense. It seems to me that internship is the answer."

shooting was going on long after dawn.

Unconfirmed reports said there had been an attempt on the life of Maj.-Gen. Idi Amin, commander of the armed forces. Other reports said Amin appeared to be in charge of military operations, and that he had been arrested.

Several Africans were reported killed at the international airport at Entebbe when a tank shell made a direct hit on the front entrance.

A senior police officer said seven persons were killed in fighting around the parliament building.

Armored vehicles, tanks and trucks were massing on the road from Jinja to Kampala.

An unconfirmed report said the army's Simba Battalion had mutinied and come out in support of Defence Minister Felix Onama.

"The situation is still totally confused, and at this time it is hard to say who is supporting who," said the senior police officer.

Entebbe airport was closed and a plane flying from Nairobi, Kenya, turned back 80 miles from Entebbe because of what ground control called "a serious deterioration of the security situation."

Outside parliament buildings in Kampala, which are ringed by troops, a soldier told a British reporter that seven persons had been killed in the vicinity of Parliament.

"I do not mind making you the eighth," he said.

Few of the city's 47,000 residents ventured outside today and traffic was far thinner than normal for a Monday. No one was allowed near the parliament building, where President Milton Obote has his office.

Obote left Singapore for home today after attending the Commonwealth conference. After intermediate stops in India and Kenya, he was scheduled to arrive here Tuesday.

Aides travelling with the 46-year-old Obote said they had no official information on what had taken place in Kampala, nor were they able to say how the president might re-enter the country with the Entebbe airport closed.

Entebbe is located on a spit of land jutting into Lake Victoria about 25 miles southwest of Kampala.

Higher Living Standard Promotes Cultural Boom

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadians, enjoying a greater degree of affluence than ever before, are devoting more money and time to art.

"Art development reflects the condition and state of the times," says A. J. Pyrch, president of the Edmonton Art Gallery.

"People are concerned with pollution and the social and human problems of life because they are not struggling now for the basics."

This concern, says Mr. Pyrch, has led Canadians to take stock of life and develop a taste for its better things. The result has been that the average man is becoming interested in art, whether it be Eskimo soapstone from the Arctic or an inexpensive oil from a department store.

The urge for art probably is manifesting itself best in the department stores. All large Edmonton department stores carry sizable stocks of oils and prints and managers say sales have been increasing steadily for the last few years.

The stores guard sales figures closely, but A. W. Brent, Hudson's Bay Co. divisional merchandising manager, says his company, which imports original oils from Scandinavia, can't keep up with the demand.

"I think we've just scratched the surface so far. Everyone is buying, not only the very affluent."

Mr. Brent says people no longer are satisfied with stereotype furnishings and are buying paintings to reflect their individual tastes.

Prints, available in frames for $20 and up, also are selling well, he says. The most popular oils range from $50 to $100.

Eatons is another store which imports oils from Europe and manager Bob Kerr says business is growing every year.

"Truck drivers as well as executives have them . . . 10 years ago we didn't have this type of selection," he says.

"I think it's because of the general sophistication of people. They are more knowledgeable in other things, so why not art?"

He says sales of prints are steady and they are being purchased by people "who can't afford to buy oils."

The managers say that new techniques, which have made more realistic prints possible, are a reason for the upsurge in sales.

Private galleries also are benefiting from the heightened interest in art, but spokesmen for some galleries feel department store prints are hurting art.

"There are a lot of horrible prints around," says a spokesman for one independent gallery. Yet, his sales are increasing every month despite the fact that his oils sell for between $200 and $400.

"The good artist today has 25 people waiting for each piece he finishes," he adds.

Gallery owner Harry Barabash says it's a sin for department stores to put "cheap decorations' in beautiful frames.

"The department stores are killing the galleries. You can't make a gallery survive without another line."

Mr. Pyrch says it's unfortunate that the majority of people who buy an oil or a print buy it for decoration. But he concedes that buying a painting of any kind is a step in the right direction.

"It's better in the long run if you can go with someone and get a real good print or a good oil with merit . . . something which will sustain itself longer."

If a person can't afford a good oil, he says, he should get a print that has merit or a water color.

"I think a lot of this abandon buying . . . is killing sensitivity or development of a critical eye. . . ."

Mr. Brent says it doesn't matter what type of painting people buy as long as they learn something about art from it.

"I don't think we have to go into the $1,000 art pieces. The gallery can play this role. Art is very personal and if a young couple comes in and finds a $35 painting they like, then they are at least started.'

He feels that perhaps people have always had an interest in art but have not been exposed to it enough. The department stores now are providing more exposure and the results are reflected in sales.

STILL NOT ENOUGH — Miss Jean Thomspon works with a group of youngsters at the Glengarry Day Care centre in Edmonton. With 2.5 Million Working Women, More Day Care Centres Required

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

Every day, in every community, babies and toddlers are left with untrained sitters, with relatives, neighbors and in "in-home" day care centres that may or may not be good.

Meanwhile, the need for day care centres that are well staffed and well equipped continues to be something everyone talks about and few people do anything about.

Concerned people use words like urgent and desperate to describe that need for some families. But they say public opinion is not on their side. There is still a feeling that working mothers are reprehensible people.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates there are more centres than there were a few years ago, and more legislation setting standards for them. The experts say there are still not enough.

A recent report from the women's bureau of the federal department of labor says there are now 2.5 million women working in Canada, one million more than in 1960.

The Toronto Social Planning Council had 400 calls in one month last summer asking about day care.

Howard Clifford of Edmonton says working mothers are not greedy people who needlessly take advantage of day care services. He says a typical program would have 70 per cent of its spaces given to children whose mothers are the sole family support.

Mr. Clifford, director of day care services in Edmonton, says day care should also be available to help families through special crises and should be available to children from poor environments.

Sue Wolsteinholme, director of a Halifax centre, calls the need for more centres obvious. There are nine of them in the Halifax-Dartmouth area, with 320 children registered. There are an estimated 5,000 to 8,000 children under 14 in the area whose mothers work.

Mrs. Wolsteinholme says part of a centre's job is preventing problems, that governments do not put enough emphasis on preventive care.

Many of the people involved in day care work see it as a service that goes far beyond custodial care. They say it should not only provide immediate help for families, but long-range benefits both for children and for society.

Joan Rogers of Toronto says: "I can't see us worrying and fussing about young people at university age if we go on ignoring the under-five group.

"In the long run it would be cheaper if governments would help support good day care."

Mrs. Rogers is chairman of a newly-formed community day care committee comprising lay and professional people interested in day care. She has worked as a volunteer for years with a non-profit centre.

She says there is still a strong feeling, "especially among politicians," that day care centres would encourage mothers to go to work when they ought to be home in the kitchen.

"But everyone knows the statistics. You just have to take an analysis in any office to find out how many working mothers there are."

The committee is considering a pilot project, canvassing an area of Toronto to determine how many people use day care of any kind.

The number of centres in Canada is growing. There are 116 in Alberta, caring for about 3,500 children. About 90 per cent of them are in Calgary or Edmonton.

Ontario has 650 nurseries, 140 of them full-time. There are 172 more licensed nurseries than there were two years ago, but not all are full-time day cares centres.

St John's, Nfld., has six centres all privately operated except for one attached to a hospital.

Saint John, N.B., has none, though the social services council is trying to get one started.

There are 36 centres in the Greater Vancouver area, about nine times as many as in 1949.

A special gap that continues is in the number available for children under two. There are few.

Standards and inspection are a problem. There are still four provinces without licensing and inspection programs.

British Columbia and Ontario have had legislation for some time, and Alberta now has its own act. Saskatchewan's laws were passed last July, Newfoundland's in 1968. Quebec licenses centres, but does not inspect unless there is a complaint.

Several directors of centres in Quebec City say they would appreciate tougher legislation because many centres are now operating without a licence.

Spokesmen in Winnipeg and in Brandon, Man., say existing regulations do not encourage high standards and that any standards are hard to enforce because of the mushrooming of "in-home" nurseries.

Training for staff and operators of day care centres has also been scarce until recently. Often a nurse or doctor on call has been the extent of "trained staff" except in a few cases, usually where there were government funds involved.

There has been some in-service training available, and a few special courses. Now several provinces have and require more extensive training.

The British Columbia government requires a series of 12 courses, from psychology to methods in play techniques that may be taken at night school technical college or university.

Alberta and Ontario have two-year courses in early childhood education. One community college in Ontario has a one-year nursery aid course.

Tomorrow: Public at large indifferent to need for day care centres

Mother: "Please don't give Susie so many cookies. They're not good for her."

Grandmother: "My cookies are nourishing. They can't possibly hurt her."

Grandmother: "You may have one cookie now and another one for dessert after dinner. That's the way your mother does it when you're at home, you know."

The wise grandmother doesn't flout the rules and wishes of the child's mother, even if she thinks some of them are unnecessary.

Salvation Army Opens Girls' Probation Home

HAMILTON (CP) — The Salvation Army has opened a home for girls on probation, its first in Canada.

Major Charles Boorman, its administrator, says it can accommodate 12 girls between the ages of 16 and 20, referred to them by the courts.

Their probation time may be from three to 18 months. Some of them may be able to get jobs, take vocational training or get special help if they need it.

"The girls may stay with us until they are ready to be returned to the community." Major Boorman said.

"We shall also do follow-up work, by keeping in touch with the community which they come from."

Major Boorman's wife has taken charge of the decorating, and has tried to make the residence as homelike as possible. The bedrooms are all in different colors. All of them have bulletin boards where the girls may pin up their own treasures. The small dining room tables can accommodate extra people if the girls have guests.

The girls will be expected to help with the work in the kitchen, and Mrs. David Taylor, the domestic supervisor, will give them cooking lesson.

There is a recreation room, a craft and hobby room.

Funds for the home, which is solely supported by the Salvation Army, come largely from its annual Red Shield Appeal.

Women Clowns Rarity in Circus

VENICE, Fla. (Reuter) — The clown in the ring this winter may be a woman—and a post-graduate clown at that.

Maudi Lou Flippen and Peggy Williams have made history by becoming the first women graduates of a clown college, run by the Ringling Brothers and the Barnum and Bailey Circus, to receive contracts with the big top.

Women clowns are a rarity in the circus world but they are not unknown, says Bill Ballantine, a former clown and director of the six-weeks college operated at the circus winter headquarters here.

"You can count them on the fingers of one hand," he said, "and I can't think of any who came into clowning on their own. All were married to clowns or other circus performers."

Ballantine could recall only three offhand. They were Amelia Adler, wife of the famous clown Felix Adler; Mickey Freeman, wife of Freddie Freeman, a Ringling clown in the 1930s, and Lulu Adams, a musical clown married to a clown.

Six young women were in the 1970 clown college which graduated a class of 31. Only two of the girls have so far been offered contracts.

Maudi Lou Flippen, a 24-year-old blonde known to her friends as "Flip," made it as a clown on her second time around. A native of Detroit, she failed as a clown college applicant last year. This year she tried again and was admitted.

Peggy Williams, a 21-year-old university graduate from Madison, Wis., had been a key punch operator before joining the college.

Now Maudie and Peggy are assigned to separate shows of the Ringling circus.

"I had a hard time choosing between graduate school and clowning," said Peggy. "Now I'm glad I chose clowning."

Said Maudi, "I just have to be a clown. It means so much to me. I want the audience to go away laughing."

NSA Hears Talk on Leadership

The general meeting of Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries Association was held at Hotel Quinte in Belleville on January 2. Mr. Gerald Wishart, vice-president of manufacturing, Mead Johnson Limited, was the guest speaker. His subject being leadership — 'The Secretary A Leader in her Chapter'.

Mr. Wishart pointed out two phenomena prevalent today — one, non-involvement and two, total drop-out, with result that there are fewer sources from which leaders of today and for the future can be found. "Everybody has leadership ability. We must conquer our own fears and inhibitions and what better place to practise leadership than within our own organization. Take on duties of chairmanship and directorship and develop your potential to be a leader working with the members of your association. These people are your friends and there can be no better place to start than where you have friendly co-operation and backing to get a job done," said the speaker.

"As we develop leadership ability this will reflect in our employment." Mr. Wishart summarized there are those who make things happen, those who watch things happen and those who are not aware anything is happening. "Join the ranks which make things happen," he concluded.

Gabrielle Watkins conducted the business session and welcomed guests Kay Kost of Pyrotenax, Betty Jeffry of Morton Parker and Eileen Gilbert of Miron Wiggres Construction, Trenton, and Annis Culloden Department of National Revenue and Marion MacGillivray of E. Guss Porter Office.

Mrs. Iris Downing reported on the Seminar to be held in April. The Ways and Means Committee reported the plans being made for a dessert bridge and euchre and the program chairman, Marjorie Cross, announced the program of the year to be held in February — "The Law — Scales of Justice".

Mr. Wishart made the draw for the door prize which was won by Bonnie Lee Poole.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

On Tuesday evening, Jan. 19, a regular meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter was held at the home of Mrs. V. Zubacs. The evening began with a program on art presented by Mrs. P. Anderson.

Mrs. Anderson's guest speaker was Mrs. Dottie Shoots, an artist, who came to the Belleville area from Ohio about a year and a half ago and who now lives with her family in Rednersville.

Mrs. Shoots entertained Gamma Mu members with approximately 140 artistic slides which she has incorporated into a fascinating program exploring the world of color, medium and form used in contemporary art.

Mrs. Shoots and Mrs. Anderson were thanked by Mrs. Zubacs.

During the business portion of the meeting, members were invited to attend Founder's Day festivities this year in Watertown, N.Y., on May 2 and also to attend an NSA Seminar at Centennial Secondary School in Belleville on April 3. A thank-you note was read from Mrs. R. Vaughan and a mid-year treasurer's report was submitted by Mrs. L. Smith, providing an interesting comparison of actual and proposed budgets.

Following the adjournment of the business meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess and co-hostess, Mrs. C. Rowbotham.

SECOND THURLOW NEIGHBORS' AID

At the January meeting of the Neighbors' Aid held at the hall on Wednesday afternoon, Constables Brian Turner and Lyle Bowes of the OPP showed slides taken on highways showing how accidents take place when drivers disregard safety rules. After the pictures were shown Constable Turner conducted a question and answer session during which much helpful information was given on safe driving. Constables Turner and Bowes were thanked by the president Mrs. Robert Atkins and Mrs. H. Thomson. Earlier they were introduced by Mrs. Thomson who was the convener of the program.

The meeting which was attended by about 20 people was conducted by the president Mrs. Atkins with Mrs. M. Mitchell at the piano. Mrs. S. Peoples read the correspondence and the financial report was given by Mrs. M. Mitchell, treasurer.

WEDDING

PYM — DEROY

Rev. Arthur Sheil officiated at the wedding ceremony in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville on Saturday, January 16, 1971, when Mary Lorraine Deroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Daley, Belleville, became the bride of Arthur Edward Pym, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pym of Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white street length crepe dress enhanced with gold trim with a shoulder lengthveil extending from her headdress. She carried a cascade bouquet of red and white 'poms.

Mrs. June Cannon attended the bride, wearing a blue sheath dress with white lace coat and matching blue headdress. She carried a bouquet of blue and white 'poms.

Bernard Cannon attended the bridegroom.

A reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents where the mother of the bride welcomed the guests wearing a rose crepe dress with pink and white 'mums corsage. Hosting the reception, the bridegroom's mother wore a mauve crepe dress with a corsoge of white 'mums.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip for points west, the bride chose a pink two-piece suit with matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Pym will reside in Belleville.

Successful Living

Verses of 'Change About' May Be Procured

By DORIS CLARK

It seems a certain boastful farmer declared he could do as much work in a day as his wife could do in three. So she changed places; took over the plough, and left him to milk the cow, feed pigs, mind hen, reel yarn. And did he ever make a mess of things!

This is one of the poems we asked for, and now we have it complete. "Change About" comes from an Ontario Second Reader, published in 1909, sold for nine cents. Want a copy of these verses for 10 cents and a stamped envelope?

• • •

Dear Doris: David has come right out and said he is scared he'll have a wife like his brothers have. These two women always run their husbands. He can't say he's being ruled. All his family likes me and I know they are looking for the big day.

David broke off with me, then saw me out with another guy and I thought there'd be a fight but nothing came of it. Now he keeps phoning me and we wind up playing cards at his sister's place.

Should I tell him to get off my doorstep or really try again? He said he didn't want to go steady any more. — I Love The Guy.

Dear Love: That boy has had two horrible examples of married life. Why shouldn't he be leary? He lacks the courage to say "yes" to life and marriage.

You'll have to tell him it is either on or off — and not half-way on. He is keeping you from the other nice guys who might have serious intentions.

He needs to realize it takes two to make a good marriage. Could be his brothers' wives were not the only ones who failed.

• • •

Dear Doris: I am 18 years old, and want to get a job as soon as I finish high school. I've never had a job of any kind before, and I don't know what to do if I go in for an interview. How should I dress. What should I say if asked such questions as "Tell me about yourself"; and "Why do you want to work for this company?" How can I type up a resume if I've never had any experience? Who could I give for references? — Uncertain.

Dear Uncertain: Good for you for giving it all a little thought ahead of time. Preparation should keep your knees from knocking together.

Dress in a suit or a tailored dress — not slacks or jeans. Be sure your hair is clean and beautifully groomed. That first impression is important.

What to tell about yourself? Well, you report your school record, your hobbies, any special talents you think are yours. If you know a little about the work done by the company you can relate your own interests to the interests of your employer. This is what he wants to hear.

These things go in the written summary, too, which obviously will not report previous non - existent jobs. References might include your clergyman, a favorite teacher, doctor, or family friend. Before giving their names, get their consent.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

First of Fruit Bread Recipes

By MARY MOORE

A telephone friend, Pearl L. M., in my city called to say that she had three fruit bread recipes she had perfected and wanted to share them with me.

They came in the mail carefully written in detail and we tested each one. They are Apricot Brazil Bread, Holiday Banana Bread and Orange Cranberry Bread.

They will delight our fruit bread specialists and freezer stockers. The one I liked best I will give you first. The other two will follow in the next two weeks.

APRICOT BRAZIL BREAD
(One loaf)

½ cup coarsely chopped, dried apricots (packed)
¼ cup water
1 egg
1 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
½ cup orange juice
2 cups sifted all - purpose flour
3 tsps. (1 tbsp.) baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. baking soda
1 cup chopped Brazil nuts

Soak chopped apricots in water 30 min.

In large beater bowl beat egg with sugar until foamy. Stir in melted butter or margarine and orange juice.

In a smaller bowl or onto a sheet of wax paper sift the sifted flour with baking powder, salt and baking soda. Stir in the chopped Brazil nuts. Add to first mixture along with soaked apricots and water and beat well. Turn into a well-greased 8 x 4 x 3" loaf pan (or standard-size loaf pan) smoothing top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 60 min., or until when lightly touched with fingertip no impression is made. Cool in pan on rack 10 min. Turn out of pan and cool on rack. When cold wrap and store in refrigerator or freezerwrap, and freeze.

NOTE: Watch for recipe for Holiday Banana Bread next Monday Feb. 1, and for Orange Cranberry Bread Mon. Feb. 8.

Ann Landers

Parents' Generosity Source of Hassle

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I married while still in college. Mom and Dad furnished our apartment and sent us a cheque every month for two years. We had more than enough to live on, yet they insisted on giving us money for birthdays, anniversaries, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Fourth of July — any occasion which could be used as an excuse.

I have graduated from college and am now working. My husband is getting a Ph. D. on a federal grant. We have everything we need and we don't need any more financial help. My parents can't understand that we want the satisfaction of doing a few things on our own.

Last night my father tried to slip me some money behind my husband's back. I refused to take it. My husband saw him and the four of us got into a terrific hassle. My mother called me "ungrateful." My dad said I was depriving him of his greatest pleasure. The relationship is becoming strained. It has deteriorated into a contest of wills. How can we settle this once and for all? — POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: Write your folks a letter and tell them you appreciate their generosity but now you and your husband are able to manage on your own. Explain that they must not deny you the satisfaction of earning and achieving, and that prolonged dependency is unhealthy and can be crippling.

Ask them not to send any more money gifts. If they disregard your wishes, send the money back. Eventually when they realize you mean it they'll stop trying to bind you to them with hoops of gold.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you have an impressive list of consultants who help you with your answers pertaining to medicine, psychiatry, law, religious matters, and so on. Why in the world didn't you seek the advice of a nutrition expert before you told the mother that "butter is butter — whether it' son bread or whether you fry an egg in it."

When butter is fried it changes its chemical composition, as any dietician will tell you. Young children should not eat eggs fried in butter.

How about ten swats with an aluminum fry pan? — BEND, OREGON.

DEAR BEND: Sorry, dearie. You're wrong. I've got the National Dairy Council on my side. They backed up my statement (which had been previously checked with a nutrition expert). I quote the National Dairy Council: "If a child has a normal digestive tract, he will not be harmed by eating eggs fried in butter. Butter is butter — and the chemical composition does not change when butter is heated. It does change, however, if it is burned." I assumed the mother who wrote knows how to fry an egg without burning it.

* * *

Confidential to WHAT CAN A MOTHER DO?: One thing a mother can do is stop telling her son that his steady is a tramp. The more you talk against the girl the more he'll have to defend her. In fact, he may "defend" her so vehemently that one of these days you'll end up by being her mother-in-law.

Sudbury Looks Like Promised Land for Man Looking for Job

SUDBURY (CP) — To a young man who has trudged away the Canadian winter searching for work, Sudbury must look like the promised land.

With 538,000 unemployed by last federal count, there can't be many Canadians left who really believe that anyone who wants a job can find one.

But when a woman cab driver in Sudbury says "anyone who wants to work around here can get a job," she's right on.

And that includes the under-25s, hardest hit in many municipalities because they may lack job experience or education.

In Sudbury, the driver inches her cab through 5 p.m. traffic jams, caused by a shift change at the mines, an tells you it's been this way for five years or more.

"Why there's so many workers here, they can't find places to live. I know lots of families who double up on a house."

Guy Charron, manager of the Sudbury - area Canada Manpower centre, has about 600 jobs on file.

Mr. Charron is responsible for a labor force of 71,000 stretching northwest to Capreol. In December he was able to report only 1,617 persons under 25 looking for work an only 1,397 who were 25 and older. Of those about 200 were employed but trying to change jobs while another 250 were in retraining programs.

The reason for this prosperity is the booming mining industry —International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. has 17,000 workers and Falconbridge Mines 4,000.

Bob Hamer, an INCO spokesman, says the mills will need another 1,000 workers by the end of 1971—laborers, tradesmen, instrument men, diesel mechanics, engineers, smelter laborers, mine beginners.

INCO is opening a new mill and two mines this year, a third mine and a refinery in 1972 and another mine in 1975.

"For a laborer there aren't too many requirements as long as he can pass the physical. We prefer to teach him how to mine ourselves." Mr. Hamer sai.

In 1970, Sudbury Canada Manpower placed 5,427 residents and 3,999 outside persons, many under the government's mobility manpower program which may pay moving costs or other expenses.

In addition to mining, says Manpower counsellor John Lindsay, there are casual jobs such as shovelling snow or unloading trucks.

There aren't many jobs for young girls. There is little secondary industry, no assembly lines and no head offices of companies that might provide clerical work.

Mr. Charron sai although there are jobs in service industries, "people don't want to work for other people anymore."

Of the 1,617 unemployed under-25s in December, there were 590 young women.

"Girls don't travel outside for jobs much," Mr. Charron said. "They can't be talked into leaving. Their parents don't want them to go an they don't want to leave their family or boyfriend."

In contrast, many young men head south for work, he said but numbers come back to Sudbury, which boasts one of the highest industrial wages in Canada.

The hiring rate for underground miners at INCO is $3.29 an hour, Mr. Hamer said.

However before every unemployed man in Canada hitchhikes to the nickel belt, they should consider the housing.

It's described as "very bad" to "impossible."

Room and board may cost $37 to $45 a week, apartments are scarce, and houses that went for $13,000 in 1964 now sell for around $25,000. There's a long waiting list.

Mr Charron says if he were an unemployed young man sitting in Cornwall, where unemployment has hit 18 per cent, things might not be rosy, but "I'd stay where I was until a later date.

"At least I'd have a roof over my head.

"But if somebody from Cornwall had some way of existing here, like a brother to stay with, he could likely find a job

After 7 Years, Development Corporation Born

OTTAWA (CP) — After a seven-year wait in the parliamentary wings the proposed Canada development corporation is to make its debut today.

Father—former Liberal finance minister Walter Gordon —needn't be surprised that, in the interim, the offspring has changed quite a bit.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson confirmed Saturday that a bill to set up the corporation will be presented in the Commons today.

He declined in an interview to give any details about the proposed corporation, saying only that "it's big."

But Liberal-government thinking on the corporation has gone through several stages since Mr. Gordon first got it into a throne speech in 1963.

Mr. Gordon conceived it as a sort of buy-back-Canada project.

The corporation was to pool government money and funds from small Canadian investors. This was to be used to buy into some dominant foreign businesses or grab off Canadian businesses that seemed likely to go under the hammer and wind up in foreign hands. The investment pool also could be used to promote new Canadian enterprises.

The buy-back emphasis was dropped after Mr. Gordon quit the cabinet, and later the Commons, and the finance portfolio passed first to Mitchell Sharp, now external affairs minister, and then to Mr. Benson.

The stress was switched to future ventures, putting Canadian capital to work in investment fields, particularly those related to natural resources, long dominated by foreign concerns which seemed willing to take bigger risks than native investors.

Another switch was that the corporation would bring other Crown corporations under its wing, providing it with substantial assets from the start.

Heading the list are Polymer Corp. Ltd. and Eldorado Nuclear Ltd.

Polymer, born at Sarnia, as a wartime synthetic rubber manufacturer, has grown into a profitable multinational plastics and synthetics corporation which made a profit of just under $14 million in 1969.

Eldorado, operating the country's only uranium refining plant at Port Hope, Ont., suffered a loss of almost $1.5 million in 1969, but it has been branching into other refining activities and is expected to move into a profit position in the short-term future.

Acme and Union Agree on Pay Freeze

TORONTO (CP) — Production workers at Canadian Acme Screw and Gear Ltd. will be asked this morning to approve a new contract believed to include an 18-month wage freeze.

Union sources said Sunday the company, a subsidiary of Levy industries Ltd., Toronto, offered Saturday to open its books so the union could verify the seriousness of the company's economic position.

Officials of the company and the United Auto Workers union would not comment on the negotiations, but The Globe and Mail says the latest offer includes the 1½-year wage moratorium plus payment of benefits suspended when the old contract expired Dec. 3.

Andrew Sutherland, international representative for the union, said a ratification vote is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Last week, 870 members of UAW Local 984 rejected the company's request for a two-year wage freeze and went on strike Wednesday noon.

The company announced Thursday night it was preparing to shut down.

The latest agreement includes a company offer to reimburse employees for premiums they've paid since Dec. 3 to keep their hospital medical and insurance plans active.

Ontario May Ration Use of Its Parks

TORONTO (CP) — A senior official of the department of lands and forests said Sunday his department is considering rationing the use of provincial parks, including a recommendation restricting United States visitors.

Walter Giles, the department's regional director for southern Ontario, told an Ontario Federation of Labor conference that repeated heavy use of campgrounds, campsites, portages and trails seriously impairs the quality of the environment.

Mr. Giles said 95 per cent of the canoeists who use Quetico Provincial Park in northwestern Ontario are Americans.

"They are equipped completely in the United States and usually spend in Canada only the camping fee of $1 per day or $5 for 16 days.

"The cost of collecting garbage from interior routes is $1.03 per visitor."

Mr. Giles repeated the department's stand on the use of provincial parks, mainly that they can serve all of society.

He said lumbering is necessary because it is a form of preservation and forest management.

However, Gavin Henderson, executive director of the National and Provincial Parks Association—a group of conservationists—disagreed.

Mr. Henderson, who resigned last year from the department's advisory committee on Algonquin Park, said wilderness areas are needed, not only in a physical way but for "peace of mind for urban dwellers."

He said that although a great majority of the people who protest lumbering in provincial parks have never been to the parks, it is essential for mankind and particularly Canadians, to know that untouched wilderness areas are available.

A delegate from the Thunder Bay and District Labor Council, Norm Richards said people in southern Ontario are placing too much emphasis on the controversy at Quetico.

"How can they know what they're talking about: They have not even been there."

A delegate representing the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers said other resource-based industries were not being criticized as severely as the pulp and paper industry.

"We keep on hearing about Quetico Park, lumbering and pulp and paper companies, and yet in Atikokan, Ont., 20 miles from the park, two giant iron-ore producers have left miles of gaping holes and pollution that will never be fixed."

Provinces May Support Poor People's Parleys

OTTAWA (CP)—The provinces may get into the field of financing a poor people's conference now that the federal government has broken the ice.

Federal Welfare Minister John Munro indicated this in an interview prior to this week's round of talks among officials and, later in the week, of the cabinet ministers themselves.

Mr. Munro said he expects the discussions will cover the national poor people's conference held earlier this month in Toronto, the first such national meeting that gave welfare recipients a chance to voice their beefs and draw up proposals for the politicians.

The provincial welfare minister will want to know the federal government's intentions with respect to planning "these conferences," said Mr. Munro.

Some may want to co-ordinate them with their own plans because certain provinces were aiming at similar action.

The federal-provincial talks will include some of the main areas on which Mr. Munro has been trying quietly to get corrective action.

These are adequacy of benefit levels, administrative practices fents and procedures for recipilents andprocedures for recipients to appeal administrative decisions.

Mr. Munro said appeals procedures in some cases have not progressed as they should have under the Canada Assistance Plan, the main legislative vehicle for federal contributions to provincial welfare programs of millions of dollars annually.

The main criticism seems to be that some procedures fail to provide machinery that assures welfare recipients or applicants of the impartiality and independence of the appeals agency.

"It's a valid area of criticism and it is incumbent on the federal and provincial governments to respond to it very quickly because of the time that already has elapsed," Mr. Munro said.

Cowboys' Mel Renfro Lessens Pain of Super Bowl Setbacks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mel Renfro of Dallas Cowboys, the focal point of a controversial tipped pass in the Super Bowl, came to the Pro Bowl an unhappy man, proclaiming his innocence. But he left today a happy man, admitting his guilt.

The strange transformation took place in the Pro Bowl Sunday when Renfro returned two punts 82 and 56 yards for touchdowns in the fourth quarter while leading the National Conference All-Stars to a convincing 27-6 triumph over their American Conference colleagues

For a crowd of 48,222 it was exciting. For the NFC it staked another claim to superiority over the AFC. And for Renfro it lessened the pain of the Super Bowl defeat seven days earlier.

"It takes some of the bite out of that," Renfro said afterward. "I was real upset when I got here I felt real bad about losing. It was sad coming off the Super Bowl loss. . . ."

While staning around, still thinking about the pass that led to Baltimore's first touchdown in the Super Bowl and contributed to their victory over the Cowboys, Renfro had an opportunity to look at films of the controversial play.

And he admitted he tipped the pass, making it a legal play.

"I didn't think I touched it," he explained. "But I saw the films, and the ball changed direction, so I must have touched it."

In the Pro Bowl, whenever he touched something, it produced points for his team, beginning in the third period. The NFC led only 10-3 at that point with a 23-yard pass by San Francisco's John Brodie to Dave Osborn of Minnesota Vikings the only touchdown in the game.

Then Renfro tipped a pass by Oakland's Daryle Lamonica, Fred Carr of Green Bay intercepted and the NFC built its lead to 13-3 on a field goal by Minnesota's Fred Cox. Jan Stenerud of Kansas City Chiefs got that back for the AFC just moments later when Cecil Turner of Chicago Bears fumbled a punt—but that fumble was the turning point.

Until then, Turner and Renfro had been aligned side by side on punt returns. But when they came off the field after the fumble, coach Dick Nolan called the two aside.

"After the problem Dick told me to get back and field everything I could while Cecil fielded the short ones," Renfro said.

The strategic change enabled Renfro to field the two punts in the fourth quarter—and break the game open.

Balon Has His Day At Garden

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

They had Ted Green Night at Boston Garden, but it was defenceman Bobby Orr who engineered the Bruins' 4-2 win over Montreal Canadiens Sunday night.

DAVE BALON

It wasn't Dave Balon Day at New York's Madison Square Garden, but the 32-year-old winger from Wakaw, Sask., still responded with four goals in a 6-2 Ranger victory against Minnesota North Stars.

Green, out the entire 1969-70 National Hockey League season with a skull fracture, returned to the Bruins' blueline corps this season. He was honored prior to the Montreal-Boston game, receiving, among other gifts, a station wagon and color television set.

Even the Canadiens, against whom Green has been his most aggressive during his 10-year NHL career, got into the act. They presented the St. Boniface, Man., defenceman with a silver tray with the engraved names of the Montreal team.

But it was Orr who carved out the victory, scoring his 20th goal of the season and setting up two others as the Bruins maintained their three-point lead in the East Division over New York.

In other Sunday games, Buffalo Sabres rapped Philadelphia Flyers 6-4, Detroit Red Wings dumped Vancouver Canucks 7-3 with five goals during a span of seven minutes in the third period, and Chicago Black Hawks trimmed California Golden Seals 5-3.

In Saturday games, Montreal trimmed Detroit 6-2, Los Angeles Kings nipped Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2, Boston riddled Chicago 6-2, St. Louis Blues downed Buffalo 7-1, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Vancouver 4-1 and Minnesota played a 2-2 standoff with Philadelphia.

Balon, who now has 29 goals and is second in that department to Esposito, scored once in each of the first two periods and twice in the final 20 minutes.

Although he shuns slap shots, Balon was aware he could become one of the few NHLers to score five in one game when he whistled a slap shot at the Minnesota goal.

"It didn't go in. But it hit Ted Harris (Minnesota defenceman) and knocked him out of the game."

The victory ended a four-game winless string for the Rangers which included two ties.

Veteran Don Marshall's two goals in the second period when the Sabres scored four times spearheaded the victory at Buffalo.

Rene LeClerc and Tom Webster sparked Detroit's home-ice win with two goals each. The Red Wings broke the game open with five straight goals in the penalty-riddled third period, including LeClerc's two.

At 16:12 of the final period, players on the ice became embroiled in a free-for-all. Rosaire Paiement and Danny Seguin of Vancouver were ejected from the game along with Detroit's Garry Hart, Gary Bergman and Ron Harris while Canucks' Murray Hall took a misconduct penalty from the same melee.

The Hull brothers, Bobby and Dennis, did most of the damage to California. With the Hulls scoring two each, the Black Hawks moved 13 points ahead of second-place St. Louis in the West Division.

Frank Mahovlich, traded recently to Montreal by Detroit for forwards Bill Collins, Mickey Redmond and Guy Charron, turned on his old team Saturday.

The Big M connected for a goal and an assist while Yvan Cournoyer hit for two in a relatively mild encounter at the Forum.

A Los Angeles crowd of 15,242 saw the Leafs go down to their second straight loss on Juha Widing's 13th goal in the final minute of play.

The game was marred by a first-period donnybrook that cleared the benches three times before order was restored. Chief participant in the affair was Toronto's Bob Baun who crashed Ed Joyal to the ice after the Kings' centre knocked Leafs goalie Jacques Plante unconscious.

There was a further delay when the ice-making apparatus broke down between the second and third periods. It was 30 minutes before rink attendants, parading around with buckets of water, were able to make the surface playable.

Larry Regan, Kings' general manager-coach, said after the game his players were still angry following a recent pasting in Toronto.

"We were really fuming from our last game in Toronto, when we were down something like 7-1 after two periods and suffering, and then the message board in Maple Leaf Gardens flashed, the Carlton street shooting gallery."

The Bruins had trouble getting untracked against Chicago but broke open a 3-2 game with three goals in the third period, including Esposito's 43rd.

Dean Prentice's power-play goal at 9:48 of the second period snapped a 1-1 tie and the Penguins added two more en route to their win over Vancouver.

Bill Lesuk's 12th goal of the season with two seconds remaining pulled Philadelphia into their tie at Bloomington, Minn.

St. Louis, paced by two-goal efforts from Jim Roberts and Bill McCreary, opened up a 3-0 lead in the first period and added two more in the penalty-filled second period.

With the Blues' Bob Plager and Tracy Pratt of Buffalo sitting out minor penalties assessed at 19:38 of the middle period, tempers exploded nine seconds later with the result that Reg Fleming and Skip Krake, both of Buffalo, and Noel Picard and Barclay Plager each picked up fighting majors.

That's Two!

New York Ranger forward Dave Balon, right, bangs his second goal of the game past Minnesota North Stars' goalie Gilles Gilbert, left, for his second score of game at New York's Madison Square Garden. Number two marksman in the NHL, he scored twice more in the game, bringing his season total to 29 goals. North Stars' Fred Barrett (3) and Rangers' Bill Fairbairn (10) are in background. Rangers won, 6-2. (AP Wirephoto)

Rocket's Record In Jeopardy

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins scored his 44th goal in 46 games as the Bruins defeated Montreal Canadiens 4-2 Sunday night.

Esposito needs six goals in four games to tie Maurice (Rocket) Richard's record of 50 goals in 50 games, set in the 1944-45 season.

The high-scoring Bruin now has 90 points on 44 goals and 46 assists.

The runner-up in the NHL's individual scoring race is Bobby Orr, also of the Bruins, with 20 goals and 57 assists for 77 points.

In Sunday night's game, Orr scored his 20th goal of the season and added two assists.

Canadian Sled Places Third

CERVINIA, Italy (AP) — The Canadian bobsled team placed third after Italy and Switzerland in the two-man championships Sunday, giving Canada its best placing in world competition since 1966.

Bob Storey of Ottawa and Michael Hartley of Toronto carried Canada's No. 2 sled to eighth place, and the No. 1 sled of Montrealers Hans Gehrig and Peter Blakely placed 11th in the tragedy-marred championship.

The young Canadians were given little chance in the 13-nation event that led to one death and many injuries over the fast Blue Lake course.

Eugenio Monti, the former world champion and manager of the Italian team, said he was impressed by the improvement and consistency of the Canadians.

Walton Wants Action

TORONTO (CP) — Lawyer Alan Eagleson said Sunday that unless Toronto Maple Leafs signify by today their plans for his client, centre Mike Walton, he will call a news conference for 4 p.m. EST to announce what action he plans against the National Hockey League club.

Walton, 26, has not been with the club since Dec. 2, 1970. An independent psychiatrist, commissioned by the NHL, indicated Walton must be traded to another club if he is to play and regain his health.

The player is reported recovering from a depressive illness.

Eagleson said he spoke with NHL president Clarence Campbell during the weekend and that Campbell said he would speak with Leaf management today.

Leafs, who originally suspended Walton before the NHL ordered his reinstatement, still have the player on their payroll.

Vince Brennan of Glen Miller added this beautiful trophy to a growing collection of prizes he is using as decorations for his recreation room. He shot the 10-point buck on the annual hunting trip to Lake Township in Hastings County with Jim Young's gang.

Some People Don't Pass Buck

FRANKFORD — A sharpshooting hunter and prize winning anglers were recognized with presentations at the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club's annual dinner and dance for women members on Saturday night.

The trophy and mounted deer's head went to Vince Brennan of Glen Miller who bagged a 228-pound buck during the hunt last fall.

Fishermen honored for their prowess were Bill McKeown, Brian Hadley, Shirle Towse and Deb Rose.

The party was attended by 115 couples.

A highlight of the evening was provided by club historian Don Rogers, former warden of Hastings County, who recalled events since the organization started 10 years ago.

Mrs. Jack Wallace, retiring president of the club's Women's Auxiliary was specially nonored with the presentation of a silver tray and a bouquet of roses.

Fairways' Complete Climb to Fourth Place

By ERIC EMERSON

Staff Sportswriter

If last night's Trenton - Belleville Junior B game were to be made into a movie it would undoubtedly be titled "The Agony and the Ecstasy".

Trenton Golden Hawks suffered through injuries to four key players in addition to a 6-2 defeat, their 23 in 24 games this season.

Ron Jury was agonizingly close to his first shutout of the season before loose play by his teammates allowed the Golden Hawks to tally twice in the final five minutes.

To complete the woeful side of the picture, hockey fans at the Belleville arena suffered the agony of sitting through a hockey game that appeared more like a Somnambulist Convention for the final 30 minutes.

Belleville supporters did get a taste of ecstasy in the first period and a half as the Fairways rapped in six unanswered goals in their most impressive offensive showing of the season.

Adding to the bright side of the Fairway picture was the fact the win enabled them to move into sole possession of fourth place in the Eastern Ontario league standings.

Rick Meagher continued to sparkle in his second game in a Fairway uniform. The lightweight centre opened the scoring at 12.25 of the first period, picking up a pass from brother Terry and scooting between the Trenton defence to beat goalie Tony Minaker.

Later in the period he added a second goal firing a screened shot through a maze of players in front of the Trenton net, seconds after brother Terry had shot wide of the goal on a 2-1 break with Dave Horwood.

Dave Smith and Danny Lupenette combined to administer the crushing blow to Trenton, scoring a short-handed goal to up the count to 3-0. Lupenette picked up a loose puck in the Golden Hawk zone with Smith cashing in the rebound of Lupenette's shot.

The visitors lost forward Art Brunet with an ankle injury in the first period and were also forced to play without standout centre Paul Lavender, who crashed head-first into the boards in the second period. Defenceman Rick Wright and Dave Jack also sustained injuries for Trenton, who were also minus the services of centre Bim McFall, a two-goal scorer in Friday's 6-4 loss to Belleville.

Dave Smith added his second goal of the game on a second-period deflection. Except for an empty-net tally in the final minute of Friday's contest Smith had scored only one goal since a Dec. 4 game against Peterborough.

"He was shooting more," said Floyd Crawford of the back-checking winger. "I've been trying to get him to shoot more. He's got a good shot and it paid off tonight when he used it."

Terry Meagher accounted for the final Belleville score blasting a slapshot into the top right hand cornor after scoring leader Danny Lupenette had added a goal to his two assists when his 15-footer deflected off Minaker's skate.

There was little action in the remainder of the game until Trenton scored their goals late in the contest. Jury faced only 17 shots in the entire game while the Fairways were able to muster 22 on Minaker.

Jeff Howard, left uncovered after a face-off in the Belleville end scored the first Trenton goal. Howard also engineered the final tally, with Trenton playing a man short.

The left winger stole the puck from defenceman Dave Ferguson and carried the length of the ice before passing to Mark Woodward, who tipped the puck into the open side of the Belleville goal.

The Fairways, who travel to Kingston for a Tuesday night encounter, were minus the services of defenceman Rick Holmes, lost for two weeks because of work commitments and 12-goal scorer Brian O'Coin.

Who Can Blame Steve?

The fact that Belleville OMHA teams failed to sport a perfect record in weekend action certainly couldn't be placed at Steve Kirby's doorstep.

The Belleville Kinsmen Bantam centre, scored five goals in his team's 7-6 loss to Oshawa Sunday. Rick Barbeau tallied the only other Belleville goal to support Kirby's scoring heroics.

Towers Food City Novices continued their winning ways with a pair of victories, Sunday.

The Novice "A" blanked Picton 5-0 and edged the Penguin Peewees of the Belleville House League 4-3.

Danny Duffy (2), Gary Frederick, Danny Jaques and Gary McInroy scored against Picton with Brian Cook and Drew Stotesbury splitting the shutout.

Against the Penguins it was Duffy, Jaques, Andy Plane and Mike McDonald scoring for the winners. Martin Lowry, David Archer and Brian Kerr replied for the peewees.

Mulroney's Novice B's weren't to be outdone by their Belleville counterparts coming up with wins over Kingston Township and the Oshawa Novice B's.

Mulroney's downed Oshawa 4-3 Saturday getting goals from Wayne Deighton, Mark Crawford, Peter Fradette and Steve Mofina.

The team came back Sunday to stop Kingston 5-1 with the goal-getting spread among Deighton, Crawford, Mofina, Bob Hedge and John Henry.

Rollins Construction peewees battled two-for-two in their contests. Bob Crawford and Ray Skelly each scored a goal in a 2-2 tie with Napanee Saturday while in a Sunday contest they stopped Picton 7-2. Crawford and Paul Hayman showed the way with a pair of goals while Mike Bennett, Peter Coates and Skelly rounded out the scoring.

In midget play, the Blake Kerr Imperials took care of two local opponents. The Imperials topped Point Anne allstars 12-4 with Andy Ricketts picking up a hat trick. Mike Watt, Russ Herrington and Brian Cousins each scored twice with single goals going to Dave Flesch, Tim Yohn and Dave Taylor.

Against the Western Tire Juveniles, the Imperials emerged with a 5-3 victory. Scoring for the winners were Rob Foster (2), Paul Ackerman, Cousins and Ricketts.

Mary In Winning Rut

Snowmobile racer Mary O'Neill is finding that it pays to "get in a rut".

The Belleville Arctic Cat rider, who earlier this month finished second in the Kawartha Cup races at Peterborough, repeated the performance at the Muskoka District races this weekend.

Her second place finish netted Mrs. O'Neill a total of $450 in prize money.

the 1971 economy drive

Datsun 1200 Sedan from $2050.
More space inside than anything in its class.
More no-cost extras, too: bucket seats, padded dash, white-walls, locking gas cap and steering lock, front disc brakes, independent strut-type front suspension, telescopic shock-absorbing steering column and unit-body construction. And you get up to 40 miles from a gallon of gas, which is what an economy drive is all about.

Datsun 1200 Fastback from 2170.
Just because you're economizing, you don't have to let everybody know. And if you're driving the Datsun 1200 Fastback, they'll never guess.
Look at what you get: 69 hp 5-main-bearing engine and all the no-cost extras the Sedan carries, plus reclining buckets, carpets and a fold-down back-seat. Datsun 1200:
It's not very much money, but it's a whole lot of car.

Bezic Fight Put on Ice

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sandra Bezic, the five-foot-three, 100-pound little sister, always wins fights with her six-foot, 170-pound brother, Val. But the Toronto youngsters are fighting for the same goal, when it comes to figure skating, and Sunday they demonstrated what a single-minded brother-sister combination can accomplish.

The Bezics, Sandra, 14, and Val, 17, successfully defended their senior pairs title at the six-day Canadian figure skating championships which ended Sunday.

They received 312.9 points compared to 301.4 for the runners-up, John Hubbell of Point Edward, Ont., and Mary Petrie of Toronto.

Sandra describes them as a "normal brother and sister at home," but Val quickly pointed out that little sister "always wins" the fights.

"Yeah," said Sandra, "he laughs too much."

Karen Magnussen of Vancouver and Toller Cranston of Toronto won the senior ladies' and men's singles championships with brilliant freeskating performances that earned them near-perfect marks. Both skaters received 5.9 of a possible 6.0 from six of the seven judges for their artistic impression in freeskating.

Barry Soper and Louise Lind of Vancouver gave the West a split of the six senior titles when they captured the dance competition, upsetting defending champions David Sutton of Guelph, Ont., and Mary Church of Toronto.

In the junior events, Stan Bohonek of Toronto and Karel Latham of Vancouver took the singles' trophies and Allen Carson and Linda Tasker of Toronto won the pairs. David Porter and Barbara Berezowski of Toronto won the dance title.

Lee Armstrong of Chatham, Ont., won the novice men's singles while Kim Wylie of Galt, Ont., took the ladies crown.

Sinking Of Town Halted

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Police Chief Adrien Lavallee said Sunday there has been no further disturbance of the subsoil in the commercial quarter of this town, designated as a danger zone since last Thursday's landslide.

Mr. Lavallee said in an interview that the "danger has subsided, at least for the moment."

"The situation is stable. A mild spell or a melting of the snow could, however, soften the earth and consequently a third earth movement would result.

"Our men are watching the area closely and engineers from Canadian Johns-Manville are conducting a thorough examination of the under-soil."

Meanwhile, municipal authorities moved to cut pressure to water mains and sewer lines in an evacuated section of this community after an estimated 750,000 gallons of water seeped from a burst pipe.

The precaution followed a request by the town for federal aid because of last week's slide at the edge of the 1,000-foot-deep open-pit mine operated by Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd.

Mayor Leo-Paul Thibault called for action from Ottawa after town council discussed the implications of the slide, described as the worst in the community's 90-year history.

Seven commercial buildings were damaged and 10 families were evacuated from their homes in the slide area which sank about six feet in nine hours.

It was he second cave-in near the asbestos pit since Dec. 12 when 65 families were evacuated.

Johns-Manville officials said ground pressure caused a break in the sewer main, releasing water under the area of the soil slippage.

Sailor Convicted

A Formosan police officer, right, puts handcuffs on 38-year-old sailor Lin Shan-mu in Taipei Saturday after a Taipei District Court judge sentenced Lin to death for the murder of 22 of his shipmates while off the coast of Brazil last September. Lin, second engineer of the fishing boat Hsin Hai No. 2 was found guilty of gassing the boat's crewmen with ammonia normally used for freezing fish. (AP Photo)

Michigan Man Feeds 300 Swans

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Winter after winter, 74-year-old Robert Kaiser puts on his hip boots twice each day, lifts a box loaded with about 50 pounds of corn and wades into the chilly waters of Grand Traverse Bay.

He does it for a flock of more than 300 mute swans which he has kept fed through 23 winters.

"It's a sort of hobby with me," the retired feed store worker says.

Iraq's Rulers Ease Control

BAGHDAD (Reuter) — Iraq's Baathist rulers, now solidly entrenched in power after 30 months in charge, seem about to shift their emphasis to domestic affairs and the future of the Persian Gulf.

They have not asserted any significant influence in over-all Arab policy since the July 17, 1968, coup which brought them to power, concentrating instead on consolidating their authority by a ruthless suppression of opposition. But recently they have been presenting a more mellow domestic image.

Diplomatic observers here say that having secured their internal position the rulers now are seeking more popularity among their own people by relaxing their authoritarian grip on the country and improving living conditions.

Steps in this direction have included curtailment of the powers of the revolutionary court which sent batches of alleged spies to the gallows or firing squad.

The government is also trying to coax wealthier Iraqis to bring home the funds which they deposited in foreign banks during the first erratic decade of republican rule.

The promulgation of a law to create Iraq's first parliament was the latest of a series of measures relaxing the rigidity of the previous two years.

After the fall from power in October of Vice-President Hardan Takriti, the government released two former premiers from jail. An official spokesman says there were no political prisoners held in Iraqi prisons at the end of 1970.

The state of emergency which had been in force for 12 years was lifted

Now there are plans to establish a 100-member National Council, but diplomatic observers say this and other reforms should not involve any real surrender of authority by the Baath party.

In foreign affairs, the main question for Iraq is the future of the Persian Gulf.

Britain is scheduled to withdraw its military presence this year from this area, which is bordered by Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Qatar and the Trucial States, under a decision made by the former British Labor party government.

Although power has changed hands in Britain, there are doubts here whether the Conservative government will reverse the decision.

Diplomatic observers have said that the Conservative party's delay in making its intentions in the gulf known has increased Iraqi suspicions that London is working with traditionalist Saudi Arabia and Iran to maintain control of the gulf.

Such a development would be a serious threat to Iraq, which is bitterly hostile to Iran and is suspected by Saudi Arabia of encouraging left-wing subversion in the Arabian peninsula.

The gulf is Baghdad's only sea outlet, and although some of its oil is piped to the Mediterranean, Iraq fears the prospect of having the products of its southern oilfields at the mercy of a hostile alliance of gulf states.

Moonship Now Safer

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Astronaut Stuart Roosa says the Apollo 14 moonship is a safer and better craft as a result of changes made after the last abortive moon mission.

Roosa discussed the changes in the Apollo spaceship as a result of the near-disastrous oxygen tank explosion that wracked Apollo 13 on its way to the moon last April.

Poor Suffer Most in Strike Of Public Transportation in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Learning to live without public transportation in Canada's third largest city has been easy for some people, next to impossible for others.

It has been something of an adventure for many of the young since Jan. 4.

But for many of the elderly, it has meant staying at home, missing regular senior citizens' gatherings and church meetings. The poor and the handicapped have also suffered.

Three weeks ago today, 1,800 transit workers abandoned British Columbia Hydro buses in Greater Vancouver and the capital of Victoria in a strike to back demands for a 20-per-cent wage increase over two years. Hydro, a Crown corporation, offered 13 per cent.

It was a sunny day with temperatures in the 30s when people who had previously thought hitchhiking taboo first stuck out their thumbs for a ride. For many, the cost made taxis out of the question.

In the days that followed, Vancouver was hit with its worst January snow storm in history and the city's total winter snowfall climbed to 58.1 inches, the highest it has been since the weather office began keeping records back in 1938.

Meanwhile, business has been booming for overworked taxi companies. the Amalgamated Transit Union has voted down a mediation commission proposal for a 14½-per-cent, two-year agreement, and politicians have tossed the issue around—from the city to the provincial government, then back to the people.

The strike is keeping an estimated 60,000 persons at home. Among the most seriously inconvenienced are pensioners, housewives who don't have a second car for shopping and youngsters who can't use the bus to go to the movies or sports events.

"Most of us are not getting around very well at all," says a resident of St. Luke's home for the aged in Vancouver.

"For instance, one of the older ladies hasn't been out at all for the last three weeks and she was out every day before the strike."

Gladys Waterman, a resident of St. Luke's who has spinal arthritis, says bus drivers have "every right to complain if they can't get things like consecutive hours."

"But I wonder if they have any idea of the sheer volume of pain they are causing. There are dozens of old people around here who are house-bound. It costs $1 to get a cab to the stores and most of these people are getting only $110 a month."

Buses in the two cities collected an estimated 200,000 fares daily before the strike, a figure which excludes mailmen and others who use public transit without charge, such as senior citizens.

In a recent telephone survey of 200 residents of the Greater Vancouver area, 31 per cent of those interviewed said they ride buses once a week or more, indicating that roughly 250,000 use a bus on a regular basis when they are running. Ten per cent—about 90,000 persons—are daily riders.

Indications are that as many as 20,000 persons have turned to hitchhiking since the start of the strike.

Generally, the survey showed, it is people in the lower income brackets who are most affected.

Of families who make less than $6,000 a year, 55 per cent use the bus once a week or more. Of those making $6,000 to $12,000, 26 per cent use the bus. Of those making more than $12,000, only 23 per cent use the bus regularly.

Only Wealthy Can Afford To Live in Clean District

TORONTO (CP) — A professor of economics from Brock University in St. Catharines said Sunday only the rich can afford to live in a clean and pleasant environment.

Prof. Rosalind Blauer told an Ontario Federation of Labor conference it is possible to avoid the worst effects of pollution as long as you can afford to pay.

She said governments must change their thinking with respect to increasing the gross national product. Increasing the GNP results in unemployment because of automation and also leads to more pollution.

Prof. Blauer said that one of the answers for providing more employment is a growth in service industries such as education, pollution control, day-care centres and recreation.

"But this will not be undertaken by the private sector, for where is the profit?

"This we can only do with a massive redirection of government spending away from the building of things, towards the provision of services for people. This type of activity is highly labor-intensive."

She said the consequences of pollution are borne disproportionately by the poor and the working class who cannot afford to buy their way into a more pleasant environment.

Prof. Blauer said a logical way of stopping any form of in-plant pollution is by a work stoppage.

Another speaker, Lazarus Bell, research director for the Canadian Labor Congress, said a high economic growth rate will always result in more pollution.

Hoss Cartwright (Dan Blocker) Moves Family to Switzerland

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hoss Cartwright in the land of fondue and yodel?

It seems unlikely, but Dan Blocker, the Sierra-sized star of TV's Bonanza series, has moved his family to Lugano, Switzerland. He intends to make his residence there whenever he isn't working.

How did it happen?

"Well, I happen to be a subscriber to National Geographic Magazine," he says. "One time they did a spread on the lake country of Italy and Switzerland, and it knocked my eye out. My wife and I had been to Europe once, and I told her: 'The next time we go, we gotta see that country.' "

Last year the Blockers went —and were entranced. They visited Lake Como and Lake Maggiore, then viewed Lugano, which Blocker termed "the prettiest place I ever saw."

They discovered an American school nearby and last September the family moved into a chalet—parents, 17-year-old twin girls, boys, 15 and 13, plus two other boys from their old neighborhood who are attending the school.

"It's great for the kids," said Blocker. "They go to a fine school, they're learning languages and all of Europe is just a short train-ride away. We've got no discipline problems; my wife has everything under control.

"I was there for the holidays, and I get back whenever I can break away. All I need is a four-day weekend. That'll give me a couple of days with them."

Blocker denied that he made the move for financial reasons.

"Taxes? Hell, I don't save a dime in taxes. If I were to take dual citizenship, that'd mean I'd have to pay 17 per cent of my earnings to Switzerland—plus what I'm paying here. No, thanks.

"Course, I don't mind paying taxes here. My only objection is how my tax money is being used. Instead of going for highways and the environment and the social programs we need so badly, it's being used to drop napalm on people in Southeast Asia. That's what I object to."

The isolation of a Swiss village may have had its enticements to him. Like James Arness, star of Gunsmoke, Blocker has never enjoyed the attention that his television fame has brought to him—and neither he nor Arness can get lost in a crowd.

"Bonanza appears on Swiss TV but only in German," he said during a shooting break here. "There aren't many German-speaking people in southern Switzerland, and I admit that had something to do with me settling in Lugano."

Pearl Bailey Show Has Bright Spots

NEW YORK (AP) — Pearl Bailey, wrapped in chinchilla, exuding vitality and her special kind of warmth, invaded television Saturday night to launch her ABC series. She almost seemed to be daring the audience to kiss off The Pearl Bailey Show as just another variety hour.

Despite all her effort and some pretty impressive guest talent, it was, most of the time, the standard variety mix.

The guest stars — Bing Crosby, Andy Williams and Louis Armstrong—were their usual ingratiating selves, although hardly strangers to the variety show circuit. Miss Bailey sang some numbers with which she is associated. There weree dancers and lavish backgrounds.

There was a particularly bright piece of special material in which the guest stars sang each other's most famous hits-Williams and Armstrong doing Where the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day, while Bing looked pained; Crosby and Armstrong warbling Moon River, and Williams and Crosby picking up Armstrong's Mack the Knife.

All this led to Miss Bailey's big Hello, Dolly! number. It worked, but her duet with Armstrong Didn't We, somehow didn't come off.

Somebody had a real inspiration: Why not shoot an ice show outdoors? The result was the delightful Peggy Fleming at Sun Valley on NBC Sunday evening, by any yardstick the most entertaining, handsomest special of its time to come along.

The program was taped at the Idaho resort. The pretty, graceful star was in top skating form and also served as hostess, narrator and, a couple of times, resident comedian. In one segment, Jean Calude Killy was half of a competition to match each of Peggy's skating tricks on ice with one of his own on skis. There was an unexpected, amusing comedy segment at the end when a number of out-takes —tape shot but ruined by a mishap—were run. They showed Peggy and Jean Claude taking some unpremeditated headers.

Barkley Likes Wings Rough

DETROIT (AP) — It's going to cost Detroit Red Wings a lot of money to play hockey under Doug Barkley, but if it takes fights and fines to fire up the team their coach may offer bonuses to the players with the rawest post-game knuckles.

The same Wings, several of whom admitted to being demoralized earlier this season, showed a collective spirit Sunday night that may be an indication of things to come. They blasted Vancouver Canucks 7-3 in their National Hockey League game before 12,423 at Olympia Stadium.

It was a flurry of five consecutive goals midway through the final period by Detroit in a seven-minute span that put the excitement at a fever-pitch which spawned a crowd-pleasing brawl with four minutes remaining.

The triumph snapped a four-game Wings losing streak.

"We'll never back down from anything," insisted coach Barkley after the game, referring to the free-for-all.

Detroit defencemen Gerry Hart and Ron Harris each got 10-minute misconduct plus game misconduct penalties. Fellow defenceman Gary Bergman received misconduct, roughing, and leaving-the-penalty-box sanctions. It costs players $50 for a misconduct penalty and $100 for a game misconduct, but the league president, Clarence Campbell, can assess more if he deems it necessary.

Referee Dave Newell also tagged Murray Hall with a roughing and misconduct in the fracas which came at 16:12 of the third period after Detroit had overcome a 3-2 deficit with the five-goal outburst. Canucks Rosaire Paiemont and Danny Seguin each also were tagged with misconducts and game misconducts.

It was only the second victory in eight games since Barkley replaced Ned Harkness as coach Jan. 9 after Harkness became general manager. Previously Barkley had coached Detroit's Fort Worth farm team in the Central Hockey League.

"You like your players to get in scraps like tonight, don't you?" Barkley was asked.

"I sure do!" he replied. "We were leading the league in penalties at Fort Worth when I left . . . we'll never back down from anything. You don't win games that way."

"Most of the time you don't know who you're fighting," said the rugged Harris. "Somebody jumps you and you just start swinging."

Reaume Hurt

HAMILTON (CP) — Marc Reaume, former National Hockey League defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings and Vancouver Canucks, was reported in fair condition in hospital Sunday night from injuries suffered in a car accident.

Dionne Made No Difference

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If Marcel Dionne means that much to St. Catharines Black Hawks, rookie goalie Merle Pegahmagabow would probably have preferred deferring his Ontario Hockey Association Junior A baptismal to another day.

With Dionne back in the lineup for the first time since a broken collarbone sidelined him Dec. 11, the Black Hawks rattled the Hamilton Red Wing goaltender with 43 shots and a 10-2 victory Sunday.

In other games, Peterborough Petes shelled Kitchener Rangers 6-1, Ottawa 67s blanked Niagara Falls Flyers 6-0, Montreal Junior Canadiens edged Toronto Marlboros 5-4 and Oshawa Generals salvaged a 4-4 tie with London Knights on two third-period goals by defenceman Jack Lynch.

Dionne, runaway scoring leader in the Junior A series before his injury in Toronto, scored once and assisted on two other goals against Pegahmagabow, playing his first game since being called up from Brantford Majors of the Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Clyde Simon led the Black Hawks with three goals, two coming six seconds apart in the third period. Brian McKenzie and Bob Peppler added two each with others going to Jerry Andreatta and Pierre Guite. Bob Neely and Ed Gilbert scored for the Red Wings who trailed 6-1 after two periods.

The Petes, more than an hour late arriving because of mechanical difficulty on the bus, didn't waste any time once they hit the ice.

They had period leads of 2-1 and 5-1 while maintaining their four-point lead atop the standings. Tom Thomson, Danny Gloor, Doug Gibson, Ken Richardson, Skip Foster and Rick Plumb shared the Petes scoring with defenceman Larry Robinson notching the lone Kitchener goal.

Two third-period fights marred the otherwise clean game. Rangers' Ted Scharf and Colin Campbell drew fighting majors for their initial clash while Rick Cunningham of Peterborough and Tom Cassidy of Kitchener drew game misconducts for their spirited affair.

Ottawa kept pace with the Petes as goaltender Michel Larocque handled 38 shots for his second straight shutout and fourth of the season. Ryan McSheffrey and Murray Gibson scored two each with the others going to Doug Keeler and Ron Bobbette.

Bogdan Podwysoki's two goals provided third-place Montreal with its victory margin in a relatively mild game at Montreal in which only two minor penalties were called, both against Marlboro defencemon Steve Durbano.

Bobby Lalonde, Jocelyn Guevremont and rookie Bobby Fee also tallied for the Junior Canadiens with Ralph Hopiavouri, Steve Shutt, Gavin Kirk and Paulin Bordeleau replying for Toronto.

Barber Most Unbelievable Of Phoenix Sharpshooters

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — "There were some absolutely unbelievable scores out there," Miller Barber drawled after the final round of the $125,000 Phoenix open golf tournament.

And his was the most unbelievable of them all, a remarkable 261 total, 23 under par on the flat, short, little desert layout named the Arizona Country Club, a par-71 course that yielded some of the lowest scores in the history of the Professional Golfers' Association tour.

Barber fired a 65 in the final round Sunday to pick up $25,000 for his fifth tour triumph.

But even with his total, he won by only two strokes and didn't nail it down until the final hole.

Billy Casper, who had a season-low 62 on the final round, and veteran Dan Sikes shared second at 263. Sikes had a final 64.

George Knudson of Toronto, who finished 10-under par for the four days, finished at 274 and was well back of the leaders.

Dave Hill, who scored a hole-in-one with an eight-iron shot on the 153-yard seventh, Homero Blancas and Rod Curl followed at 264. Hill and Blancas had 67s and Curl a 65.

Paul Harney, who held a one-stroke lead going into the final day, still had a shot at a share of second—at worst—when he came to the final hole, a 425-yard par-five.

He was on in two, but took four putts to get down. He finished with a 71 for 265 and was one of six tied at that figure.

Arnold Palmer had a 66 for 267, U.S. Open champ Tony Jacklin a 67 for 268 and PGA title holder Dave Stockton a 68 for 269.

Your Car

It Does Not Pay to Drive Your Car During Snowstorms

By RAY STAPLEY

This is the time of the year when the undercarriage of our vehicles is literally devoured by moisture, snow and ice, and the thousands of tons of salt and sand used to dispose of them.

I recently examined the body of my car after driving through a severe snowstorm. Everything underneath was plastered with a thick coat of slushy brine and huge ice packs had formed inside each of the fender wells.

After digging away what I could with a spade, I had the car washed and the hot water removed the rest of the muck. Until the outside temperature rises above the freezing point, the ice remains solidly locked to the undercarriage unless it is washed away at a car laundry. Apart from adding a lot of unecessary weight to the vehicle, this frozen mixture of salt and other impurities works night and day devouring the metal panels.

The most critical time for driving is during (or soon after) a snowstorm — when tons of salt and sand are thrown on the roadways. When the roads are treacherous, leaving the car at home and using public transportation is quicker and much more economical.

Apart from protecting the car's body, the irritation of being trapped in the traffic for long periods is not worth the effort. Just one stalled vehicle is all it takes to bring miles of traffic to a halt. Then when you do finally arrive at your destination, the next problem is to find a parking space where you will not become stuck in deep snow.

As well, loss of normal traction makes it more difficult to steer and stop our vehicles, increasing the possibility of collision.

While in the event of an accident most of us are covered by insurance, each claim we make usually means a jump in our premiums the following year.

Even when the roads are not covered with snow and sludge, winter driving is rough on the car. But to head out in a blizzard, during or right after a storm, is both risky and a waste of money.

Stop-and-go driving and crawling along in low gear cuts gas mileage in half. Revving the engine and spinning the driving tires to gain traction when stuck in snow can burn out the automatic transmission and other driveline components.

Apart from devouring the body, salt action also leads to deterioration of many mechanical parts such as steel brake lines, the parking brake mechanism, and steering linkage.

Years ago, driving could be a pleasure, but in today's congested traffic it's frequently a nerve-wracking grind even in good weather.

After figuring the costs of driving to work and paying for parking, a man I know decided to leave his car at home and use public transportation. He saves about $30 a month and gets to the office much faster.

Vehicles that must be driven regardless of road conditions should be washed as often as necessary to rid the undercarriage of ice and salt. Spending a few dollars at the car laundry is more economical than paying for whopping repair bills that can be triggered by corrosion.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Small Son Victim Of Tired Father

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: When my husband is tired he is irritable, and when he is irritable he takes it out on our 3 - year - old son. He strikes out at him. Sometimes on his bottom, but most often he slaps his face, or actually strikes his head with his fist.

Once he gave him a bloody nose. What I'm afraid of is that he may, in a fit of anger, really damage our boy's brain. I'm afraid of epilepsy or some other complication. I hope you'll write something about it. He reads your column. — Mrs. F.

Comment: There's been much in the news lately about the "child-beating syndrome." Some parents — rich or poor, intelligent or ignorant — actually batter their helpless children.

As in your own child's case, he may have been fortunae to get away with only a bloody nose. But unless your husband learns to control himself, the danger to your boy is even greater: there have been many authenticated case histories in medical journals of children actually having been beaten to death.

Your husband is skating on treacherous ice. Your son may be in actual danger. Child-beating often progresses in stages. It becomes a habit to release one's emotions on a defenceless youngster. Of course it's possible that hard blows to a child's head may cause immediate or potential brain damage.

If there's spanking to be done, an adult should learn to control himself (or herself) sufficiently to direct the slap at the "bottom" — where most children have some time in their lives experienced such parental punishment and discipline.

I hope that from now on, Mrs. F., your husband takes better aim at a less vulnerable target. Spanking is an art. If he is interested in it, he should learn it and apply it with reason.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Would you please come to my rescue? The problem is toilet-training. Our pediatrician told us that it was best to wait until the child is about 2 years old, when he can walk and has gained enough control to wait. Our in-laws feel differently.

Even before our daughter was born (she's 18 months-old), they let me know that a "good" mother started toilet training as soon as the baby reaches 3 months. No, I'm not exaggerating!

In other words, they said that as soon as the baby has finished eating, the mother should hold the baby on the toilet until he has had a bowel movement. This goes on until the child is completely trained.

Maybe I'm wrong. But if they're wrong please let them know it. I'm tired of the snide remarks that I'm a lazy, uninterested mother. Maybe your reply will keep some other mother from going through what I am. — Mrs N.

Comment: At the risk of getting into the middle of a family hassle, I'll come right out and say I'm on your side — and your pediatrician's. I've never been in favor of a "race" to see whose child is trained first. Sometimes winning that kind of race is really losing it.

For Mr. Y.: It is not true that creativity always lessens when one gets older. Much depends upon the efficiency of the brain circulation and general health. But another important factor is "desire"; if that is dampened down or extinguished, having a healthy brain doesn't help.

I'm sure you've known many relatively young persons who had less spirit and creative ability than some people in their 70s and 80s. If you feel like studying the piano at the age of 66, go right ahead. Be thankful you have the ears, eyes, fingers and brain to do the job.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Businessmen Pure But Dull

Every so often, some group takes a poll or survey of high school students and college freshmen, to determine what they think of American businessmen, their preachments and their practices.

Invariably, the results turn out the same: the students admire the businessmen's ability and commercial foresight and productive ingenuity — but considered them deficient in moral character and ethical standards.

My own impression — based on long experience and acquaintanceship with scores of successful business types — is almost precisely the reverse. I would say that the level of foresight and imagination is average at best, while the level of personal character is certainly as high as that of more respected occupations.

Of course, there are a few wolves and snakes in the corporate jungle — men who are not to be trusted, no matter what their occupation happens to be. But, even to my critical eye, these represent an unrepresentative minority of businessmen.

On the other hand, mediocrity, conformity, and sheer ploddingness characterize more corporate structures than do vision or boldness or brilliance of any sort. Most executives do their jobs dutifully and conscientiously and, defying the laws of physics, rise by their gravity.

One of the rich ironies of capitalism is that the men who run it tend to take credit for the system; when the truth of the matter is that the system (when well-oiled and sensibly regulated, as all systems must be), runs so admirably that even mediocre or myopic leadership cannot hurt it too much. (The Coolidge Era is a classic case in point.)

It is interesting that general uninformed opinion about these men takes away credit where it is deserved, and places it where it is largely unmerited. Most business successes are decent men, trying to do as fair a job as possible, under trying conditions. Yet, most of them are tarred with the ruthlessness and low cunning of only a minority.

Whereas, at the same time, these plodding and precedent-bound executives are customarily credited with vast entrepreneurial skill and subtlety and brilliance in manipulating economic and productive forces; when, in point of fact, they are more passenger than pilot, driven by jetstreams or buffeted by winds they have scarcely learned to chart.

It is one of the greatest glories of capitalism (even in the perverted "finance" form we have today) that it has been able to spread so much bounty to so many people, despite its constipated and often backward-looking leadership. But this, one of the strongest arguments for the system, will never be enunciated from the NAM rostrum.

Ford Men Will Vote On Three-year Contract

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ratification meetings to vote on a new three-year contract are scheduled today for about 13,800 hourly-rated employees of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.

The contract was reached Saturday between the firm and the United Auto Workers.

Approval of the contract would end a strike that began Tuesday in five Ontario centres. A union spokesman said he expects the results to be announced late this afternoon.

Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the UAW, said he expects the pact to be approved by the union's membership. "It's a good settlement," he said. The UAW's Ford council recommended approval Sunday.

The tentative agreement contains no surprises—being patterned after settlements reached with General Motors of Canada Ltd., Chrysler Canada Ltd. and Ford in the United States. Ford of Canada is the last of the Big Three automakers in North America to get a tentative agreement with the UAW.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 26

Your birthday today: You may be thrust into vigorous activity this year before you are clear of previous ventures which must be settled. Emotional ties become more important, perhaps a bit harder to manage.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Get started in good humor and stay that way while you drive an excellent bargain. Plan to tidy up details tomorrow; get the broad outlines set now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Continue yesterday's approach vigorously. Friends are full of theories, while your main trend of interest has gone on to more practical matters.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): All sorts of financial documentation afford an area for confusion or correction. Ventures can be more readily organized. Be ready for visitors.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): An early start and a full day of effort bring feelings of achievement. You can coax favors for an evening of social enjoyment.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Express yourself fully and directly, beginning as early as local circumstances permit. Competition is just enough challenge to make it fun.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Follow up good news this morning with corrections, revisions of your business and financial plans. Seek backing for worthwhile projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You'll be surprised at how much routine can be done with consistent effort. Family affairs are amenable to planning tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Think about self-improvement as you zip thru work. Strive for efficiency, seek more logical sequences for doing things. Gather loved ones this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Get ready for a campaign of greater effort. Revise your plans, organize your resources. Evening promises a change of atmosphere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Rise and shine as an individual. Realize your grace and dignity as you make use of your improving energy. There's much to celebrate in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Just when you are set to try something new, along comes somebody with a big story. Stay with your main projects. Extra help is available.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): This is an open opportunity day in which you more or less have your own way by using what you know to best advantage. Assume good will all around.

Canada Won't Try to Explain Other Lands to China -- Trudeau

JAKARTA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today Canada will not try to explain viewpoints of Asian or other countries to Communist China when the Canadian ambassador arives in Peking in April.

Last week Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak of Malaysia said he would ask Canada to intercede with the Peking government to explain his policy of big-power guarantees to safeguard the neutrality of Southeast Asia.

But this is not Canada's intention, he told a news conference shortly before leaving for Colombo, Ceylon, on his way home after an official visit to Indonesia.

"When we do have an ambassador in Peking he will be discussing questions of peace in the world," Trudeau said. "We are not going there with any particular mandate from any country . . . with any particular proposal to put before the Peking government."

Trudeau said Canada naturally will discuss multilateral as well as bilateral questions in Peking but takes the view that Malaysia, like Indonesia, could do its own explaining without Canada's help.

Canada is not anxious to be involved in the solving of problems, whether they are economic, military or strategic, in all parts of the world. Indeed, it would not be able to do this.

Canada's relations with Peking will not be any different than with any other country, Trudeau said.

Trudeau returned to Jakarta Sunday night from central Java, where he visited tourist resorts, ancient Javanese temples and the old palace of the Sultan of Jogjakarta.

He told Indonesian leaders at the weekend that Canada will increase its economic aid to Indonesia by 50 per cent this year.

In central Java, Trudeau flew to the volcanic eastern end of the island to visit one of the wonders of the world, Borobudur, an eighth-century Hindu temple of unique design.

Trudeau's party returned to Jogjakarte to visit the Sultan of Jogjakarta's palace, where they viewed a traditional Javanese shadow play with colorful puppets and accompanying music.

After lunch at the governor's palace, Trudeau took off for the nearby town of Solo where he visited a CARE-Medico project at the general hospital in which Canada's aid agency invested $60,000 last year.

His arrival at this model hospital was greeted by hundreds of children and all the nurses. After touring part of it, he was presented with a shadow play puppet in his own image and kissed Winnipeg nurse Valerie Kirby, who gave it to him.

To even things up, when he left he also kissed other Canadian nurses stationed there—Sharon Tiffin, Indian Head, Sask., Deanne McMillen, Toronto, Lois James, Porcupine, Ont., Rita Rovere, Drumheller, Alta., and Mrs. Helen Macrae, Kimberley, B.C. Then he flew back to Jakarta to be the host at a dinner for Indonesian President Suharto.

Bertrand Alarmed

Quebec 'Ripe for Solid Constitutional Blow

QUEBEC (CP)—Former Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand told a Union Nationale meeting over the weekend that Quebec's future is faced with "unprecedented threats" and said the province is "ripe for a solid constitutional blow" under a new type of Fulton-Favreau formula.

He was referring to the federal-provincial constitutional conference to be held in Ottawa Feb. 9. The search for a successful formula to amend the constitution is expected to be high on the agenda at the conference.

Mr. Bertrand made the remarks in an opening address to closed-door sessions of the party's national council. Notes were delivered to reporters after the meeting.

The meeting was called to consider the date of a leadership convention, set for sometime in June.

Recalling that Daniel Johnson's Union Nationale Opposition had thwarted an attempt by the 1965 Liberal government to sign an amendment formula with the federal government, Mr. Bertrand cautioned party members to remain on the alert.

Mr. Bertrand suggested there was a link between federal and provincial Liberals—a claim denied by both Liberal parties—and said these links had been obvious last fall.

Referring to the kidnap crisis in October, he said Quebec was staggered to its foundations.

"We saw a Liberal team, short of political know-how, so pitifully prostrated in the first days of the crisis that it had to seek refuge behind the federal government," the UN leader said.

"At the time, it was the opposition's duty to back up what was left of the state's authority, but in the long run it is evident that the problems uncovered by the crisis are far from being solved."

Referring the Parti Quebecois, Mr. Bertrand said:

"We are not going to place our collective future in the hands of inexperienced persons don't know what they want."

Mr. Bertrand announced he would step down from the party leadership shortly after his as radical as they are, who party suffered a devastating defeat at the hands of the Liberals in last April's provincial general election.

The leadership convention in June will be attended by some 1,300 voting delegates.

Five Seek to Fill Laporte's Old Seat

MONTREAL (CP) — Four candidates are lined up against Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer in a Feb. 8 byelection in which the Liberal minister hopes to win the national assembly seat left vacant last October by the slaying of Pierre Laporte by terrorists.

Mr. Cournoyer, labor minister in the previous Union Nationale government of Jean-Jacques Bertrand, was appointed labor minister in Premier Bourassa's Liberal government Oct. 29 although he did not have a seat in the national assembly.

Any other persons wishing to enter the byelection race have until nominations close at 2 p.m. today to enter their names.

Those who had entered by late Sunday were:

—Luke Dougherty, an independent who does free-lance advertising for small companies;

—Dr. Claude Longtin, a psychoanalyst running for the Parti Republicain;

—Pierre Marois, a lawyer carrying the standard of the Parti Quebecois;

—Clement Patry, an accountant on the Creditiste ticket.

The opposition Union Nationale announced earlier it would not oppose Mr. Cournoyer, saying they did not question their former labor minister's competence for his post.

Mr. Cournoyer lost to a Parti Quebecois candidate the national assembly seat he held as a Union Nationale member and the Liberal sweep last April cost Mr. Bertrand's government its power.

Mr. Cournoyer himself has long experience as a lawyer working in labor relations. He was also appointed to the Bertrand cabinet before winning a seat in the house.

He had been credited with finding a solution to a protracted dispute between the government and the province's teachers, guiding negotiations to the signing of the first province-wide contract with teachers.

Present standings in the 108-seat assembly are Liberals 71, Union Nationale 17, Creditistes 12, Parti Quebecois 7, vacant 1.

Strike in Sixth Day

LONDON (CP) — Britain's nationwide postal strike went into its sixth day today with no sign of an end in sight. The Union of Post Office Workers' 230,000 members quit work last Wednesday.

Liberal Parley Backs Separate School Grants

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the weekend policy conference of the Ontario Liberal party tacked tough amendments onto policy papers dealing with foreign ownership and pollution.

The delegates gave tacit endorsement to Liberal Leader Robert Nixon's policy of providing grants in public and separate schools to the end of Grade 13 by defeating the abolition amendment 236 to 89.

The education policy adopted by the party calls for sharing of facilities by the public and separate schools, and equal tax support for separate schools if they are open to every child regardless of religion.

Liberal education critic Tim Reid said the abolishment amendment disagreed with his views as well as the views of the party and of Mr. Nixon but was included "in the interests of participatory democracy."

Mr. Reid said in an interview confusion arose over his own position and that of his committee when the paper was presented Friday night for consideration by the plenary session of the full conference.

He said he and the committee are opposed to abolition but included the proposal in the final draft following a convention workshop session earlier Friday.

The proposal was one of several made by delegates attending the workshop which were not discussed, or voted upon, for lack of time.

All of these proposals were inserted in the final draft, Mr. Reid said, so delegates would have a chance to consider them at the plenary session. Normally, resolutions proposed at a workshop are approved in this initial stage before being presented to the plenary session.

"We did it in the interests of participatory democracy," Mr. Reid said. "And I had a few butterflies that it might just get accepted."

The conference endorsed an investment review board with the power to veto foreign takeovers of companies in Ontario but added a proposal that the board be given power to investigate any significant proposals for direct foreign investment in the province.

The pollution policy paper recommendations were greatly strengthened and added proposals called for such innovations as the immediate establishment of urban mass transit systems so cars can be banned from downtown areas.

Results of a vote on the pollution proposals were not available Sunday.

The workshop studying pollution called for a ban on disposable bottles and plastics that cannot be broken down by natural biological processes. It wanted a deposit on liquor bottles and a higher deposit on returnable bottles.

The workshop suggested that deadlines for secondary sewage treatment facilities in Ontario municipalities be advanced to 1975 from 1979, and for tertiary treatment to 1979 from 1989.

It also called for afterburners on all jets landing at Toronto and for Government research into toilets that would use less water.

The delegates approved a policy calling for a halt to logging and other resource-based operations in provincial parks and wilderness areas and proposed subsidies for this type of industry to move from Southern Ontario to Northern Ontario.

The conference approved the sale of water, electricity and other surplus energy resources where there is need. But the Liberals endorsed a controversial proposal that 55 per cent of licences for resources development projects be restricted to Canadians.

Ottawa Lawyer Again Heads Ontario Liberals

TORONTO (CP) — John Richard, 35, an Ottawa lawyer, Sunday was re-elected president of the Ontario Liberal party, defeating Gordon Ryan, 38, of Toronto, in a two-way battle.

Other officers elected at the annual convention were vice-president Janice Steele, London; treasurer Dorothy Petrie, Toronto; secretary Don Roseburgh, Toronto; directors Dr. Ian Wilson Cobourg, Jim Dunham, Hamilton, Grace Rumball, Sudbury. Bernie Clayman, Toronto, Mrs. Don Cameron, Ottawa, and Penny Rossini, Burlington.

Frank Howard Flays NDP's Waffle Group

OTTAWA (CP) — Frank Howard, a candidate for the leadership of the New Democratic Party, has scathingly rejected proposals of the party's so-called Waffle group for public ownership of Canada's resource industries.

"A call for the nationalization of all Canadian resource industries could only come from a highly rarefied atmosphere where theories supplant real life and doctrines replace facts," he said in a prepared statement Friday.

The MP for British Columbia's Skeena riding said across-the-board nationalization is a "balloon-like concept that has been exploded many times over in the past."

"Even the most elastic imagination should recognize that nationalization is no universal remedy for our economic sickness."

Mr. Howard called on all clear-thinking people in the NDP to reject "the academic and professorial theories of the Waffle group which, because they are theoretical, feed upon themselves for support and substantiation."

PC Leadership Candidates Keep Busy Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With only two full weeks remaining before the Ontario Progressive Conservative party leadership convention, none of the five declared candidates risked taking the weekend off from campaigning.

Two candidates, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch and Financial and Consumers Affairs Minister Bert Lawrence didn't even find time Sunday to spend at home.

And the three candidates who stayed closer to home were kept busy most of the day attending public and private meetings.

Mines and Northern Affairs Minister Allan Lawrence said in a statement at Toronto government must take new approaches to helping the poor.

In Chatham, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough called for changes in the Canadian taxation system and succession duties as means of attaining more economic independence from the United States.

Education Minister William Davis spent Sunday in Toronto holding private meetings.

New Development Fund To Invest Two Billion

Welch Wants Policy Parley

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Unemployment should be the Ontario government's "No. 1 priority," Education Minister William Davis, a candidate for leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party, said Monday.

He told Peterborough party members and delegates to the Feb. 10-12 leadership convention in Toronto that schools are "not thought of as holding areas."

He denied the government is keeping people in colleges and universities to keep them off the job market.

Both he and another leadership candidate, Robert Welch, campaigning in Toronto, spoke of economic nationalism, which has been adopted as an election issue by the provincial New Democratic Party.

Mr Davis said he found it "very disturbing" and warned that steps towards this goal must be made in a "pragmatic and logical way."

Mr. Welch, the provincial secretary, said it is a federal responsibility to establish a Canadian policy of nationalism.

But "because of the failure of the federal government to sort out" this question, a national convention to set Canada's goals for cultural and economic self-determination should be held before the end of the year.

Mr. Welch said at Toronto that the suggested national conference would include politicians from all three levels of government, as well as representatives of business, labor unions, consumer associations, universities and all political parties.

British House Chaotic

LONDON (CP) — Chaotic parliamentary scenes reminiscent of the 1956 Black Friday in the Canadian Commons boiled up at Westminster Monday night as Opposition Laborites revolted against the government's intention to invoke a debate "guillotine" to its hotly-fought Industrial Relations Bill.

About 40 Labor members—mainly left-wingers on the back benches—stormed the floor of the Commons at one stage and protested so loudly that new Speaker Selwyn Lloyd, unable to make himself heard, suspended the sitting for 15 minutes.

The last time a similar incident happened here was during an uproarious debate in the 1956 Suez crisis when the House was suspended for 30 minutes.

Coincidentally, this was just about the time that Opposition members in the Canadian Commons threw the House into disorder with a rebellion against the Liberal government's move to apply closure to debate on its controversial natural gas pipeline bill.

The stormy scene here was precipitated by the government's announced plan to place a 150-hour limit on discussion of its huge 150-clause industrial relations bill, which it wants to get through the Commons by Easter.

After the unofficial uprising, government leader William Whitelaw accepted an orthodox Opposition amendment to the "guillotine" to allow six days instead of four for the third reading stage of the bill.

Canadian Control Of New Firms Aim

OTTAWA (CP) — A major government program unveiled Monday to encourage Canadian ownership of domestic industry would concentrate on future business rather than trying to buy back control of existing industries.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson emphasized Canadian control of future industrial growth after presenting Parliament with long-awaited legislation to establish a Canadian Development Corporation.

It would channel $2 billion in government and private funds into development of Canadian industry.

Mr. Benson told a news conference it was never his idea that the CDC—a political idea for a decade and Liberal party policy since 1963—should be an instrument to buy Canada back.

Rather, he said, the CDC would be a major new source of investment funds to finance developments where large amounts of money are needed.

He mentioned new gas and oil pipelines, satellite communications, industry dependent on new technology, resources, northern development and "industries where Canada has a special competitive advantage."

A statement from his office described the CDC as a large-scale source of funds to help establish new enterprise, encourage growth and efficiency in existing companies and generally "help shape and secure future Canadian enterprise."

In the same vein, Mr. Benson stressed that the CDC would be a private corporation rather than a state agency and "its activity will involve close relationships with the business and financial community." It would be independent of Parliament, he said.

The CDC would be financed initially by federal funds and its first holdings would be existing Crown ownerships in petroleum, transport, uranium and chemicals.

Eventually, however, control of the giant holding corporation would be spread widely through a public offering of shares to Canadians, reducing the direct government interest to a minimum of 10 per cent.

It would be several years before individual Canadians could buy shares, probably at $5 a piece.

The CDC's investment in private companies would be substantial, but probably short of full control—"a major shareholder in private corporations, but not necessarily a majority shareholder," said Mr. Benson.

The emphasis on future investment in tandem with private business and the stress on the CDC as a privately-owned holding company immediately provoked protests from those who had expected a major instrument for extending Canadian control of Canada's economy.

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas described the bill as a "disastrous retreat" from the original idea proposed in 1963 by Walter Gordon, a Liberal economic nationalist who was then finance minister.

"It sounds like a complete sellout to private enterprise," he added.

Mr. Benson turned aside questions about how CDC investment policies might be affected by future government policy—now in preparation—on limits to foreign ownership of specific industries, such as uranium.

But he said the CDC should not be a tool of government policy.

CDC's first consideration in deciding how to invest money, he said, should be the ordinary private consideration of whether it would be a good business investment.

Secondly, he added, the decision should be based on whether it would be an investment that would be of benefit to all Canadians.

Therefore, such decisions would depend on the persons running the corporation—18 to 21 directors, all Canadians and mostly Canadian residents who are "able and experienced entrepreneurs."

He refused to discuss who the cabinet is considering to head the CDC.

The corporation initially would be financed by $250 million in government funds—$100 million in return for ownership shares in the first year and $75 million each in the next two years. There would also be authority for government loans of up to $100 million.

Ultimately, authorized capital of the corporation would be $2

Astronauts Practise For Landing

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — The Apollo 14 astronauts today practise a new landing technique intended to steer them to a pinpoint landing in one of the roughest areas of the moon, the craggy Fra Mauro highlands.

Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa planned several hours in spaceship simulators, honing themselves for the delicate landing attempt.

In the new landing manoeuvre, the Apollo 14 command ship Kitty Hawk will dip within 12 miles of the lunar surface before releasing the lunar module Antares for its descent Feb. 5.

This will give Shepard and Mitchell about 26 seconds extra hovering time to search for a smooth touchdown site.

The Apollo 11 and 12 lunar ships separated from their command vehicles at altitudes of about 70 miles and fired themselves down to within nine miles before starting the final descent.

Two Canadians Die in Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (Reuter) — After a second night of sporadic fighting, the people of Kampala today poured into the streets to cheer the soldiers who ousted President Milton Obote.

The capital assumed almost a carnival atmosphere as thousands of Ugandans danced through the city and tore down portraits of the deposed president.

Reports in Nairobi, Kenya, said today at least 70 people were killed in the fighting that accompanied the coup. There was no confirmation of the reports here.

But two Canadian Roman Catholic priests were killed in fighting at Entebbe airport Monday. They were identified by officials of their missionary order in Montreal as Rev. Jean-Paul Demers, 60, of St. Isadore, Que., and Rev. Gerald Perrault, 55, of St. Hyacinthe, Que. They were members of the Order of White Fathers of Africa, and were killed by machine-gun fire. A third missionary, Rev. Adrian Farmer of Sarsfield, Ont., was injured.

The sound of gunfire and the occasional crump of a mortar punctuated the pre-dawn quiet today.

In downtown Kampala itself, everything seemed to have returned to normal as the city's 47,000 residents prepared to reopen stores, offices and showrooms after a 24-hour hiatus.

Maj.-Gen. Idi Amin Dada, the army commander who engineered Monday's revolt, ordered his soldiers on to the streets today to guard against possible counter-moves, but they were unobtrusive.

A tank and an armored personnel carrier rolled through the centre of the city with soldiers waving and smiling at the cheering crowd.

Obote, who was en route home from the Commonwealth conference in Singapore when the coup took place, spent the night at the Panafric Hotel in Nairobi, only 350 miles from Kampala.

He was said to have had tears in his eyes as he stood on the flight deck of the VC-10 bringing him home and listened to a radio message that Amin Dada had taken control.

Manson and His Three Women Found Guilty of 7 Murders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury that convicted Charles Manson and three women followers of first-degree murder in the bizarre Sharon Tate slayings meets Thursday to consider the penalty: death or life imprisonment.

The prosecution said it would demand death in the gas chamber.

The penalty trial, required by California law, will bring new testimony and the chance to recall witnesses heard during the trial's seven months.

Chief defence counsel Paul Fitzgerald said the verdicts were expected, and the defendants were somewhat resigned, which explained their decorous behavior Monday, contrasting sharply with emotional outbursts earlier in the trial.

Manson, 36, shaggy-haired chieftain of a wandering hippie-type tribe, still managed to get in a punchline after all verdicts were read.

"I think they're all guilty," he said of the jurors, then shouted at Judge Charles H. Older:

"We're still not allowed to put on a defence! You won't outlive that, old man!"

Counsel for the accused declined to let the women take the stand for fear they would incriminate themselves trying to clear Manson.

As the jury prepared to deliver its verdict after 42 hours 40 minutes of deliberation spread over more than eight days, the three women, Susan Atkins, 22, Leslie Van Houten, 21, and Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, shuffled into court smiling and chatting among themselves.

The defendants were charged with 27 counts of murder-conspiracy in the August, 1969, slaying of the blonde, pregnant actress and four visitors to her hilltop mansion, and in the killings a night later of a wealthy market owner and his wife.

The prosecution said Manson ordered the killings in hopes of starting a race war he felt was predicted in a Beatles song, and that after the war Manson expected to take control of the world.

The women obeyed Manson's every command in robot-like fashion including his orders to kill, the prosecution contended.

A parade of often colorful witnesses told of the women's part in the murder mission, how Miss Atkins stabbed Miss Tate, then tasted her blood; how Miss Krenwinkel stabbed through victims' bones and later declared that her hand hurt; how Miss Van Houten told of stabbing a victim already dead and finding that it was "fun."

Northern Head Not Optimistic

No indication of personnel cutbacks have been received at the Belleville plant of Northern Electric Co. Ltd. whose president yesterday warned that cost reductions could cause company layoffs across Canada.

V. O. Marquez said in a Montreal interview that the financial outlook for 1971 is not good and the company is faced with payroll increases of $16 million for its 24,000 employees.

W. A. Thompson, manager of Northern's Belleville plant said today "tight control" on finances has existed at the plant for some time and will be maintained.

"We are concerned here with expenses as they are everywhere else at our plants," he said. "But there is no immediate indication of any major change in our situation here."

Labor force at the Belleville plant currently totals about 1,000. Altogether, since the fall, about 100 people have been laid off — the last being in November, said Mr. Thompson.

There have been no other layoffs since that time.

Mr. Marquez attributed much of the company's problems to a five-week strike at its Bramalea plant in late 1970.

"To continue to operate in a profitable manner, we must reduce expenses by $15 million in 1971," he said.

He said the company also was considering pay cuts as an alternative to layoffs but noted "that in the past, unions have been unwilling to accept them."

In 1970, Northern Electric laid off 1,000 employees.

First three winners were Grace Kovacs, Jean Williams and Martin Valks.

Crossing Guard To Be Requested

City council at its next meeting will be asked to approve the hiring of a school guard for Church Street north of Victoria Ave. for the protection of pupils attending St. Michael's Separate School.

The city traffic committee, at its regular meeting Monday, recommended hiring of a crossing guard following a report by Police Chief Douglas Crosbie and Police Inspector Ralph Blatchford.

Normally, the decision to hire a crossing guard is a straightforward matter, but in this case the problem is complicated by the presence of high school students and also by the fact that school buses load and unload at different locations — in some instances on the church parking lot across from the school.

Inspector Blatchford told the committee there was need for a crossing guard but the proper place for the crosswalk was still to be determined.

The closeness of the Church Street hill and the fact that classes of children were frequently being taken across the street for church services, will enter into the decision on the crosswalk location.

And it will also be important that Nicholson College high school students agree to use the pedestrian crosswalk.

Inspector Blatchford said young children were great copiers and could not be expected to use a specific crosswalk if older students crossed the street at will.

HENRY STUBBINS

UCS Meets Monday

The annual meeting of the United Community Services of Belleville and District will be held on Feb. 1 at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker for the event will be Henry Stubbins, executive director of the Community Funds and Councils of Canada.

Community Funds and Councils of Canada is the national organization for United Appeals, United Funds, Community Chests, Social Planning Councils and allied organizations across Canada, with headquarters in Ottawa.

Executive head of the organization between 1950-55, returning to the position in 1966, he served 10 years as executive director of the United Appeal of Ottawa and District.

Past president of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, he has had extensive experience with federated Community Services in Chicago, Toronto and Winnipeg.

His topic will be The Future of the United Way.

The 1971 United Appeal Chairman for Belleville will be announced at the Feb. 1 meeting.

Reports from UCS president Robert J. Ord, treasurer Ken Leavens and nominating committee chairman Dr. Evelyn Williamson, will also be presented.

Grade Nines Mainly Affected By Shifting School Boundaries

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Secondary school boundaries will be changed next year to relieve overcrowding.

But the switch was made under protest from one trustee and is expected to cause further grumbling before it is completed.

Although some details have yet to be decided, next year's grade 9 students are the group mainly affected.

With the opening of Bayside Secondary School next September, 396 Middleton Park students in grades 9, 10 and 11 will be shifted from Trenton High School to Bayside. Another 423 students from Frankford, Batawa and Sidney township, now attending Centennial, will be enrolled at Bayside. This will relieve the overcrowding at Trenton and provide 155 pupil-spaces at Centennial.

To ease the load at Quinte, 130 grade 9 and 10 pupils from that school, whose homes are in the western part of Thurlow township, will be moved to Centennial.

To relieve the overcrowding at Moira Secondary, the boundaries of its area will be changed. City students east of MacDonald Ave. who begin grade 9 next September will be enrolled at BCI. All this year's grade 8 students at D. R. Atkins in Thurlow will go into grade 9 at BCI next year instead of at Moira. The number involved in this shift is expected to about 55.

"We don't like to move youngsters once they have started to a school," director of education Eric Runacres told Hastings county board members at their regular meeting last night.

But he presented figures showing that Moira, Quinte, Centennial and Trenton secondary schools are now overcrowded by a total of 960 more pupils than the four schools are designed to accommodate. Only by retaining some portables and by moving students to Bayside and BCI can the strain be relieved, he said.

Trustee Milford Waller of Thurlow raised objections and presented an alternative plan. He said many grade 8 students in his township had been registered at Quinte and brought gym uniforms. They would now be faced with the financial burden of new uniforms and the prospect of 30 minutes longer on buses every day to attend Centennial.

His alternative proposal involved moving the two-year occupations students instead. Many parents in his township are up in arms about the boundary shift, he said.

Raymond Rowe of Frankford also raised objections.

"What happens to students who have come up through the senior band at Centennial and want to continue?" he asked. "The music program at Bayside will not be as good as Centennial's for a few years to come."

Superintendent D. C. Stirling, who presented the planned boundary shifts to trustees, said some consideration would be given to students who didn't want to move because an optional subject was not offered at the new school.

"We can't move a student so he can take an option like psychology, but we can move him, or let him remain in his present school, for a language or math," he said.

The two Trenton trustees, Mrs. Jean Hutchinson and Ralph Weaver, said the change had been explained to national defence dependents at Middleton Park and they had accepted it.

"You can't show preference for the grade 11s in one school and not in the others and get away with it," Mr. Weaver remarked.

"I would like to point out that we moved 250 students of all grades last year from Tweed to Madoc," interjected Laurison Gunning of Tweed.

The board finally approved a policy that students should be moved as little as possible once they enter a secondary school, but existing space at other schools should be utilized to relieve overcrowding.

At the suggestion of Robertson Collins, the setting of boundaries was left to administration, who will make the decision in consultation with trustees and principals involved.

"There is nothing inflexible about this decision," he said. "We will have to change boundaries practically from day to day as population densities change. Let administration decide; then if there are any complaints the board will deal with them."

"We'll never suit everyone," concluded chairman Donald Williams. "One of the responsibilities of being a trustee is accepting unpopular decisions."

CP Rail Crossing Lights Approved

The Canadian Pacific Railways crossing on Herchimer Ave. in the east end of the city is to get crossing signal lights.

Members of the city traffic committee yesterday recommended that the city's share of the installotion cost be included in this year's budget.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said that the Canadian Transport Commission had directed that the crossing protection be installed.

The city's share of the installation will cost $2,000 with an annual $320 maintenance cost.

Several committee members wondered if there was enough traffic on Herchimer Ave. to warrant the installation.

It was pointed out, however, that there were a half dozen or more residences south of the tracks and that many people working in Foster Ward used the bay park road and Herchimer Ave. to avoid Dundas Street traffic.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said the crossing would always remain open as there would never be any justification to close the street.

"We really have no choice" (but to install the traffic protection), stated Alderman Paul Russell as he moved the installation cost be included in the year's budget.

Taxpaying Made Easy

OTTAWA (Special) — Taxes are never easy to pay but individual taxpayers receiving a Notice of Assessment or Re-assessment showing a balance of tax unpaid can now pay through their local banks or other financial institutions.

This new payment plan, announced yesterday by the Hon. Herb Gray, Minister of National Revenue, joins previous plans for payment of quarterly instalments without charge at banks and other financial companies.

The forms are designed so that personal information can be detached before making payment.

Companies co-operating in this new scheme are the Canadian chartered banks, The Canada Trust Company, The Montreal City and District Savings Bank, members of the National Association of Canadian Credit Unions, La Federation des Caisses Populaires Desjardins, the Province of Alberta Treasury Branches and the Province of Ontario Savings Office.

Elusive Leak Stymies PUC

Public Utilities Commission workmen are still looking for an elusive watermain leak which for the past month has been losing an estimated one-half-million gallons daily.

Neil Britton, assistant manager for the utilities, says his department is not certain whether the water loss is resulting from one break or from several.

"All we know is that we are dumping about a half-million-gallons more daily than we feel we should be," Mr. Britton said.

So far, however, there has been no success in tracking down the elusive leak, and the search is not made any easier by frozen ground conditions.

"The water is not coming to the surface, so it must be getting away through rock crevices or sewers," Mr. Britton said.

Watermain leaks are nothing new for the utilities commission but usually the trouble can be spotted and the mains repaired.

Still, Mr. Britton says there is nothing to be alarmed about and there are no panic buttons being pressed.

So far, the check has been confined to "sounding" fire hydrants and main valves, this work being carried out during the night when normal water use is at a minimum.

It is expected that the break or breaks involve one or more smaller mains.

But with utilities serviceman still stymied in their search for the break, Mr. Britton says that householders could help to localize the leak.

He asked that householders hearing an unusual echo or roar in their waterpipes when taps are turned off to call the utilities office.

If the house is near the break in the sewer main the roar will be quite audible, he said.

Tweed Veneer Plant Gets Development Loan

Lakewood Forest Products (Eastern) Ltd. of Tweed, manufacturers of hardwood veneers, has been granted a $12,000 forgivable loan by the Ontario Development Corporation to assist in the cost of a plant extension, it was announced today by Honorable Stanley J. Randall.

A company spokesman said a 5,000 square foot addition had already been erected and has been in operation since the first of the year.

With the new equipment, the firm will be able to splice random sized off-cuts together and sell them in standard sizes to a wider market.

The firm specializes in the production of wall panelling and is now able to take random sizes of veneer and splice them to standard 4 by 8 foot sizes.

"What it means is that we will be able to take the random sized and finish the product to a further stage of completion," said the company spokesman.

With the new extension in production, the firm now has a payroll of about 80 workers. A further 13 jobs will be provided after five years.

Lakewood Forest Products (Eastern) Ltd. is the former Hunter Veneers, which commenced operation in Tweed about 1948.

In 1963, Hunter Veneers sold to Wood - Mosaic (Canada) Veneers Ltd. which later changed the name to Lakewood Forest Products.

The new plant extension will mean an increase in the dollar volume of the company's operation and will boost sales to about $1-million annually from the present $750,000. Seventy-five per cent of the firm's sales are to the United States.

Forgivable loans by the ODC are interest-free and if the business operates satisfactorily over a six-year period, no repayment of principal is required.

Musical Approach To Teaching Is Demonstrated

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — A music workshop sponsored by the Prince Edward County board of education last weekend at Kente School ended on an enthusiastic note as parents, trustees and teachers joined in watching a new approach to music instruction.

"It is a realistic approach which involves the whole child. There is a great deal of movement," said Russell Williams, special services co-ordinator for Prince Edward following the workshop.

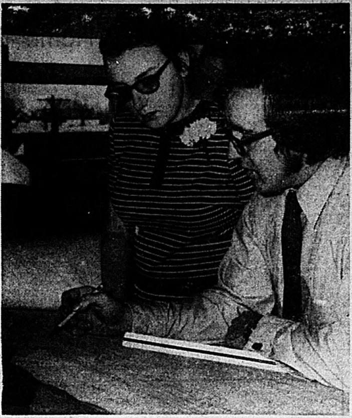
"The patterning of the program of this music is close to the patterning of how the mind works. Children learn to read better, do mathematics better and develop a good self image," explained Mr. Williams. He emphasized that the purpose of Saturday's workshop was to acquaint Prince Edward County teachers with an opportunity to develop the children of the primary classes in their whole learning with music as the central track.

Education through music was demonstrated by Mrs. Grace Henderson, music supervisor of separate schools, Kent County; Mrs. Geraldine McGeorge, music supervisor of public schools, Kent County and Mary Jane Dicku, Connecticut, who is spending a sabbatical year studying at the Richards Institute, California.

The workshop dealt with the approach to music instruction and it was noted that although teachers do not need to be musical experts, some knowledge of the subject is necessary. Thee program examined was initially developed by Zoltan Kodaly and later followed by Mary Helen Richards, who founded the Richards Institute, California. This method of study is chiefly carried out in Kent County.

Mr. Williams said yesterday, 'we hope that it will get started in Prince Edward and become part of our music program."

In the program children first learn a song for the pleasure of singing it and absorbing the intricacies of its melody, rhythmic pattern and form. It is studied critically when the student has learned it. Rhythm, form and tone are analyzed and pupils study them through movement, singing, using their voices and drawing "maps" of the songs.



Would-be Draftsman?

Catherine Kidd, grade 12 student at Centennial Secondary School, is aiming for a career in either law or psychology, but this week she is studying the rudiments of municipal government at city hall. As the third 1971 "mayor of the week," Miss Kidd is seen with draftsman Peter Ouderkirk looking over plans in the city public works department.

OHC Survey Is Revealing

TRENTON (Staff) — Council here last night accepted the recommendation of the Ontario Housing Corporation that an additional 45 units of family housing and 30 senior citizens' units be built in the town by OHC.

A report received by the Town of Trenton, detailing results of a Housing Corporation survey of the community concludes that a considerable demand for public housing still remains here. However, it states demand has been partially satisfied by the purchase of 11 senior citizen units last July and completion of 36 family and 22 senior citizen units in September.

The OHC report breaks down the demand for 45 family housing units as follows: 6 two-bedroom units, 30 three-bedroom, 7 four-bedroom and 2 five-bedroom. All senior citizen units would have one bedroom.

"Unemployment in the Trenton area is currently high." the report says. It mentions that August 1970 figures for the Trenton office of Canada Manpower showed 881 males and 560 females unemployed in the Trenton area. This represents 10.2 per cent of the labor force tended by the Trenton office.

As part of the study, questionnaries were mailed to 32 local employers asking for details of wage and salary levels. Twenty-two firms replied: these employ an estimated half the town labor force, the report says.

The OHC Employer Survey indicated that 68.6 per cent of the employees of the 22 respondents earned less in 1970 than the 1969 Provincial average wage of $121.55 per week.

The report points out that many new homes have been built outside of the town limits and contends that one "reason for such development is that within the Town limits remain only about 175 acres that are undeveloped" and this is scattered throughout the town. It concludes that "Trenton as a separated Town has just about completely filled its boundaries."

A survey of potential family candidates for Ontario Housing in the town showed that 20 per cent were living in accommodation that lacked central heating and five out of eight of these families would pay less for accommodation if they were living in Ontario Housing premises.

More than two-thirds of the senior citizens polled live in centrally heated accommodation and almost 80 per cent had private 3-piece bathroom facilities. Four out of five would pay less if they were living in Ontario Housing units.

Town Short Of Land

TRENTON (Staff) — Council Monday endorsed the recommendation of the town's Industrial and Economic Development Committee that a delegation be sent to Queen's Park to investigate the possibility of the town acquiring additional land for industrial development.

Councillor Paul Tripp, chairman of the committee, told council Trenton has little land left for industrial development. The committee proposed that new lands be purchased and a 10-year plan for industrialization be formulated.

Week to Honor Police Forces

TRENTON (Staff) — Council here last night proclaimed the week of March 7 to 13 to be Law Enforcement Week in Trenton.

The Trenton branch of the Knights of Columbus had requested that the proclamation be made as part of an international program the brotherhood is sponsoring to honor police forces.

Basis for the recommendation was a resolution made at the Houston convention of the Knights of Columbus pledging members to do everything possible to assist the police in securing law and order.

A Knights of Columbus policy statement read to council expressed concern over the increasing rate of "wanton violence . . . snipers' bullets" and the fact that in many communities it is "not safe for people to walk the streets at night."

Law Enforcement Week in Trenton will be highlighted by a dinner for members of the town constabulary, local Ontario Provincial Police detachments and the military police force at CFB Trenton.

New Morality Speaker's Topic

TRENTON (Staff) — Teenagers and their parents are invited to the next meeting of Murray Township Ratepayers Association when the contemporary social scene comes under discussion.

Guest speaker will be Eric Caulfield, Loyalist College sociology department, whose topic will be The New Morality — Where Will It Stop? The address will be followed by a general discussion on current social themes.

The meeting will be Feb. 3 at Stockdale School, starting at 8 p.m.

Snowmobile Bylaw Shelved

TRENTON (Staff) — No decision was made by council here last night whether to impose a bylaw to regulate the use of snowmobiles within the town.

The administrative board had met with representatives of the Parks Board, Police Department, Chamber of Commerce and a newly - formed Trenton Snowmobile Club to discuss proposals for such a bylaw.

Taking recommendations of these groups into consideration, the board suggested to council:

—that use of snowmobiles be banned in all town parks except Centennial, Hanna, Stanley and Bayshore Parks.

—that Mondays through Thursdays the vehicles should be used only between 8 a.m. and 11 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

—that snowmobiles be banned at all hours on Dundas Street East and West, Front, Division, Quinte and Sidney Streets and portions of Catherine Street and Dufferin Avenue.

Jack Bonn, representing the Trenton Snowmobile Club, told council that "in essence the proposed bylaw is a good thing. . . but it is only fair that council consider amendments".

He suggested that both Mount Pelion and the parklot on Kerr Crescent be added to the list of four snowmobiling parks recommended by the administrative board and that snowmobile use be allowed in the parks around the clock.

Mr. Bonn said that he had intended to stay out on his snowmobile for two hours Sunday but, forgetting the time he stayed out for five hours. He contended that this could happen to others while snowmobiling in the parks and on the bay and they would be stuck out on their vehicles after the curfew.

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry told council that the administrative board had considered allowing snowmobiles in the Kerr Crescent park but this had been ruled out because large numbers of children play in the park.

Councillor George Brown said Mount Pelion should be off limits to the machines because allowing them there would create too much noise in a hospital zone.

Deputy Clerk Arden Royce said he had learned early yesterday that the parks board no longer supported having Stanley Park and Bayshore Park being made available for snowmobilers.

Utilities Commission Power Is Questioned by Councillor

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON (Staff) — At last night's council meeting, councillor Ted Parker asked town clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry to find out the basis by which the Public Utilities Commission manages Trenton's water system and whether council is in a position to overrule PUC decisions.

The request was prompted by a decision of the commission Saturday that it would not sign the controversial Dufferin Developments subdividers' agreement approved by council Jan. 11.

The new PUC delayed accepting the agreement at its first regular meeting last Thursday although Belleville lawyer J. D. Templeman, representing Dufferin, told them at that time that signing of the pact was in line with a town policy established in 1967.

Mayor Duncan McDonald, an ex-officio commissioner, retorted then that the policy had been revised so often in the interim it had lost effectiveness. He said the matter deserved more investigation, and it was tabled.

Saturday, the commission resolved that it would not participate in the subdivision agreement on terms ratified by council two weeks ago against the mayor's wishes. By the agreement passed by council, the town and developers would share the cost of extending services to the proposed Dufferin Developments subdivision (southwest of Trenton High School) on a 50-50 basis, in accord with the 1967 policy.

Commissioners propose now that the subdivider should pay 100 percent of the cost of extending services to the new housing site and that the town should act as agent in recovering 50 per cent of the cost on the subdividers behalf.

Both Mayor McDonald and new commission member Charles Hi[illegible] ance of the council-approved agreement that has prompted two special council meetings in the last two weeks. PUC chairman and former Mayor D. James MacDonald was not in accord with them.

Mayor McDonald refused to sign the agreement into law after council approved it two weeks ago, prompting councillor Ted Parker to call council into special session to empower him to sign it.

A further special council meeting was called last Thursday, hours before the PUC meeting, to clarify two contentious points in the agreement before councillor Parker signed the agreement with Dufferin for the town corporation Council decided then to cut engineering fees to be levied by the town against the developer in half and to share half the cost of servicing a 300 ft. portion of Tripp Blvd. not dealt with in the original format of the subdividers' pact.

Signing of the agreement had been delayed earlier, too. Last November, during the municipal elections, council had to forestall its ratification because it could not sign a money bill that would commit a new council to expenditures The matter was left for the newly elected council to deal with.

With council having registered approval of the 50-50 cost sharing agreement and the mayor and the PUC having shown disapproval, the next stage in settling the issue will be determined by the findings of Trenton's clerk-comptroller as to whether council controls the Public Utilities Commission and can alter its decisions.

Some Driveways To Be Cleaned

TRENTON (Staff) — The Town of Trenton will begin a program of cleaning out driveways for policemen, firemen and doctors, council decided here last night.

Decision on the matter followed a report by a special committee of council formed at the last regular meeting when Dr. J. V. Byrne, of 92 Dundas St., East asked that the town consider such a procedure.

The committee composed of councillors George Brown and Stan Ketcheson and town engineer Arthur Campbell concurred with the doctor's suggestion that the town keep the driveways of those involved in emergency services clean.

Another recommendation of the committee made to council last night was that a publicity campaign be instituted in local media to advise Trenton residents not to shovel snow to the left side of driveway entrances because snowplows passing along the street will sweep it back and plug them.

The Canadian Image

Prime Minister Trudeau, according to one observer at the Commonwealth Conference, has helped to dispel the notion that Canadians and Canada are the most boring people and country in the world.

To what extent is this true of Canadians and Canada? Maybe we lack the multi-typed characteristics of say the English, with their incredible variety of accents and regional backgrounds. Similarly, the French and Italians occupy land masses in which ancient cultures and an exotic climate make for peoples and life styles of similar fascination and unpredictability.

Germany too, with its high standard of living and likewise Sweden, are countries of ancient traditions, interesting also from the standpont of folklore, architecture, and music.

Our own country then, by comparison . . . we have little in the way of ancient tradition, yet what there is has significance and we see it mainly in the architecture and traditions of French Canada, as well as closer to home in attractions like Upper Canada Village.

As a people, though, we tend to look and speak alike in a general sort of way. The sharp observer can tell the Canadian abroad, as distinct from say the American, male and female, for there is a look about us, and we tend to dress alike too; but again this is speaking generally.

We have our clubs and clannish ways which by their very nature are alien to the spontaneity which, ideally, should mark human relationships and spark interest in chance meetings. Or is it that people would never get together in a meaningful way if there were no such groups? It is the herd instinct at work, but it tends to separate, to keep apart the sexes for example, and because this is such a materialist-oriented society we have the phenomenon of groups of businessmen dining together and women (Women's Lib notwithstanding) still playing a largely secondary role, relegated to long lonely days at home, seeing little of their husbands and tied to the needs of children.

In situations such as these there is, undeniably, a strong element of boredom, aggravated by the state of "apartheid" which is involved because husbands and wives are doing different things. Conversely, this can make for more stimulating relations, if both husband and wife enjoy what they are doing and find interest in talking over the day's activities, but this may be the exception rather than the rule.

Yet, if we are such a boring people, and the country similarly ill-endowed, if our ideals and cultural aspirations rise little above camping in summer and snowmobiling in winter, why then do so many people from those same European countries come to our shores? To share in our materialist and progressive society, that is why, although at the moment our economy is rather under a cloud because of unemployment.

At the same time it must be said that maybe this is why there is some truth in the charge that Canada is boring. Because it is a materialist-based society, we are concerned more with things than with people. Ironically too, the Europeans who come here from countries of more enduring traditions tend to fit into our stable, predictable — and boring — ways.

We almost forgot, though . . . remember Expo 67, which belied the image of Canada as a dull place. The trouble is, Expo was larger than life, and it is in the past; even the contemporary Man and His World is not the same. We are what we are, and are judged thus, as of now.

African Intrigue

If it is true that Communist East German agents are in part responsible for the predicament of West German nationals accused of involvement in a recent attempted coup in former French Guinea, it would not be surprising.

A recent report on this page by German Features of Hamburg told of "workers" from the eastern sector of Berlin who filter into West Berlin on special missions: as couriers or political agitators or as agents of the East German security police.

And if West Africa is a fair distance from Berlin, that does not deter the Communists from operating there too, for espionage, by its very nature, is international. The Bonn government has accused its East German counterpart of falsifying documents to incriminate a number of its citizens in the West African country.

The fate of these citizens is unknown, although one is reported to have committed suicide in prison. Because of the situation, West Germany is said to be about to break off diplomatic relations with the Guinea regime.

Post Office the Loser Since Strikes

Telephones, Home Deliveries, Supplant Mail

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Well, what do you know . . . or realistically expect . . . there is the threat of more trouble in the trouble-hooked Post Office.

The service had only, painfully, been getting back to normal — for years it has been sluggish and undependable — after last summer's protracted disruption by the chronically discontented postal workers' "rotating strikes," than there was the threat of more of the same.

It came as a post-Christmas present from your friendly neighoborhood postal workers who never seem to know what they want or like it when they get it. So the Post Office and its restive workers are back at Square One: consulting, conferring, negotiating, but co-operating?

And while it may go away for a spell, you can count on it as one of the surest bets across the federal Government board that it will be back again.

After several years of "regular" and "rotating" strikes, work stoppages, Post Office property damage, and picket line violence — and a new contract with higher pay — the whole bag of trouble carrying a multi-million dollar price tag for the tax payers, the postal workers do not seem to have realized yet that they are in for a shake-up and perhaps a shake-out that they likely are only making more inevitable for themselves.

The restlessly inventive innovator Eric Kierans has gone and the more restful and comfortingly conventional Jean-Pierre Cote is back in the Post Office murmuring soothing things about "better human relations" there and, hopefully improved service for the public.

But the postal unions — caught up in an executive power-struggle with leaders competing to show the rank and file who can be firstest with the mostest — are back at the old stand, bugging Postmaster General Cote.

And the Lapalme truck drivers — some of whom were accused and convicted of personal violence and property damage in the long Montreal postal strike — are back parading daily on Parliament Hill.

They have been offered alternative government jobs, but insist on returning to the mail trucks, meanwhile inconveniencing public and politicians alike as they march, in close - rank formation around and around the walks of the House of Commons.

There are still plans, and even official talk, of making the Post Office a Crown Corporation that, as a business operation — even a federal enterprise — will have to pay its way.

That will put it on the strict budget basis of Air Canada the CNR, and other federal business operations which are expected by both the Government and Parliament to keep in the black even if it means rolling back the payroll — and sometimes it has.

And this, for the Post Office, will be a switch it will not like.

What the postal workers refuse to understand is that they have only been making things tougher for themselves by pricing the Post Office out of some of its best markets, and inevitably, themselves out of a job.

Last year, three of the Post Office's biggest bulk customers asked themselves "who needs the mail?" discovering to their pleased surprise that they did not.

Crippled for a time by the rotating postal strikes, the two national mail - order department stores, Eaton's and Simpson-Sears simply cut back further on their once almost complete reliance on the Post Office.

Over recent years the two big retailers depended more and more on their networks of local stores and order desks in the smaller centres where most of the trade is done by phone, and less and less on the mails.

The farmer on the Prairies, who once waited weeks to have an order processed through a large mail order warehouse, more and more picked up his goods in a matter of days in the nearest centre on phone orders.

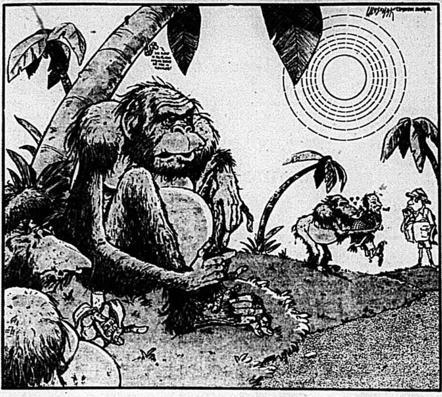
Perhaps the biggest shift came when Canadian Tire Corporation which used to send nearly seven million catalogues through the mail in a year, discovered, with postal rates increasing, that it could half its costs by shifting into door-to-door delivery systems.

Canadian Tire says it paid more than $500,000 a year in mailing its catalogues, revenue now largely lost to the Post Office.

E. A. Pickering, vice - president catalogue orders, for Simpson-Sears, has been quoted as saying the Post Office simply priced and under-performed itself out of the market.

So Canadian Tire services its customers with catalogues through local door-to-door delivery or pick-up, at its 260 dealers across the country. And Eaton's and Simpson-Sears, as a matter of both customer convenience and good business, expand their mail-order phone service and leave the Post Office wondering where all that postal revenue went.

Inevitably, if postal rates continue up and mail services down, the unions will get to wondering where all the jobs went, too.



"Frankly, I don't know what she sees in him!"

A Look at the Separate School System

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Since time immemorial (it seems), the media has propagated the separate school issue perennially and will, in all probability, continue to do so ad infinitum. The separate high schools (grades 11-13) feel they should be subsidized by the government. How do we feel? Indifferent.

However, the modus operandi of this system rarely seems to be questioned. What is the difference between graduates of public and separate schools, and are the latter necessary? As separate school graduates, we say that they are not.

The concept, the sum and substance of the system eludes us, and reminds the observer of racial segregation. If it is morally wrong to dissociate students because of race, what is morally right about dissociating students because of religion? Heaven knows what or whom the Catholic religionists were endeavoring to safeguard us from by setting up quasi-indoctrinational centres under the guise of secondary schools.

Two arguments are advanced by proponents of the separate school system. They stipulate that separate schools, generally smaller in size, net more individual attention for the students. Secondly, the religious instruction will stimulate and toughen the moral fibre of the student, make him a better person, citizen etcetera. The first argument, or any argument of separate school academic superiority is a myth. As for the religious instruction pressed upon the students, it is interesting . . . for a certain level IQ.

The separate schools insist on making the same educational blunders made by their public counterparts. Marks and exams are emphasized, brighter students are mollycoddled, many student councils are out-and-out charades. Surprisingly, a certain percentage of the students think. One look at the censored school newspapers and you would think the aim of education is to rectify this shudder some habit. Hopefully, only a minority of separate schools still subject the students to uniform dress and short hair (for males), but there are cities where students are not only fed an assembly-line education, but are impelled to look the part: rows on rows of red-blazered, white shirt and tie, short-haired sausages. Challenge a student's dress and hair length, and you challenge his freedom, his identity. Are students in school to learn . . . or to be house-trained?

Although the faculties of separate schools are composed of a very significant ratio of nuns and priests, and though they are as good as public school teachers, many a student who spends 13 years of his life in the system listening to lectures imbued with moral force, cannot help but be "turned off" by the time he graduates. Students are not encouraged to find out what the other side is all about. The antediluvian religion courses should be replaced by an examination of religion in general, and more important, its role in society.

Thus, the only difference between a public and separate school graduate is that the latter receives a soporific religon course of dubious value. Reason enough to be subsidized by the government? Reason enough to have a separate school system? We fully realize that in some of the larger cities progress is being made so that the student does not feel as if he has been propagandized. Our information comes from students in cities with populations of 50,000 and less. Our main concern is not so much the removal of the separate system, but the wish to make life bearable for the student. The onus rests strictly on concerned citizens and the separate school board to modify religious instruction, and rid the system of the narrow set of rules of conduct which germinate in the primary grades, picayunish rules which fashion an atmosphere in which students and teachers distrust one another until curiosity is stifled by caution.

Student Admittance At the Movies

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am a first-year communication arts student at Loyalist College.

Last Sunday evening, I attended the show at one of Belleville's theatres. At the ticket booth I asked for a student's ticket, and when asked to produce my student council card I complied. At this I got a blank look and was told, "This isn't a high school student card; you'll need an adult ticket!"

Do I denote a hint of prejudice and-or is Loyalist College not a recognized educational institute?

Personally I feel that since college students are expected to pay tuition fees and pay for expensive books they should receive priority or at least be recognized as students.

I will not support any activity that offers the three-ticket system and fails to recognize Loyalist College, and I do not stand alone!

Weapons Too Easily Available

Gun Control Under Study by Justice Minister

The Globe and Mail

While Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is addressing himself to the implications of arms sales to the South Africans, Justice Minister John Turner is studying a matter of no less consequence: the sale of arms to Canadians. He said in the Commons that the problem of easily available firearms was "serious enough for a thorough review".

It certainly is. When one considers the alacrity with which Ottawa moved to relieve Canadians of a frightening range of individual liberties in order to protect them from a presumed insurrection danger, it is curious that the easy access to firearms precipitated no comparable state of alarm.

In the context of threats of terrorism one would normally assume guns to be a most critical area — or isn't power supposed to come from the barrel of a gun any more? In any event, the sluggishness — or nervousness? — with which the federal Government has approached the subject of gun controls invites interesting comparisons.

But perhaps it is churlish to talk about delay now that Mr. Turner seems to be on the move. He had been asked by Eldon Woolliams (PC, Calgary North) for an assurance that serious action would be taken in response to evidence that the alleged kidnappers and killers of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte bought weapons in a second-hand store.

Police chiefs in various parts of the country can say with precision how many registered pistols and revolvers there are in their jurisdiction, but in a number of cases they would not even hazard a guess at how many unregistered weapons there might be. There is a similar uncertainty about how many sports rifles there might be around — understandable enough when it is remembered that anyone over the age of 14 can purchase a rifle from a mail order house, sporting goods or war surplus store.

While Mr. Turner considers firearms legislation he can perhaps draw some useful guidance from the sorry predicament of the United States, where laxity in the matter of making guns easily available has lingered so long that reversal appears to have become almost impossible. Recent attempts at sane legislation have been quickly neutralized.

A recent study of the sales of handguns to suburban householders in Detroit indicated that the increase had been extremely rapid in the past three years — to the point where police believe most homes in residential areas contain small arsenals. One could argue, of course, that suburban householders in the Detroit area have some reason to feel defensive, and therefore to arm themselves.

There is no end to the vicious circle of guns begetting guns; fear begetting fear. Mr. Turner has an opportunity to set Canadian citizens on another path and we hope he will do so without fear or favor.

Potentially Explosive Proposals

UC Meeting to Tackle National, International Issues

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Sociological and political issues unconceived at church union 45 years ago face the general council of the United Church of Canada at its biennial meeting opening here today.

On the agenda of the 10-day session are proposals potentially explosive for the highest court of the church in particular, and for the membership in general. About 2.5 million Canadians belong to or profess to attend services of the United Church.

The committee on international affairs wants the general council to demand that the federal government withdraw financial support of Canadian investment in racially-troubled South Africa.

That resolution is assured of easy passage. The United Church is on record as opposing the apartheid (racial segregation) policies of South Afirca and of Portugal's policy in its African colonial possessions.

More troublesome, on theological grounds, is a proposed resolution of the board of evangelism and social service.

It asks the 24th general council to declare that bringing unwanted children into the world is irresponsible, that abortion in certain circumstances is morally justifiable and that the practice of contraception "is often not only a legal right but a Christian duty."

And the board asks the council to make a study of the application of the Lord's Day Act in the context of a pluralistic society in which the Christian segment "should no longer expect the state to enforce, by law, religious practices which are uniquely matters of individual conscience, especially when those customs conflict with those of other religious bodies."

By implication, the board of evangelism and social service asks the church to approve Sunday work—in the past the church frowned upon working on Sundays other than in the essential fields of transportation and communication—providing that employers observe the five-day 40-hour-week laws.

On this point it says: "Too few precautions are taken to prevent exploitation of employees by employers, and by demands of society at large."

The board's report says:

"The principle of a common national day of rest must be expanded to meet the needs of Canadian society. The law must be structured to protect people as they seek fulfilment, either in work or in other areas of life."

Not an issue at this meeting, but always to-the fore, is church union The general commission on, church union, formed after the Principles of Union were approved by both churches in 1965, will present the preliminary draft of a proposed plan of union.

In essence, it says: Do your own thing.

At least in the beginning, there will be no changes in forms of worship. Those may come later as each church gets to know the other better.

The United Church of Canada was formed in 1925 of a union of the Methodist Church, the Congregational Church and part of the Presbyterian Church. The Anglican Church of Canada, claiming a membership—including adherents—of close to 2.5 million, is less eager for union than is the United Church.

On the fringe, almost the forgotten third party in church-union negotiations, is the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). It has only 5.000 members and has accepted the Old Testament as part of the Bible, and as the price it must pay to improve ecumenical relations in the Protestant church.

The general synod of the Anglican Church is meeting here in an adjoining hotel and will hold a joint session with the United Church to receive the proposed plan of union. Both groups will study it but cannot change it this week.

That may come two years hence after the memberships have considered the plan. Even then, church leaders say, a national plebiscite may be necessary for a final opinion. That will be in 1974.

There will be two joint sessions—to consider the proposed plan of union and to approve or disapprove a common hymn book

McClure Outspoken to the Last

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The retiring moderator of the United Church of Canada said today the position should be a full-time job, there should be a period of preparation for it and, as in any club, there should be a No. 2 man ready to step in.

Outspoken to the last, Dr. Robert B McClure delivered what he termed his "swan song" to the 24th general council. He made no attempt to review his 2½ years in office but in an apparent reference to criticism within and without the church to his freely-expressed views on many topics, he said in a speech prepared for delivery:

"Let me apologize for any offence I have given people during my term of office."

Dr. McClure, first layman elected to the highest post in the United Church, did not elaborate on his remarks nor did he when, in expressing his thanks to the press and radio for co-operation extended to him, he said:

"All the way across Canada, with one unpleasant exception, I have found the media interested in representing the concerns of the church to their audiences."

Dr. McClure for 45 years served first the Presbyterian Church then the United Church as a medical missionary in China, India and the Middle East. He returned to Canada in 1968 and was elected moderator. He declined the $16,000-a-year salary that goes with the position and served full time on the equivalent of his church and old age pensions—less than $4,000 a year.

During his term of office he travelled widely across Canada, to him almost a new-found land after living abroad for most of his life, and he commented outspokenly on what he saw. Many in the United Church felt he stepped at times outside the province of moderator.

Dr McClure, 70, is retiring to Southeast Asia where, he has said, he plans to turn his surgical skill to treating victims of leprosy

Until the time of his farewell address, there was doubt that he would be able to deliver it. He has been ill in his Toronto home with malaria and late Monday, church officials said, had a temperature of 104 degrees.

Perhaps because of his illness, his address today was one of the shortest of the many he has made during his term of office. He will be succeeded by one of five ministers nominated for the position and of this he said:

"My hereditary modesty and my sense of dignity of this court prevent me using the current terminology, but I should like to join the 'bleaters' and protesters.

"I should like you to give serious consideration to having a moderator-elect for this office. Nearly all service clubs and most organizations are able to avoid the last-minute-election-and - take - office-immediately method that we revere so deeply and demonstrate so dramatically.

"The moderator's office, even if he is to be a mere figurehead, deserves a better deal. There must be a better way.

"May I strongly advise that the job should be a full-time job and this is all the more reason for a suitable period of preparation for the office. I feel that with the utmost sincerity we offer the incoming moderator a gold-handled buggy whip when what is needed is a four-barrelled carburetor in this jet age."

Dr. McClure thanked United Churchmen for their response to the recent One Day's Pay Appeal for foreign aid. As of Jan. 14, he said, it totalled $2,196,197, "a marvellous response."

Teacher Supply Changes Policy

The supply of teachers in Ontario is equal to, or in excess of the demand.

The result is a radical change in hiring policies expected this year.

Hastings county board of education last night approved the policy set out by the Ontario School Trustees' Council in the hope that it would cut recruiting costs and simplify the hiring procedure.

Major change is the policy that interviews be held in the board's office instead of in the cities where teachers' colleges and faculties of education are established.

If adhered to, this policy would eliminate the sending of hiring teams to hotel suites in Toronto, Peterborough, Ottawa and Kingston.

The annual "cattle acution" on hiring day every spring has been deplored in the past as both degrading for teachers, trustees and administrators, and expensive for the ratepayers who must pick up the tab.

However, Hastings county's procedure will be governed by the action of boards in the rest of eastern Ontario. If some decide to send out hiring teams to larger centres, Hastings will have to follow suit.

Director of education Eric Runacres said he intended to strongly urge other directors in zone 9, which includes the eastern part of Ontario, to follow the policy.

"Won't the teachers object as a federation?" queried Mrs. Miriam Graham.

She was told there may be rumblings when teachers learn that this year they will be expected to go the boards instead of having the boards go to them.

Trustee James Clarke questioned a part of the policy stating that "It is assumed that all interviews will be conducted on a business-like basis and that social aspects will not be stressed".

He assumed this to mean that teachers were not to be told about the community, its housing recreational and other facilities.

But Mr. Runacres set the record straight.

In the past, he said, some boards had spent large sums enticing teachers by supplying transportation, hotel rooms and lavish entertainment. This was the case with teachers in short supply, particularly math and science specialists.

Quipped Mr. Clarke, "From this are we to conclude that math and science teachers have lower morals?"

Superintendent R. D. Horwood told the board that 40 requests for interviews have already been received from teachers

"We will not have to go to teachers' colleges for elementary teachers this year," he said

School board will not advertise for teachers before March 30. Hiring will begin April 2.

Traffic Patterns Still Changing

Northern Electric workers are returning to their former Bridge Street route as a means of getting across town rather than using the new Dundas Street bridge over the Moira River.

Members of the city traffic committee were told yesterday that many other local motorists were again driving Bridge Street after giving the new Dundas Street bypass a brief try.

The reason — difficulty in getting onto Dundas Street.

Discussion on the use of Dundas Street resulted from a proposal by city alderman J. B. Corke that the committee give consideration to making Sidney Street a through street from Dundas St. West to Moira Street.

It was pointed out, however, that Bridge Street was increasing rapidly in importance as a collector street and that the total volume of traffic would in all likelihood be greater than on Sidney.

No action was taken on the request to make Sidney the through street rather than Bridge Street, and the matter was tabled to allow the police to do a traffic count.

Neither was any action taken on the request of Alderman Gerald Joyce who at last week's council meeting suggested that the direction of traffic on Campbell Street be changed from west to east.

He felt that a change in the direction of traffic could help to alleviate congestion on Front Street.

But City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said a change in the direction of traffic on Campbell Street could pose problems for police cars which would then have difficulty in answering emergency calls to the west end of the city

"We would not be solving anything," commented Alderman Paul Russell. "We would only create other problems.

On the suggestion of Alderman E. A. Orr the matter was tabled until the city receives the conceptual report of its urban renewal study which is expected some time next month.

"Hopefully, we will get something out that," said the alderman.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said that consulting engineers Totten, Sims, and Hubicki, now doing a north-south arterial road study for the city would have recommendations regarding alleviation of the down town traffic problem.

This report is likely to indicate a need for another bridge over the Moira River to relieve congestion at the Upper Bridge.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell referred to a traffic study done in 1965 by Damas and Smith which predicted continuing traffic tie-ups in the city's down town area until bridges were built both at Dundas Street and in the Pinnacle - Church Street area.

Historical Group Meets Saturday

NAPANEE (Staff) — This town's old Masonic Hall will be the main topic of discussion at the next meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society.

Its story will be outlined by guest speaker Dr. H. C. Burleigh, of Bath.

The meeting will be held Jan. 30 at 8 p.m. in Napanee District Secondary School.

billion, half in preferred ownership shares and half in common voting shares. No individual or group would be permitted to hold more than three per cent of the shares.

The government would own all the shares at first. It would gain further share holdings by transferring its ownership in four or five corporations to the CDC—estimated unofficially as worth a further $300 million at least

These corporations are Polymer Corp. Ltd., Sarnia-based chemical company; Eldorado Nuclear Ltd., producer, refiner and marketer of uranium; Northern Transportation Co. Ltd. which operates in the Western Arctic; and the 45-per-cent federal holding in Panarctic Oils Ltd., northern exploration and development company in which about 20 petroleum companies also have an interest.

Northern Canada Power Commission, which operates electric power stations, water and sewage systems in the north, might also be added to the CDC portfolio

Clinic A Success, Awards Presented

The Jan. 21 Red Cross blood donor clinic held at Cluo Canara netted a total of 320 pints.

Student participation was cited as a major contribution to the success of the venture. Students from the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing and the Laboratory Technicians School at Belleville General Hospital attended as observers and donors.

Repeat donors who received recognition at the annual meeting were John A. Hammond, Dr. R. S. Morphy and Harold Stringer, all who have donated more than 50 pints; Frank East, Robert Emerson, R. H Jones, W. Earl McFarland, William Kelleher, Desmond McCrystal, Arthur Marshall, Derek Riordan and Sieger Vandermeer, each donators of at least 35 pints. The awards were presented by Archie Lewis and Cecil Heard. Many of the above mentioned attended the Jan. 21 clinic.

A service award was also presented to Murray Workman, chairman of the Water Safety Committee, by Mrs. I. M Miller, chairman of the Awards Committee at the annual meeting, Jan. 18.

Snow Sculptures, Program Prepared

Budding sculptures and snowgraphic artists sharpen your shovels and roll out the hose!

Applications for snow sculpturing are now being received by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce for judging on Feb. 6 at 10 a.m. during the 1971 Winter Carnival.

In three categories: organizations schools and private citizens, mounds of snow will soon be dotting the Belleville landscape in what is expected to be an unusual array of cartoon characters, animals large and small; in fact, anything that comes to mind.

The merchants of the Belleville Plaza have offered the open spaces of their mall for construction of the snow-art if any entrant does not have another location on which to sculpt.

Programs outlining all carnival events are presently being prepared by six students at Loyalist College in co-operation with the Chamber.

For three weeks the students have been assembling photos stories, information and the schedule of events to fill the booklets.

They will be on sale at downtown stores, stores in the plaza and at Towers for 25 cents each.

Loyalist students will also be selling them at carnival events

Kinette Plaid Was Designed in Belleville

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

World-famous tartans such as the McDonald plaid and the Campbell plaid were originally designed, woven and worn on the heather-scented Scottish highlands, but Belleville can claim to be the birthplace of a less-known but equally attractive plaid known to its wearers as the kinette plaid. Designed in Canada's centennial year by Mrs. Gayle Burroughs, the current president of the Kinettes, it is now worn by the 'lads' of the Kinsmen club and the bonnie 'lassies' of the Kinette club.

Purple and gold, the predominant colors of the plaid stand in brilliant contrast to the smaller green and brown stripes in the material. The design took shape in Mrs Burroughs' mind in the centennial year, because as she said everyone was thinking of plaids that year. Last year was the 50th anniversary of the Kinsmen club so the Belleville club sent the design to the National Executive who were quite impressed and asked to have it woven.

So now the Kinette women wear jumpers made of this plaid which contrasts vividly with their white blouses and some of the Kinsmen have vests to match. All of the 100 yards woven by a mill in Trenton were bought by the club and plans are now afoot to get the plaid approved by the National Executive as the official uniform of all the Kinsmen and Kinette clubs in Canada of which there are over 400.

The Belleville Kinettes and Mrs. Burroughs in particular received one more bouquet during the Centennial celebrations of Saskatchewan when the Kinettes of Moose Jaw were hostesses at a luncheon in honor of Governor General Roland Michener. Some members of this club had previously heard of this plaid worn by their Belleville counterparts and had asked the Kinette co-ordinators in this area where they could get some. On receiving the required information they ordered some of it from the Trenton mill and had it made into maxi scarves which they wore with their pantdresses to the luncheon. The Governor General complimented them on their scarves and wanted to know the history behind it.

However, the wearers of the plaid, the Kinsmen and Kinettes, are not merely decorative members of their community. The object of their club is to serve the community and this they do in various ways. The public swimming pool on Dundas Street and the park beside it exist because of their efforts.

One of the major service projects of the Kinette club is the White Cane Club, an association of blind people in the Belleville area. Two Kinettes mark the score every Saturday afternoon while White Cane club members bowl and the Kinettes also serve them a lunch once a month at one of their meetings. The Kinettes have also bought them many useful items of equipment and have made donations to many worthy causes such as the Salvation Army and the Canadian Mental Health Association.

The Kinette Club also sponsors the Winter Carnival Queen and lend invaluable assistance to the Kinsmen by doing their typing, helping to assemble their bulletins and helping with projects for the Kin-20 Club, a service club for young men under 21, which is in effect a junior branch of the Kinsmen club. A number of social events are also enjoyed by the Kinsmen and Kinettes who hold dances, pool parties and swim shows from time to time.

Opening Full Time Day Care Centre Is A Costly Business

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

Opening a full-time day care centre that offers its children first-rate facilities is a costly business. It would include playground space and equipment, toys, books, bed, nourishing food and necessary things such as enough washrooms, a modern sprinkler system and fire escapes.

Trained staff cost more than untrained. In Edmonton, trained, experienced staff get about $5,500 to $6,000 a year.

This is one of many reasons that concerned people would like to see a variety of day care available in a variety of places, and a greater degree of public concern about day care.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates there are an increasing number of day care centres throughout the country and there is also an increasing need for them.

The impetus appears to be coming from people who want to run them as a business, and from established social agencies. There appears to be little in the way of sustained citizen effort to have more centres organized.

Several Ontario towns report that citizen attempts to get subsidies for centres failed. An alderman in one town said she wasn't aware there is a problem.

In Alberta and Ontario members of the minority political parties have made speeches in favor of centres with no immediate result.

In Edmonton a group called Help Edmonton's Little People is having trouble getting off the ground. Its founders are people who have found centres useful.

There is some interest among women's groups in helping to improve the situation, but little concrete effort.

The feminist groups who make the need for day care a part of their platforms have so far concentrated largely on establishing centres at universities where most of their members are. The universities of British Columbia and of Toronto have co-operative centres organized by the Women's Liberation Movement.

The University of Alberta has approved the idea of a centre in principle, but a university spokesman says a centre is low on the list of the school's priorities. Approval has been given to putting a centre in a student housing project to be started during this academic year.

Thelma Scambler of the Alberta social welfare department says it might be the first in a housing development in the city. She says more centres should be built into housing developments and apartment buildings.

"It's more important to put day care centres into these high rises than saunas."

Only in a few cases are employers making day care available to working mothers. Questions of liability and insurance could be complicated, as could the feelings of motherly employees. What if the child liked the nursery and mother hated the job, or vice versa?

A few hospitals have tried running day care centres to attract married nurses back to work. There were two in St. John's, Nfld., run by the department of health for hospital staff. As the nurse shortage has eased, one has been taken over by a private individual.

In Toronto an experiment is being tried in a few schools, offering before- and after-school day care in the school.

Toronto's churches have a member on the community day care committee who is hoping to find out how their facilities might best be used. Many of them have the space and some of the equipment, plus a core of volunteers, but some say that to meet provincial standards they would have to make alterations they cannot afford. Committee chairman Joan Rogers says she feels regulations might be bent a little in some instances.

Mrs. Rogers also says a network of family day care homes could solve many problems. It would be economical, keep children in a family together in their own neighborhood and private income for the at-home mother.

One centre in Calgary, run by an association of citizens with help from the city, does provide care in the home for children as one phase of its operation.

The range of fees for day care centres varies little across the country. Provincial and municipal governments do provide subsidies in some cases, handled in various ways.

Centres in St. John's charge $2 a day without a meal to $60 a month. A Calgary centre charges $4.50 a day, an Ottawa centre $25 a week.

St. Joseph's centre in Halifax works with the city for a grant under the Canada Assistance plan to pay the difference between cost and money taken in. The centre operated with an $11,000 deficit in the first six months of 1970 in spite of help from the archdiocese and the United Appeal.

The British Columbia government provides subsidies for children whose parents cannot pay the full cost, and both the Alberta and Ontario governments subsidize centres.

Saskatchewan has a system of one-shot grants to new centres when they open for each space for a child, and will offer monthly grants depending on a centre's fee structure. The grants are partly intended to encourage the establishment of more centres.

Women's Institutes

LONSDALE WI

Twelve members and two guests attended the recent meeting of Lonsdale Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. John Vance.

The theme of the meeting was "Backwards" with regular procedure in reverse. Following the opening by the president Mrs. Allen, apple, cherry pie and tea were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. James Buckley and Mrs Ken Haight.

Mrs James Bell read the secretary and treasurer's reports. Mrs. Ted McGuiness, Mrs. Eric Cappell, Mrs. Bernard Freeman and Mrs. Fred Ferrell reported on attending the 4-H Club training school in Foxboro and it was noted that the next project will be 'cereal shelf'.

Previously the WI had held a card party and another is scheduled for Feb. 3. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. B. Allen.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Cannon, Belleville, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Linda Marie to Mr. Steven Leslie Pound, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Casey, R.R. 6 Belleville. The wedding will take place in College Hill United Church, Belleville on Saturday, Feb. 20 at 2 p.m.

CLUB ACTIVITIES

MOIRA BELLE TOPS

The Moira Belle Tops are off to a good start for the new year with an increase in membership with 32 present for the first meeting.

There was a total weight loss of 51 pounds and a gain of 3½ pounds. From Jan. 14 until Feb. 11 a contest is being conducted. The members have been divided into three groups and points will be given for weight loss, maintaining same weight, and for attendance. This will conclude with a coffee party.

Anyone interested in joining may phone the Chamber of Commerce or phone 968 8890.

Mother-in-Law Has Feelings Too

By DORIS CLARK

Yesterday I heard about a young mother who seems to be building up to a classic in-law problem. She is resolutely refusing to share her precious baby with her husband's mother.

When she knows Mrs. B. is about to pay a visit she makes sure that Junior, who is three months old, is back in his crib. Mother-in-law may admire him from afar but the mother just never gets him up, makes him laugh, hands him over. And Mrs. B. returns home wondering what she has done to offend.

The only thing I can figure out is that the baby's father is an only child and his wife is jealous of the strong tie she senses between Mrs. B. and her son.

Or has she been hearing the popular theme that mother-in-law is likely to be a butterinsky and should be put in her place right at the start?

I've news for her: Mothers-in-law are friendly, human, mothering people. When a girl marries she undertakes to adjust not only to a husband but to his family. Her youngsters need all their grandparents.

• • •

Dear Doris: I was very interested in the letter from a woman who was ready to give up on life because she could not make her husband stop drinking. No one will make her husband stop unless he wants to, but I know how to help her if she really wants it.

I belong to a group named Al-Anon. We believe in learning to live our own lives, not our husband's or any other person's who has a problem.

I know it is possible because I have seen women change. I can send you literature that we use, and also phone number of Al-Anon Family Group's central office, who will have someone near her, as we have groups all over the city. — Winnipeg Member

Dear Member: Yours must be a particularly effective and helpful branch of Al-Anon, since this is the second offer of help from Winnipeg.

I passed on the first message to Disappointed, who lives hundreds of miles away in another Canadian centre. I know your statements are true, as I have seen the blessed moral support Al - Anon Family Groups can give to wives of alcoholics.

Dear Doris: I need help! I think, for the first time in my life, that I am in love. He likes me too, but today I found out he is married.

What can I do? He never once mentioned he was married. I know I must never see him again, but I really love him. — Lost and Lonely

Dear Lost: I'm sorry. Would it help to know that many thousands of girls have been led down the same primrose path? Or to know that love is not a once - in-a -l ifetime thing?

All you can do is turn from him to other more hopeful prospects. Start something new and absorbing in your free time and the hurt will gradually lessen.

Dog Comes Between Girl and Friend

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am having an unusual problem with my boyfriend. (We are both 16.) No matter where we go Harold brings his dog. I wouldn't mind if the dog had some manners, but he sniffs around, slobbers all over my dress and he's forever wedging himself between me and Harold.

Most restaurants don't allow dogs so we go to drive-ins and hamburger joints. I can't eat in peace. First the dog grabs of Harold's hamburger, then he starts on mine. When the car radio plays, the dog cries. (Harold calls it "singing".) This gets on my nerves.

Last night we were sitting in front of the house in Harold's car and he leaned over to give me a good-night kiss. The dog got jealous and started to growl. It spoiled everything.

Is there a solution to this rotten problem? — DOG-GONED.

DEAR D.G.: Tell Harold that if he can't part with his bow-wow for a few hours, he'll have to stay home or get another girl. You might not realize it but your boyfriend has a bodyguard and you've got a chaperone, Kiddo.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing about a problem that has caused me a great deal of anxiety. First a bit of background. My husband is a successful businessman. We have many friends in professional, political and executive positions. Our two daughters are college graduates and they both married well. We have all traveled extensively and are highly regarded in this community.

I am writing about my sister. She has always had a horrible fear of doctors and dentists. Her teeth are in dreadful condition. I'm sure she hasn't been to a dentist in 25 years Several of her front teeth are missing. The remaining teeth are decayed.

My sister has been writing and hinting that she would love to come to visit us for a week or so. (We moved to this lovely little community in 1969 and she is eager to see it.) I'm beginning to feel guilty about not having her here. She's on my mind constantly and I'm getting headaches. After all, she is my only sister and she won't live forever. I've been evading the issue because I'm ashamed of the way she looks. Please tell me what to do. — PALM BEACH, FLA

DEAR BEACH: The guilt is getting to you, Doll, so my advice is invite her — not for her sake, but for yours.

So you won't accept any invitations that week from the Duke and Duchess of Windsor or Howard Hughes or Mrs. Merriweather Post. They'll forgive you. And if, by chance, you should run into some of your fancy friends while your sister is visiting, I can assure you they will not hold the condition of her teeth against you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I heard these blood-chilling statistics yesterday: Over 35,000 people lose their lives every year in car accidents. Alcohol plays a part in at least 50 per cent of these accidents. I'd like to name another hazard which is far more dangerous than alcohol. Hair. It is virtually impossible for kids to see where they are going when their eyes are covered with a curtain of hair. The boys are worse than the girls. I urge the National Safety Council to look into this. Thanks for letting me have my say. — A STARVING BARBER.

DEAR BARBER: I've often wondered how some of these kids see. Your letter has answered the question. They don't. Thanks for cluing me in, as well as the National Safety Council.

Tasty Newburg Served At Press Club Meal

By MARY MOORE

Leading up to and during the holiday season I cooked three turkeys and because I was visiting my large families or had them here there was plenty of scope for experimenting with leftovers.

I wanted the leftovers to be as good as the original — not just reheated or creamed or sandwiched.

At the Press Club January meeting our wonderful chef, Frank Campigotto, served Seafood Newburg and I knew right then how I was going to serve the last of the last turkey. Why not Turkey Newburg? No reason so here it is.

TURKEY NEWBURG
(Serves 6)

4 tbsps. (¼ cup) butter or margarine
4 tbsps. (¼ cup) flour
1 tsp. salt
2 cups hot 18 per cent (table) cream (or milk)
4 egg yolks
¼ cup sherry
2 tbsps. tomato paste
1 tsp. paprika
2 cups chopped choice cooked turkey meat (packed)

Make a Sauce by melting the butter or margarine in heavy pot and stirring in the flour an salt until blended. Stir in the hot cream (or milk) until thick. Remove from heat and stir egg yolks in, one at a time but quickly. (Save whites to make a dozen or so meringues or macaroons.) Stir in sherry, tomato paste, paprika and turkey and reheat over low heat. If desired this reheating could be done in top of double boiler.

I did not have puff pastry shells in which to serve this so I made toast cups: Cut crusts from six slices fresh bread. Cut a ¾" triangle from centre of four sides of each slice. Carefully press into custard cups to shape them into "cups". Just before serving time toast them in a very hot oven until points are rich gold. Transfer toast cups to serving plates and fill to overflowing with Newburg mixture. A slick trick when you want to improvise and economize.

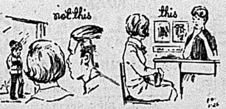
Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Larry is so miserable at school. His teacher lets the other children pick on him all the time. He's always played so nicely with other children. I'm sure it's not his fault."

Mother: "Perhaps you can help me discover why Larry is so unhappy these days. Does he antagonize the other children in some way? He seems to have difficulty in getting along with them?"

A child who doesn't get along with his classmates most of the time may not be at fault. Then again, he may. Consult with his teacher, watch him on the playground, listen to what other children have to say about him. When you know what the problem is, you may be able to help him solve it.

Behind-scenes Staff Makes Theatre Work

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Will anyone sing the song of the unsung hero? Will the audience ever know the time and preparation that went into each facet of the play that they are watching and hopefully enjoying?

Behind the scenes of every play, no matter how large or complex, there is a devoted staff that keeps the operation running and makes sure that all is in hand when the opening curtain rises.

Pinnacle Playhouse, the Belleville outlet for this particular talent, is an extension of the city recreation department. In its time it has housed some of the greatest theatre that has ever been written.

Larry Ewashen, director of the theatre guild, expressed the opinion that the group of people that he has worked with in Belleville are highly competent, interested and devoted.

As in all areas of the theatre, there is a strong bond that holds the "crew" together In each performance it is the same group of individuals that get together and plan lighting plots and special effects. As one of the members stated "while players come and go, the technical crew will live on and on".

The playhouse is self-sufficient and pays a monthly rent to the city of Belleville. After all the other expenses, these people then begin to pay the maintenance of $3,000 worth of equipment. The people that are mentioned include Steve Hubble, Ross Thompson, Dave Fisher and Joan Tickle, each a specialist in his field.

These students ask for no recognition and are content to sit behind the scenes and watch as months of work become finished in a little more than an hour.

After the final curtain all that is left to do is clean up the stage, and there they are again, sweeping and making sure when they start to prepare the next play, with a new group of actors, that there will be no traces of the previous endeavor.

Thus, the story of the unsung heroes.

Belvedere Takes Ride At Central Expense

Belvedere Hotel increased their Quinte Hockey League lead to five points Monday night with a 5-0 blanking of second place Central Taxi.

Gene Francis paced the Hotelmen with a pair of tallies with brother Jack adding a goal and three assists and single goals going to Elmer Cain and Gerry Jones.

The winners picked up seven of the 11 penalties in the game.

In the second game of the doubleheader Stinson Construction disposed of DCA Transfer 8-2.

Rick Denard had a big four goal night for the winners with the other tallies going to McGuire, Ray, Deline and Revoy.

Don Moore and Errol Johnston scored for the losers.

Gas House Powers Withstand Pressure

The powerhouses of the Gas House League during the regular season didn't succumb to playoff pressure as the Mustangs and Merchants both came up with wins in the first games of the semi-finals.

John Smith's second goal of the game with 14 minutes remaining to play gave the Mustangs a 3-2 win over Mulroney's after the teams had been deadlocked at two goals each.

Jim Horwood was the other Mustang goalgetter, while Ralph Brant and Larry Fritz replied for the losers.

The Merchants got shutout goaltending from Bob Harrison to stop Marysville 4-0.

Perry Soule had a hat trick for the winners with Ralph Boomhower scoring the other goal.

Oak Hills Skiing

Oak Hills' Nancy Greene ski team suffered a 127.5-97.5 defeat at the hand of Toronto Valley Schuss in a meet at Orangeville Saturday.

John Jevons was the top local competitor with a second place finish.

Oak Hills Ski Club will be open Wednesday from 1-4.30 p.m. with two tows in operation. Skiing conditions are reported as GOOD.

Biggest Fight Gate in History

NEW YORK (AP) — The last 4,000 seats at Madison Square Garden for the March 8 heavyweight title bout between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier were sold in two hours Monday morning, guaranteeing the largest indoor live gate in boxing history.

The seats were sold at prices ranging from $20 to $75 apiece. Ringside seats, at $150, were sold out earlier.

The full house will bring in $1,250,000—almost double the previous record indoor gate of $658,000 set three years ago for the Frazier-Buster Mathis, Nino Benvenuti-Emile Griffith doubleheader.

Good Guys Last In Northern Hockey

"Good Guys finish last" at last in Sunday's Northern Electric Hockey League, they did as the Hornets blanked them 4-0.

Larry Lupennette led the winners with a pair of goals while Bill Goodfellow and Charlie Reynolds added one each.

In the other game played, Rick Rosebush tallied six goals to pace the Dukes to a 10-5 win over the No Stars. Bob Taylor and Tom Pierce picked up two goals and five assists each in a winning cause.

For the No Stars it was Bob Moon with two goals and two assists and Marco Mior, Lyle Lloyd and Dave Brady with single tallies.

Gimmicks Good, Plot Bad

NEW YORK (AP) — Irwin Allen practised his specialty, peering into man's future adventures, Monday night in an NBC World Premiere film feature called City Beneath the Sea. It is a pilot for a future series.

Earlier Allen souffles have established the series-maker as a master of special effects. There was Lost in Space with an astronaut family gypsying around the galaxy; Land of Giants, about lost earthlings on a planet where everything including the inhabitants were 12 times the size of things on earth, and Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea, about a submarine of the future fighting an enormous array of enemies.

It was back to the ocean depths Monday to build a story around an underwater city called Pacifica, where people are living and working in the year 2053. The special effects were remarkable. There were panoramic sights of a city with submarines threading their way gracefully among the structures, electronic gadgets flashing lights, nuclear warheads racing information toward the stars and a human "aquanoid" who could breathe underwater like a fish.

Regretfully, all the artful trick photography and pyrotechnics were the backdrop for a silly, cliche-ridden action story that could be—and has been—played out many times before on dry land.

Our hero is an admiral returning to the undersea city he helped build on special presidential assignment to remove all gold in the U.S. depository at Fort Knox, Ky., to Pacifica vaults as a shield against fissionable H-128, the most powerful material in the world, which must be stored there. Some bad guys wanted to steal the gold and the nuclear material. Naturally, they failed and our hero not only managed to turn them back singlehanded but deflected a planetoid racing toward earth.

It seemed too bad that producer-director-writer Allen could dream up such interesting background material but settled for such a pedestrian story.

Stuart Whitman played the hero as if he believed in him. Robert Wagner, disguised behind a large moustache, seemed to enjoy being a black-hearted, power-mad villain.

Entertainment Roundup

LONDON (AP) — Maggie Smith, who won an Oscar for her movie role in The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, was voted best actress Monday in the London Evening Standard drama awards for 1970. She won for her stage role in Hedda Gabler at London's Old Vic.

Sir Ralph Richardson and Sir John Gielgud jointly won the best actor awards for their roles in Home. David Storey, who wrote Home, won the award for the best British play of the year.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Hope Lange, 37, star of the Ghost and Mrs. Muir television series, filed in Superior Court Monday for divorce from Alan Pakula.

Pakula, 42, produced the movies The Sterile Cuckoo, To Kill a Mockingbird and Inside Daisy Clover.

He and Miss Lange, who has two children by a previous marriage, have been married six years.

HEMET, Calif. (AP) — Isobel Lennart, thrice nominated for screenwriting Academy Award and author of the book and screenplay for Funny Girl, was killed in a traffic accident, the highway patrol said Monday.

Her husband, actor John Harding, 59, was critically injured when a truck-trailer rig rammed the couple's automobile, in heavy fog Sunday night nine miles northwest of Hemet.

Miss Lennart, 55, wrote the screenplays for many films including Two for the Seesaw, Please Don't Eat the Daisies, Latin Lovers and The Inn of the Sixth Happiness.

DUNDEE, Scotland (Reuter) — Actress Goldie Hawn is a favorite for election as rector of Dundee University.

Students who liked her performance in There's a Girl in my Soup have started an energetic campaign for her election over the current rector, actor Peter Ustinov—in the running for re-election—and a goat called Mervyn. Mervyn is an outsider.

The rector's post is an honorary one and Ustinov shows up at Dundee once or twice a year.

Law student James Munroe, sponsor of Goldie, is travelling to Hamburg where she is filming on location to obtain her signature on the required nomination form.

Goldie, who has agreed to be a candidate, could not send the form to Dundee because of Britain's mail strike.

Expansion Teams Are Not in Same League When It Comes to Boston Bruins and Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to comparing Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, the two powerhouses of the National Hockey League's East Division, there's no better source than Minnesota coach Jackie Gordon.

"Yeah, we've seen both of them plenty," said Gordon Monday. "We've seen them too much."

Gordon's North Stars are locked in a four-way battle with Los Angeles Kings, Pittsburgh Penguins and Philadelphia Flyers for the final two playoff spots in the West Division. Seven points separate the four teams.

"We're fighting for our lives," said Gordon, "but it might be a little different if we had done something with New York and Boston."

The North Stars are 0-9 with the two East leaders who meet Wednesday night in a showdown game. Against the rest of the league, Minnesota is a perfectly respectable 16-11-10.

"They talk about parity between the expansion teams and established teams being close," Gordon continued. "Well, it's not close with those two teams."

The Bruins lead New York by three points and have played one less game than the Rangers. Third place Montreal Canadiens are 18 points back of Boston.

In tonight's lone game, Chicago Black Hawks visit Vancouver Canucks.

"Boston and New York are both solid teams," said Gordon.

"There's no question about that. I think the Rangers may have the edge in goaltending but it's hard to match Boston's scoring. It's really a toss-up."

The Bruins are the NHL's top offensive club—with 225 goals scored—and have the top four scorers in the league including Phil Esposito, who has 90 points, and defending scoring king Bobby Orr, who has 77.

The Rangers are the NHL's top defensive club with goalies Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure backstopping the defence that coach Emile Francis calls the most mobile in the NHL.

Gordon admits that he approaches games against the Rangers and Bruins differently.

"You've got to think differently against the Bruins because of those two big scorers. They play a much more wide-open game than the Rangers," said Gordon.

Minnesota's most recent experience with the two East powers was a 6-2 loss at New York Sunday. The Stars had played a tough 2-2 tie against Philadelphia in Minnesota Saturday night, caught a plane to New York and didn't get to bed until 3:30 a.m. Nine hours later, they were back on the ice against the Rangers.

"It was a quirk of the schedule," said Gordon, "and I'm sure they'll look at it more closely before they schedule a game that way again.

"And to make it worse, the Rangers were off Saturday. They were sitting here, waiting for us."

REAL ESTATE

LET YOUR HOUSE SPEAK FOR ITSELF

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

The danger is in being oversolicitous with prospective buyers. A seller must not forget that it is his house and not himself that he is selling.

If an owner, for instance, accompanies the buyers to look at every nook and cranny, he may give the impression of being over-anxious. In his desire to sell his property, he could end up undoing much of the preparatory work already done by the Realtor.

Nothing is less necessary and more risky to the sale than trying to "help" the Realtor or take over his job.

How should owners conduct themselves? The best method is to go about their normal routine. Without ignoring the people touring through the house, a wife should continue doing her dishes; if the prospective buyers have any questions to ask her they can seek her out. The children should continue to play.

Above all, a seller should never follow a Realtor around with his client offering suggestions or explanations.

If a house is neat and orderly, is fairly priced and is what the buyer is looking for, it will sell. If any of these factors is lacking, no amount of talking or help from the seller will make up for it.

Tender Care

Boston Bruins' right winger John McKenzie grins his approval as his bandage is adjusted by Student Nurse Deirdre Lawless at Massachusetts General Hospital. McKenzie is recovering from surgery to repair a shoulder separation he suffered in a game with the Toronto Maple Leafs. (AP Wirephoto)

When It Comes to Points There Is Only One Esposito

MONTREAL (CP) — No matter how you cut it, it's all Phil Esposito.

The Boston Bruins' centre led the National Hockey League in goal-scoring last season with 43. This season he has passed that mark and still has 32 games left to play.

Esposito is also only 10 points from becoming the first player to score 100 points in two regular seasons. Two years ago he earned 126 points with 49 goals and 77 assists.

That record took him 74 games to compile. This season he has 44 goals and 46 assists for 90 points in 46 games.

Esposito now has career totals of 245 goals in 505 regular-season games and 573 points.

This means he leads the long list of players in NHL history who have at least 500 points on a point-per-game basis.

Going into this season, centre Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks was the leader with an average of 1.108 points a game —854 points in 771 games. Second was Mikita's team-mate Bobby Hull who had 964 points in 880 games for a 1.095 average.

Now the top three are: Esposito 1.135 points a game; Hull 1.107 points a game, 1.025 points and 926 games; and Mikita 1.103 points a game, 897 points in 813 games.

Esposito's lead over team-mate Bobby Orr, who for the third straight season has at least 20 goals, was recued by one point to 13 in the current scoring race.

Orr, who leads in assists with 57, has 77 points, 11 more than teammate Ken Hodge and 14 more than another Bruin, John Bucyk.

Hull is the first non-Boston player in the leaders' list this week with 61 points, including 28 goals. He is fifth, two points ahead of Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Chicago goaltenders Gerry Desjardins and Tony Esposito gained a little ground on New York Rangers' Gilles Villemure and Ed Giacomin last week.

Chicago's average is 2.32 and New York has a 2.23 combined average.

Giacomin and Esposito share the lead in shutouts with four.

McKenzie Out For 3 Weeks

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins received some bad news Monday in a medical report on Johnny McKenzie, an All-Star right winger who underwent surgery for a left shoulder separation last Tuesday.

General Manager Milt Schmidt was told by physicians that McKenzie will be unable to even start skating for three weeks. The high-scoring forward had planned to start next week to keep his legs in condition.

Larose Can't Play

MONTREAL (CP) — Right winger Claude Larose of Montreal Canadiens is expected to be released from hospital today, but will not take part in Wednesday night's National Hockey League game against St. Louis Blues here.

Larose suffered a concussion in last Saturday night's 6-2 win over Detroit Red Wings.

A club spokesman said that defencemen Jacques Laperriere and J.C. Tremblay have been given medical clearance to play against the Blues.

Tremblay missed both weekend games because of a groin injury, while Laperriere suffered an ankle bruise Saturday night and missed Sunday's 4-2 loss to the Bruins in Boston.

Reaume Badly Hurt

HAMILTON (CP) — Marc Reaume, the only player to serve with all three Canadian teams in the National Hockey League, remained in fair condition Monday night following a single-car accident Sunday near Welland.

Reaume, 36, had improved slightly but was still in a Hamilton hospital's intensive-care unit, a hospital spokesman said.

Reaume, a native of La Salle, Ont., near Windsor, is now a member of Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League. He played with Detroit Red Wings and all Canadian teams in the NHL, and is the property of Vancouver Canucks.

Provincial police at Welland said Reaume was alone in his car when it went out of control on Highway 3, about 12 miles west of Welland, and struck a tree.

No Answer Yet

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Walton's hockey future remained uncertain today after a news conference called by his lawyer for Monday afternoon was abandoned.

Walton left Toronto Maple Leafs early in December with what was later diagnosed as a depressive illness.

His legal adviser, Alan Eagleson, said Sunday that unless he heard from the National Hockey League club about their plans for the 26-year-old centre from Kirkland Lake, Ont., by Monday, would call a news conference to take action.

The meeting never came off because Eagleson was at home with the flu.

Walton has expressed a desire to be traded immediately. He has continued to work out in a suburban rink.

Olympic Controversy

Brundage Takes Aim at Skiers

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Tense relations between the International Olympic Committee and International Ski Federation were thrown into an uproar Monday by IOC President Avery Brundage.

Brundage, the aging Chicago millionaire who guards amateur standards religiously, dropped four controversial questions involving the commercial connections of Alpine skiers, into the laps of IOC members.

Brundage has long sought to get Alpine skiing dropped from the winter Olympic program because of its alleged commercial ties.

First, Brundage asked if Alpine skiers who competed at Mammoth Mountain, Calif., last summer would be eligible for the Olympics. Brundage termed the Mammoth Mountain meet "the Lange Summer Racing Camp," naming a U.S. Ski Boot manufacturer.

Brundage has already threatened to ban 10 skiers who participated in the meet, including Peter Duncan of Mont Tremblant, Que., and Rod Hebron of Vancouver.

Next, Brundage asked if skiers whose photographs are used for publicity and promotion of commercial products would be eligible for the Olympics.

Then Brundage asked if a skier who earns between $50,000 and $60,000 a year by wearing his employer's trademark during races, should be eligible for the Winter Games.

Finally, Brundagé asked if the IOC approved the International Ski Federation recommendation that Alpine skiers are entitled to receive compensation for loss of earnings for a period of 5 months.

The International Ski Federation has demanded speedy clarification from the IOC in order to give the Japanese time to prepare the Alpine ski events which are scheduled just over one year from now.

Mauch Wants .500 Average For His 1971 Montreal Expos

MONTREAL (CP) — Gene Mauch said Monday he is looking to his Montreal Expos to play .500 baseball in the National League's East Division this season.

Mauch, who predicted 70 wins for the expansion club in 1970 and finished with 73 victories, told a news conference "we'll make a run at 81 in '71."

The National League schedule is 162 games.

Mauch told a news conference here he had talked to "many" of his players in the off-season and "they are confident in their ability now."

The Expos closed off the 1970 season with a rush, playing .500 ball for the last four months of the schedule.

"If we could play such solid ball for four months, why can't we do it for the whole season?"

The Expos won only 52 games during that 1969 season, their first in the major leagues.

Mauch said he will enter spring training looking for people who can display speed on the base paths.

He particularly would like to get them on base ahead of hitters like Bob Bailey, Ron Fairly and Rusty Staub, so the trio can fatten their runs-batted-in figures.

While Staub is a fixture in right field, Mauch said the centre and left field jobs are open.

Hires Assistant

REGINA (CP) — Head coach Dave Skrien has announced the acquisition of John Payne as an assistant for Saskatchewan Roughriders, defending Western Football Conference champions. The graduate of Oklahoma State University comes to Regina from the WFC's Winnipeg Blue Bombers where he served one year under head coach Jim Spavital.

Football Roundup

Ottawa Wants Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders Monday indicated time is running out on British Columbia Lions' courtship of quarterback Russ Jackson with Toronto Argonauts waiting in the wings.

The Rough Riders have set a vague weekend deadline for a firm offer from the Lions for the right to try and talk Jackson out of his one-year retirement after 12 Canadian Football League seasons with Ottawa.

The stumbling block appears to be Ottawa's insistence that B.C. declare what it is offering for Jackson's rights before the Riders will give the necessary permission for the Lions to approach him.

Ottawa general-manager Frank Clair says the Riders are only following standard practice in their demand while the Lions say they should not have to commit themselves until they know they have a deal with Jackson.

"Leo Cahill has told us he is interested," said Clair, referring to the Toronto coach, "and he may hear from us by the end of the week. "We don't intend waiting for B.C. forever."

REGINA, Sask. (CP) — Bank interst, $33,000 gate-equalization payment and a lucrative fund-raising dinner averted a deficit for Saskatchewan Roughriders in 1970, the Western Football Conference club's annual meeting was told Monday night.

Despite the club's record-setting 14 wins and two losses, it was the off-field revenues that kept the club's operation in the black.

The meeting was told attendance for regular-season games here dropped to 132,855 in 1970 from 143,000 in 1969. This was the second drop since a record 150,000 fans attended games at Taylor field in 1968.

Gate receipts for 1970 totalled $493,140.

Net profit was slightly more than $14,000 after calling on about $41,000 in interest, $33,000 in gate equalization and $48,000 from the $100-a-plate dinner.

While attendance was down, to a large extent due to a drop in sales to out-of-twon supporters, club president Bill Clark anticipated no increase in ticket prices for 1971.

HAMILTON (CP) — Ralph Goldston says reports he's headed for Harvard University as an assistant to Joe Restic aren't true.

In fact, his interest still is an application to succeed Restic as head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Goldston, a high school teacher in nearby Burlington, said reports from Montreal that had him joining Restic at the Ivy League university were unfounded.

He also denied allegations he has withdrawn his application to head the coaching staff of the Eastern Football Conference Ti-cats.

Goldston spent last season scouting for New York Giants of the National Football League.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Willie Davis, former Green Bay Packers defensive end, says he was offered the head football coaching position at Harvard University but turned it down, The Post reported in its editions today.

He would have been the first black coach to hold such a post at a major college.

Davis said he turned down the "flattering" offer in November because he had committed himself to a business venture in Los Angeles.

The Harvard vacancy was filled early this month by Joe Restic, former head coach of Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Canadian Football League.

Davis said he was recommended for the Harvard job by a member of the screening committee seeking a coach to replace the retiring John Yovicsin. He soid he met with members of the screening committee and was questioned "about my philosophies . . . the whole bit."

"Within a week after I returned home," he said, "I was called and told that the job was mine; all I had to do was make the decision."

LEADS SNOWMOBILERS

CROOKSTON, Minn. (CP) — Charles Oberstar of Marquette, Mich., held the lead Monday after the first leg of the sixth annual Winnipeg-St. Paul, Minn., 500-mile snowmobile race. He covered the 170 miles south from Winnipeg in three hours and 18 minutes, giving him a four-minute lead over Leroy Lindblad of Roseau, Minn., last year's winner.

TENSI RETIRING

DENVER (AP) — Steve Tensi, quarterback for Denver Broncos of the National Football League since 1967, said Monday he is retiring from professional football and will seek a job as a college coach. The Cincinnati native and 1967 Florida State graduate said the series of injuries that have plagued him over the past three seasons led to his decision.

FIGHT TO DRAW

PARIS (AP) — Marcel Cerdan Jr., and Sandro Lopopolo of Italy, former world junior welterweight boxing champion, fought to a 10-round draw Monday night before a capacity crowd of about 5,000 at the Paris Sports Palace. Cerdan weighed 146 pounds, Lopopolo 143.

A Mulroney's Sunoco player applies the brakes before running the gauntlet of his Novice B teammates in a Tuesday morning session of the Belleville Minor Hockey team, (left), while Towers Food City Novice A's Nelson Frederick, Andy Plane and Gary McInroy get a bird's-eye view of the technique of Drew Stotesbury and Brian Cook. Members of Mulroneys consist of nine year old players with the graduates advancing to Towers for their final season of Novice play. The Food City Novices are the defending Eastern Ontario Zone Four champions.

Small Players Make Big Hockey Gains in Early Morning Hours

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

People who worry about their co-workers staggering into their jobs each Wednesday morning with half-closed eyelids and a bluish appearance about the face and hands can set their fears aside.

The "victims" aren't suffering from some strange recurring illness or a Tuesday night binge, but rather a widespread malady known as the "novice hockey father".

Every Tuesday morning fathers of the Mulroneys Sunoco Novice B's are forced to crawl out of a warm bed to taxi their budding Bobby Orrs to the frigid confines of the Belleville Memorial Arena for a 6 a.m. practice session.

Those with sons competing on the Towers Novice "A's" are afforded the luxury of an extra hour's shut-eye with the Food City team tune-ups slated for "only" 7 a.m.

"There's no way you can get away from it either", moans one father as he waits through the hour practice, "every Tuesday morning he's in my bedroom with the light on hollering let's get going."

If the casualty rate among parents is excessively great, the early risings don't appear to bother the boys involved. "It's great the way they keep coming out", says Mulroneys manager Larry Hedge. "we have a very small percentage of absentees at the practices and most of them are because of illness."

The Mulroney's "B" team has been operating for the past three years. It consists solely of nine year olds. "We get most of our players from the tyke all-stars," says Hedge, "but we also have three or four boys who are graduates of the house league."

Towers coach Dave Coates feels that the two-team system is proving to be highly successful. "Before we'd come up against teams like Oshawa and Kingston which consisted entirely of ten year olds and as a result our first year boys would take a physical beating."

Mulroneys have managed a 10-12-1 record this season, their first of regular OMHA competition.

"We've got a real hustling team," says coach Lee McBrien, "we don't have one real standout so we have to get a full effort from everyone."

Among the top performers so far have been forwards Wayne Deighton, Mark Crawford and Billy Rowe. Kevin Meagher is one of the most improved players on the team while Bob Hedge has seen action at forward, defence and even one game in goal.

The Towers Novice A's, hoping to defend the zone four championship which they won last season have recorded a 17-2-2 mark for the year and are undefeated in regular season games.

"I didn't think that we'd do nearly as well as we have after losing so many of our top boys from last year," noted coach Dave Coates. "We do not have the terrific skaters that we did have, so we are relying heavily on good positional play."

Coates lists his defensive unit of Nelson Frederick, Bruce McKinney, Gary Frederick and Pat Willman as the strong point of the team. "The defence and our goalies have carried us through a lot of low scoring games and now our forwards are starting to click," he says.

One of the top individual performers is Gary Frederick, while Nelson Frederick (no relation) has shown the most improvement. Goaltending duties have been split evenly between Drew Stotesbury and Brian Cook.

"I get the greatest satisfaction from coaching this age group because you can take an individual or team that knows virtually nothing about hockey, teach them the fundamentals and have the satisfaction of watching some of them develop into fine hockey players later on," says the Towers coach.

Fairways Can Help Cause After Boost from Crushmen

Oshawa Crushmen gave the Belleville Fairways a big boost last night by knocking off Cobourg in an Eastern Ontario Junior B contest.

The Fairways could help their own cause tonight with a victory in Kingston against the third place Frontenacs, who lead Belleville by eight points, but have played three more games.

A welcome addition to the Fairway lineup would be centre Brian O'Coin who missed Sunday's win over Trenton. The Fairway's third leading scorer is hoped to be available for tonight's crucial contest.

Another key figure in the Belleville game plan will be Dave Ferguson. The Picton native has been shifted from forward to defence due to the absence of Rick Holmes, whose work commitments have taken him out of town. Ferguson may see action at both positions tonight.

DAVE FERGUSON

"He's playing his best hockey of the year and he can handle the extra duty," said coach Floyd Crawford of his utility man.

Expected to miss the contest will be centre Rick Meagher, on loan from the juvenile all-stars for the last two games. Meagher can play only one more game if he hopes to retain his juvenile eligibility.

Kingston may be without the services of high scoring centre Dave Johnston, injured in a weekend contest with the Peterborough Lions. Johnston is currently holding down eighth place in the league scoring statistics.

A bus will leave the Belleville Memorial Arena at 6 p.m. tonight.

Rocks In Their Hands

Four members of the Quinte Curling Club showed that sometimes it does pay to "throw stones" by winning their division of the British Consols provincial playdowns.

The foursome consisting of skip Dave Brown, vice-skip Nev Burroughs, second Bill Henderson and lead Glen Watson emerged as the winners of the Zone Three competition, at the Trenton Curling Club, Sunday.

Competing against the Belleville rink were those from Kingston to Port Hope, a territory which takes in 16 different curling clubs.

Brown's rink advances to the Provincial finals in Guelph, February 3-6 with the winners being eligible for the MacDonald Brier to be held in Quebec City.
